By the United Press

Belgrade (Friday), March 7. An official statement believed to herald imminent announcement of Yugoslavia's shift to the Axis was published throughout the nation today, assuring the people that the government is "correctly judging" their interests and security.

As part of its swing to the side of Germany, the government was understood to have intervened in an effort to break down Greece's stubborn stand in refusing to submit to a Nazi-dictated peace with Italy.

Within the next 48 hours, diplomats predicted, Yugoslavia will announce that she is entering into "closer collaboration" with Germany, thereby closing the last gap in the Axis "encirclement" of Greece and bringing the last Balkan neutral into the Italo-German camp.

Authorities Watchful

The statement to the people said: "In connection with various alarming rumors regarding the international position of Yugoslavia, the premier and vice premier have declared to the press that the state authorities are watchful and judging correctly the high national interests of the state, namely the independence of the country and the unity of the state."

Yugoslavia's shift to the Axis was understood to have been discussed at a four-hour conference at the White Palace in Belgrade among Prince Regent Paul, Premier Drag-

Committee Will Investigate Accidents Since CAA Transfer

By James D. Secrest

A broad investigation of commercial airline crashes since the reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Authority was voted yesterday by the House, which on February 27 lost one of its members, Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, in an accident near Atlanta.

Adopting a resolution sponsored by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, the House authorized the Speaker to appoint a committee of five members to conduct the inquiry. Nichols is expected to be named chairman.

Several members, who spoke in behalf of the Nichols bill, urged that the House create a permanent committee on aviation. Legislation dealing with air transportation is now handled by the Interstate and

After listening all day yesterday to arguments, pro and con, on motions by the defense for directed verdicts in favor of all 24 defendants, Justice Proctor reserved his decision until 10 a. m. today, when the conspiracy trial is resumed in District Court.

Yesterday's session bristled from start to finish, having its climax late in the afternoon when Justice Proctor sternly reprimanded the defendant physicians for an outburst

Record D.C. Crowd Sees Conn Stop Hassett in Fifth

Washington's attendance record for an indoor athletic event of any kind was broken last night as a crowd of 8,000 jammed Uline's Ice Arena to see Billy Conn knock out Danny Hassett in 31 secopds of the fifth of a scheduled 15-round fight. Three thousand were turned away.

Conn, the light heavyweight champion from Pittsburgh, fights Joe Louis for the heavyweight crown in June. His victory came after a slow exhibition that was staged as a "test case" of Washington's reaction to top-flight boxing shows.

Mike Jacobs, "czar" of New York boxing, left convinced that the business can be put on a paying basis in the Capital and announced he would bring Joe Louis here this summer and other "big name" fighters in the near future. The paid attendance at last night's fight was $11,606 net.

British Describe Daring Foray On Norway's Lofoten Islands

Raid Seen Stiffening Norse Resistance To Nazi Invaders

By Carey Longmire
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, March 6.—In a revelation of a daring sea raid which it was predicted would prove a tremendous stiffener of Norwegian resistance to their Nazi conquerors, the British admiralty announced today that ten German vessels and one Norwegian ship under German control, were sunk in Tuesday's naval attack on the German-held Lofoten Islands off Narvik, Norway, high in the Arctic Circle.

It was the first detailed news of the raid, first announced Tuesday by the Germans. The admiralty said the losses of enemy shipping totaled 18,000 tons.

No report of the size of the attacking fleet or landing forces was given, but small craft actually allowed British and Norwegian troops to take 215 Germans and 10 "Quisling" Norwegians as prisoners, and to take off more than 300 Norwegian patriots, and bring them to Britain, arriving tonight.

The attackers did not lose a man. Seven Germans were killed. Fish oil factories, making glycerine, vital to the Germans for high explosives, were destroyed.

Pillars of smoke swept as high as 6,500 feet into the air after the raid on the four principal ports on the island. The Germans were completely surprised.

The attackers arrived just before dawn. Boats hurriedly put landing parties ashore, and the cold was so great that spray froze as it fell on the boat rails. Ten minutes after their landing the combined British and Norwegian troops had seized the police headquarters, post

D. C. Housing Crisis Near, Experts Say

Citizens, at Mass Meeting, Move To Combat Rising Rent, Crowding

Washington, facing a 200,000 population increase as a result of the defense emergency, is in imminent danger of running into a housing crisis surpassing the dwelling space shortage of the last World War, a panel of experts warned last night.

Already, the experts told a gathering sponsored by 20 citizens' organizations, the housing situation in the metropolitan area has reached the point where some of the corollary dangers of inadequate housing are beginning to appear—high rents, overcrowding in rooming houses and the menace of disease epidemic.

The experts included Judge Nathan Cayton of Municipal Court; Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer; John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority; Mrs. Helen Dusy Hoffman, director of the Washington Housing Association, and Leon H. Keyserling, deputy administrator of the United States Housing Authority.

Overflow Crowd Attends

The meeting in the North Interior Department auditorium was attended by an overflow crowd of 500 persons. It was conducted by Sefton Darr, former president of the District Bar Association. Its purpose was to lay a background of facts on District housing as the basis for formation of a citizens' organization on housing at a second meeting two weeks hence.

A resolution presented by Elizabeth Ingram of the Buckingham Civic Association, to indorse Representative Randolph's bill to revive the World War rent commission and to freeze rents in the Washington area was tabled for action at the next meeting.

A summary of Washington housing facts developed by the panel in response to questions presented by organizations sponsoring the meeting and asked from the floor:

Vacancies in the Washington area available for occupancy are 3 per cent below normal and of total vacancies in the metropolitan area only 1.8 per cent are for rent.

Rents Boosted

Rent increases this far reported range from 50 cents to $5 a month and have fallen heaviest on low-income tenants.

Rooms formerly occupied by one person or two persons are now being rented to three, four and, in some cases, six persons, according to complaints received by the Washington Housing Association. Mrs. Hoffman declared that some rooming house tenants have discovered they have rented "beds, not rooms."

One real estate operator rents property from reputable agents through go-betweens and then partitions the building—usually an old house—into "apartments" in violation of building regulations.

It was clear from statements of disposition to indict Washington's panel members that there was no real estate business as a whole. It was pointed out that a very large per cent of new housing being built in the city and vicinity is being privately financed.

Carl Monsees of the Office of Defense Housing Coordinator, declared that the Federal Government is now employing in Washington at the rate of 2,000 new workers a month and that these workers absorb 1,300 dwelling units every 30

Brother Reports Rickenbacker's Condition Improves

In a "special message" to the friends of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, injured last week in the crash of an Eastern Air Lines plane near Atlanta, Ga., Albert Rickenbacker, his brother, reported to The Post yesterday that members of the family feel the condition of the World War ace is "very favorable."

Albert Rickenbacker telephoned the editor of The Post during a stopover at Washington Airport. He said Capt. Rickenbacker's hip was not fractured, as first believed, but dislocated. The hip was set late Wednesday, and Capt. Rickenbacker, his brother said, "came through the operation in good shape."

The report was based on advices of Atlanta physicians, who also were quoted in Associated Press dispatches last night as saying Rickenbacker is continuing to improve.

Barkley Orders Night Session To Speed Aid Bill; U.S. Requests Italy to Close Two Consulates

Hull Asks Reports On Naval, Military Attaches Traveling Outside Washington

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Italian curbs on the freedom of American diplomats and consuls in Italy brought stern reaction yesterday when the United States called on Italy to close two consulates here and impose restrictions on the movements of Italian officials in this country.

In a politely phrased note to Italian Ambassador Colonna, Secretary of State Hull:

Told him the United States wants Italy to close its consular offices at Newark, N. J., and Detroit.

Requested that all Italian government officials in the United States, except the diplomatic personnel at the Washington Embassy, confine their movements "to those areas in which they exercise the recognized duties of their respective offices."

Asked that the Embassy keep the State Department informed of the "movements outside of Washington" of the military and naval attaches of the Italian Embassy.

Viewed as Retaliation

Though the State Department did not call its action one of retaliation, it was nevertheless regarded in that light.

Whether the action foreshadowed similar steps against German diplomats and consuls, of whose activities the State Department has from time to time complained, was not officially stated.

As an added pinprick to the Italians, it was noted that Secretary Hull addressed Ambassador Colonna as the "Royal Italian Ambassador," instead of as the "imperial" envoy, as the one-time conquerors of Ethiopia and Albania term their diplomatic representatives.

A curt State Department announcement that preceded publication of the note to Colonna said that closing of the Newark and Detroit offices had been requested because "for reasons of national policy it has been decided that foreign consulates in certain areas should be closed."

Step Unprecedented

The State Department's unprecedented step was believed to have been prompted by the fact that Italy on February 12 ordered the United States to close its consulates at Naples and Palermo, Sicily, and later issued instructions regarding travel by diplomats, making United States Ambassador William Phillips and his staff virtual "prisoners" in Rome.

The American retaliation was not so severe as the original Italian action in that it exempted the staff of the Washington Embassy from the travel restrictions. But, on the other hand, the request for information on the travels of Italy's military and naval attaches was interpreted as a hint that these officials might be "watched."

Giulio Pascucci, vice consul in charge of the Italian consulate at Newark since Saturday, told the Associated Press that he could not comment on the State Department order.

The Newark office is regarded as a strategic spot since New Jersey holds the greatest dollar value of

All buildings at the Home for Aged and Infirm, Blue Plains, D. C., were blacked out for two hours last night when a two-alarm fire in the power plant cut off the lighting system at 5 p. m.

The blaze, which started when rafters below the tin roof of the plant building became overheated, burned a sizable hole in the roof. Unofficial estimates put the damage at several hundred dollars.

Firemen from eight engine and three truck companies extinguished the fire after battling it about 30 minutes. Private R. A. Crider, of No. 7 Engine Company, suffered a cut hand. The fire was confined to the power plant, which is some distance removed from other Blue Plains buildings.

A Blunt Warning

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A night session of the Senate was called for tonight after a day of Administration negotiations and concessions failed either to speed lend-lease bill action or stem the flood of proposed modifying amendments.

A blunt warning that the President "must not be wrapped up in red tape" if he is to render effective aid to Great Britain in time was served on the Senate by Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Notice of the Senate's first night session in 16 days of aid-Britain debate was given by Senate Majority Leader Barkley after an Administration compromise on the controversial Ellender "troop ban" amendment failed to win through to a vote.

O'Mahoney Offers Substitute

A substitute for the compromise was immediately offered by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming and amended by Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut.

In unusually blunt and outspoken language, the Bureau of Marine Inspection yesterday reported that the grounding of the liner Manhattan on the Florida coast last January 12 was "almost entirely" the fault of her captain, and ordered his license suspended for eight months.

R. S. Field, director of the bureau, held that the Manhattan's skipper, Capt. George V. Richardson, was negligent in his duty. He also suspended for one month the master's license of Joseph H. Burger, the first officer, charged with "contributory fault."

Except for the "unexplainable lapse" by the master and contributory fault of the first officer, then on watch, Field had no other complaint, and complimented the captain and the rest of the officers and crew for successful and diligent action in disembarking the 200 cruise passengers and refloating the ship.

House Unit Acts to Probe Arms Activity

A proposal to establish a standing House committee "to investigate . . . all activities of the Federal Government in connection with the national defense" was approved yesterday by the powerful Rules Committee.

If the resolution is indorsed by the House itself, it is not improbable that the chairman of the investigating committee will be its sponsor, Representative Eugene Cox, Georgia Democrat and frequently a bitter critic of the Administration.

The Rules Committee, of which Representative Cox is the ranking Democratic member, favorably reported the resolution despite protests from several members of the Military Affairs Committee. Headed by their chairman, Representative May, of Kentucky, they asserted that they were already investigating defense contracts and that they were better qualified to probe the matter than a special committee.

A Senate inquiry also was approved a few days ago.

The Cox resolution provides that information obtained by the nine-man committee may be made available to members of Congress, but "shall not be made public."

Meanwhile, Capitol Hill was alive with other activity related to the national defense, including:

A unanimous report from the House Naval Affairs Committee favoring a bill to increase Naval personnel from 191,000 to 232,000 men in the fiscal year 1942, with authority to the President to raise it to 300,000 if necessary;

Approval by the Senate Appropriations Committee of a $1,533,567,102 supplemental grant for the Army and Navy;

Recommendation by the House Appropriations Committee of an additional expenditure of $193,913,093, principally for defense housing and defense-worker training programs.

Testimony by Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, at a closed session of the House Military Affairs Committee, and Indication by Chairman Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee that he did not favor a Navy request for authority to replace overage warships with any type or size of combat ship recommended by the President. Existing law requires that overage ships be replaced by vessels of the same type.

Asks Special Committee

At Rules Committee hearings on the Cox resolution to investigate the defense program, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahome, suggested that the inquiry might be conducted by a special committee as the military affairs group was "too close" to the War Department.

"Unhesitatingly and without compromise, if you have that opinion of me, I'll resign my seat in the House," Chairman May stormed. Another member of the Military Affairs Committee, Representative Andrews (Republican), of New York, commented that "the Rules Committee hasn't had as much to do with the defense program as some of its members would like." The Senate inquiry is going to be a "whitewash," he added.

The appropriations reported by the House committee included funds for 700 additional FBI agents to handle sabotage and draft evasion cases.

Other items were $10,510,000 to expedite installation of special protective devices for the Panama Canal and $9,583,200 for the Coast Guard, comprising $4,150,000 for construction and equipment of six new cutters, $1,330,000 for additional antimagnetic mine devices and other equipment to make Coast Guard vessels ready for immediate duty with the Navy in event of need and $950,000 for mine-sweeping gear.

NYA Defense Budget

To carry on the National Youth Administration's program of training youths for defense industry, the committee approved a budget estimate of $22,500,000.

Other items in the bill included $29,676,000 in cash and contract authorizations for 15 river and harbor improvement projects described by the committee as having "an important bearing" upon national defense.

To enable the State Department to retain in service career diplomats forced out of their posts abroad by Nazi conquests, the committee recommended that authority be granted for their retention on the department's pay roll in spite of their inability to serve at their posts.

Long said the language of the bill would make these career officers subject to call by the President for tasks for which they are qualified at pay of not more than $10,000 yearly.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, reporting approval of the $1,533,567,102 supplemental defense appropriations, recommended designation of a specific Federal agency charged with responsibility for locating new defense industries.

U. S. and Britain Agree on Buying Land for Bases

Secretary Hull informed Congress yesterday that the United States and Great Britain had agreed on procedure for compensating private owners of property taken over for United States defense bases.

Local colonial governments will try to reach agreements. Then the British will pay the stipulated compensation and be reimbursed by this country.

bill, puts teeth in the original Ellender amendment by denying the President funds for use of land or Naval forces outside the Western Hemisphere or United States territory in peace-time.

Leaders predicted they would defeat it by a larger margin than they claimed against the original Ellender plan. If adopted, Administration spokesmen said it would encourage aggressor nations and "deceive" the people of Japan into thinking the United States would not act promptly to protect its Far Eastern interests.

The O'Mahoney-Maloney substitute, less drastic, but still unacceptable to the Administration, would deny the President power to use land, Naval or air forces in delivery of defense articles to any place within combat areas established under the 1939 neutrality act.

Administration Senators meanwhile made two more concessions in an effort to slacken debate and sidetrack any of the three further modifying efforts.

Senator George offered to eliminate from the bill the word "transfer" as applied to war supplies, which he said concerned only title to goods, but which opponents charged might permit actual delivery or convoy of goods to Britain.

Bill managers effected a compromise on the Ellender amendment which the Louisiana Senator accepted and offered from the floor in lieu of his original plan.

Calls Language Meaningless

As modified, the Ellender amendment now reads:

"Nothing in this act shall be construed to change existing law relating to the use of the land and naval forces of the United States except in so far as such use relates to the manufacture, procurement and repair of defense articles, the communication of information and the other noncombatant purposes enumerated in this act."

O'Mahoney, a supporter of the bill, called this language "meaningless" and promptly offered his own substitute. He accepted a modification by Maloney, eliminating the "Western Hemisphere" restriction.

While bill managers were negotiating the compromise with Ellender, Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Senate Majority Leader Barkley held the floor, leading Clark to charge proponents of the bill with "filibuster."

Barkley, in announcing night sessions of the Senate beginning tonight, said he was accusing no one of filibuster but believed longer sessions were necessary to dispose of amendments and dispose of the bill. Previously Barkley had assembled the Senate an hour earlier. He intimated night sessions would run to about 10 o'clock with a recess for dinner.

"Every Minute Counts"

Earlier, George, who because of illness did not make a speech at the outset of debate, defended the bill in two separate appeals for action.

"Every hour counts; every minute counts," he declared. "The time has come to decide whether we want to give aid to England or whether we want to quibble."

He asked: "Why should we hesitate about delivery of supplies to Great Britain if that is what we intend to do?"

"If the purpose is to survey the whole field of Presidential powers and then negate them in this bill, then no man should stand on this floor and say he favors aid to Great Britain."

George said it was clear to him and he thought it was clear to everyone that the President did not intend to use convoys to deliver supplies, and would not use his constitutional powers over land and naval forces overseas in peacetime except for protection of American lives and property.

Fears Reaction Abroad

For the Senate to say that our armed forces must be restricted to the Western Hemisphere, George declared, would "allow our enemies to tell their people that we are ready to abandon freedom of the seas."

Referring to the three-power Axis agreement, proposing "to enforce their philosophy with the point of the sword," he said he used the word "enemy" advisedly.

He opposed any amendments "that will operate as red tape on freedom and flexibility of action."

George said the United States has such a vital stake in Britain's survival that if England goes down the Monroe Doctrine would become a dead letter—that American living standards and "free way of life" could not be maintained.

"Already 11 sovereign nations have gone down before the aggressors," he said.

"Three nations, armed, propose to carry their doctrine at the point of the sword wherever they can carry it. Failure to recognize the need for action is to invite our own self-execution.

"There is a desperate man in Europe who moves in the springtime. Don't you know what it means? . . . Britain stands in the path of these aggressors. . . . It would be a fatal mistake not to recognize the character of this aggression . . . If you open your eyes you will face it now."

George said "we might as well redraft the Monroe Doctrine" if Britain falls, because Nazism would come to North and South America.

Pleading for rejection of restrictive amendments, Administration Senators argued that passage of the bill with these in it was like supplying rifles without bullets.

Substitute Unacceptable

Leading the fight on the Administration compromise, Senator O'Mahoney proposed to put a Western Hemisphere limitation on delivery of war materials. Maloney sought to prohibit use of American naval vessels to convoy goods through combat zones, but eliminated the Western Hemisphere limitation. At Maloney's suggestion, O'Mahoney revised his own to remove the hemisphere limit.

The combined O'Mahoney-Maloney substitute, unacceptable to the bill managers, provides:

"Without the consent of the Congress, no defense article of which the President shall make disposition under section 3 of this act shall hereafter be delivered by the land, naval or air forces of the United States, and no part of such forces shall be used in connection with outside of any combat area defined any delivery of such defense articles unless delivery takes place as such in any proclamation of the President issued pursuant to section 3 of the Neutrality Act of 1939."

The Administration compromise, declaring nothing in the bill changes existing laws on land and naval forces, was accepted by Ellender following a series of conferences with bill managers. O'Mahoney and Maloney, like Ellender, supporters of the bill, declared it unacceptable and combined their plans to beat it. Clark, an opposition leader, superimposed on the amendment pyramid his own proposed tightening of the Ellender amendment. The Senate must "thus dispose of the Clark amendment before it can vote on the O'Mahoney-Maloney substitute. Only if all of these are defeated will the Ellender compromise reach a vote.

O'Mahoney assailed the compromise as "a surrender of the policy that our boys shall not be sent into the war." He said the American people were entitled to a "frank expression by Congress" on that point.

defense contracts in the Nation.

Giacomo Profili, Italy's vice consul at Detroit since 1938, said he knew of no reason for the State Department's action and also declined comment.

49 Consulates Remain Open

Despite closing of these two offices, Italy will have 49 others throughout the United States and its possessions, staffed by about 60 consular officials.

The new restrictions on movements of Italian agents will affect these 60 officials, limiting some of them to the distance of a street-car ride, if the State Department note is strictly enforced.

Some consuls have jurisdiction over several States, while others have sway over only one city.

Profili's jurisdiction, for example, covered all of Michigan, while Pascucci's covered the New Jersey counties of Essex, Hudson, Morris, Union and Warren.

The American request that military and naval attaches keep the United States informed of their movements would apply to Col. Giuseppe Lucio Gaeta, listed as Italian air attache; Admiral Albert Lais listed as naval attache, and Brig. Gen. Adolfo Infante, listed as military attache.

The American note to Italy did not mention propaganda activities of Italian consular and diplomatic officials, but it was said unofficially that these may have figured in the decision to restrict their movements.

Last June Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine of New York distributed to his force a "confidential" 25-page memorandum on Fascist activities in the United States. The memorandum found evidence that Italian consul generals, under orders from Premier Mussolini, were seeking to promote fascism in the United States by propaganda in schools, newspapers, magazines and through radio.

Protested to Hull

The following day the Italian Ambassador protested to Secretary Hull against an alleged campaign to arouse anti-Italian feeling in the United States. He said Italian consular officials have stuck to their official functions.

The sequel was that Secretary Hull said the Government was investigating reports of improper actions by Italian consular agencies. That results, if any, were produced by this investigation was never disclosed.

Germany has never imposed restrictions on American diplomats nor requested closing of any American consulates in Germany. However, envoys of all foreign nations, including the United States, have been asked to leave the German-occupied area that includes Norway, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg. Consulates were allowed to remain.

Both diplomatic and consular staffs were required to leave the German and Russian occupied parts of Poland and the three Baltic states absorbed by Russia last summer.

In his note, Secretary Hull requested that if the Newark and Detroit officials remained in this country, the State Department should be kept informed of their whereabouts.

Italian authorities in Rome, according to the Associated Press, said the order to close the two offices was "a matter which concerned the American Government solely and not the Italian government."

Snow to Make Comeback Today, Says Forecaster

Rubbers, boots, galoshes and skid chains will be in order today if the weatherman's prediction, made last night, comes true.

The forecast was for snow, possibly mixed with rain, today with increasing notheast or east winds, becoming fresh northeast at night and bringing colder weather.

But even the clouds will have a silver lining, the weatherman indicated when he said the snow will probably end by noon Saturday.

The low of 30 predicted for early today, however, was several notches above yesterday's minimum of 25 at 5:15 a. m. The mercury reached a peak of 44 degrees at 2:10 p. m.

U. S. Defense Housing Frills Hold Up Bill

Congressmen Fear Homes for Workers May Be Too Elaborate

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Electric iceboxes and other such gadgets of the mechanical era don't appeal to the House Rules Committee, at least when it comes to the Government providing them in housing for workers in national defense industries.

Alarmed at the prospect that 84,400 houses authorized in a pending bill may be too elaborate, the committee was reported yesterday to have informally decided to hold up the bill until restrictions could be agreed upon.

The measure, providing an additional $150,000,000 for "defense housing," was favorably reported last week by the Buildings and Grounds Committee, after brief hearings. When the bill came up to the Rules Committee, however, that group unexpectedly balked.

In fairly extensive hearings, the committee heard Housing Coordinator Charles Palmer and Federal Works Administrator John Carmody. But it was reported yesterday, the committee concluded that it would not act on the Administration-sponsored bill until potential "frills" could be legislatively removed from the projected developments.

It is understood that the committee has informally determined to tie up the bill until its sponsor, Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, agrees to an amendment that would prevent the houses from being built with refrigerators, electric ranges and similiar equipment installed at Government expense.

Will Take Up Bill

Representative Lanham, however, said late yesterday that he had not been apprised of such a plan, and added that he was informed the Rules Committee would take up his bill again today.

The measure supplements an act passed last October, providing $150,000,000 for defense housing. The pending measure provides for approximately 44,900 family dwelling units for workers in defense industries, and 9,500 units for families of enlisted men at Army and Navy bases.

Meanwhile, the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee heard Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York City testify in favor of another pending measure, which would provide $150,000,000 for community facilities necessitated by growing defense industries in various cities, such as new streets, sewage plants and schools.

Formula Outlined

Mayor LaGuardia, appearing as head of the Council of Mayors, told the committee that the $150,000,000 would "give us a start," and that the money would be lent on the "PWA formula."

Recalling the fate of the World War debt, however, the mayor cautioned the committee not to expect "too much cash back from these communities all of a sudden."

Truces Halt Defense Peril On Labor Front

By the Associated Press

An agreement by the management and employes of the Consumers Power Co. to arbitrate their dispute removed yesterday the threat of a power shutdown at many Michigan plants working around the clock on national defense orders.

Truces and agreements elsewhere also eased the way for work continuance.

A special mediation board reported to President Roosevelt that an agreement had averted a strike on the Rutland Railroad in Vermont. Employes had voted to strike because of a proposed wage cut.

At Edgewater, N. J., C. I. O. workers at the plant of the Aluminum Co. of America, indicated they would await a union-management conference and a visit from a Federal conciliator before taking definite action on a strike move.

A. L. F. iron workers halted walkout plans at the Ingalls Iron Works, Birmingham, Ala., to await a visit from a Defense Commission representative. The firm holds $100,000,000 worth of defense orders.

The Consumers Power Co. and the A. F. L.'s Brotherhood of Electrical Workers agreed that if a settlement was not reached by 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) today—(an original strike deadline)—they would submit their differences to a special board with power to settle them.

The workers, serving 2,000,000 customers, seek wage increases and a preferential shop.

Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner had said he would "use the full power" of his office "to see to it that the public service is not disrupted."

In Washington, Dr. John R. Steelman, chief of the United States Conciliation Service, called a 24-hour recess in negotiations for settlement of the International Harvester Co. strike. Company and union conferees apparently were deadlocked.

The C. I. O.'s Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee has called strikes in International Harvester Co. plants at Chicago, Rock Falls, Ill., and Richmond, Ind. The union seeks wage increases and recognation as bargaining agent at two of the four plants.

Work still was held up at the Consolidated Steel Corporation plant, Orange, Tex., where a $100,000,000 building project had been moving ahead, and at Wright Field, Ohio, where the Army is engaged in $3,900,00 of construction work.

Conciliator to Enter Medical Center Strike

Labor Department conciliator, Frank Sheehan, said last night he would confer at 10 a. m. tomorrow with representatives of the Washington Building Trades Council (A. F. of L.) and officials of Skinker & Garrett and Sam Merando construction firms in an effort to settle a labor dispute that has tied up work on new barracks at the Army Medical Center.

Efforts to arrive at a settlement of the strike, a protest of Skinker & Garrett workers at the hiring on the same project of nonunion employes of the Merando company, failed yesterday.

Pickets filed back and forth outside the Medical Center property, Georgia Avenue and Butternut Street, as Skinker & Garrett bricklayers worked only long enough to use up already prepared mortar.

Coal and Steel Strike Feared

have been held by S. W. O. C. officials with the steel corporation executives in the last five weeks. Since, according to report, these parleys have been negative, the the union officials will be called upon to discuss what further action, if any, should be taken.

Next Tuesday, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, on behalf of 600,000 miners, will serve a list of union demands on bituminous coal operators in New York to replace the provisions of the wage contract expiring at the end of this month.

The steel labor dispute involves more than 150,000 employes of the United States Steel Corporation employed not only in the steel and fabricating plants, but also on docks, at coal mines and on the corporation's large fleet of ships.

The two labor situations are viewed with concern by the Administration, not only because of the possible danger to the defense program, but also because of the economic implications in the wage movements.

The wage conferences on the steel union's demands have, until now, been unofficial. The contract states that ten days' notice must be given by either side for a conference to change the terms of the agreement. Conferences must begin within ten days and the two sides then have another ten days in which to reach an agreement. If no agreement is arrived at either side is permitted to act as if the agreement were ended.

The steel workers conference in Pittsburgh today will consider whether or not to turn another chapter in the negotiations with "big steel" and begin "on the record" official wage parleys. If this is done and the statement with the corporation continues the steel contract would be terminated exactly as the same time as the bituminous coal agreement. The union would then be free to strike for its demands if it wished to do so.

This subject undoubtedly was discussed at length by the President and Murray with whom he conferred for two and a half hours Wednesday.

The two labor disputes have a bearing on the movement within the office of production management urging the creation by executive order of a national defense labor mediation board to handle such matters. In the last twenty years wage controversies in the soft coal fields have, in nearly every case been passed on to the President. The existence of a labor mediation board would enable the President to shift this responsibility to a body set up purposely for consideration of such problems.

Agencies Act On Defense Influx Problem

The problem threatening Washington and other parts of the country by influx of national defense workers and gravitation of civilians to Army training centers was considered here yesterday at a meeting of Federal health, welfare and recreation officials at the Hamilton Hotel.

At the same time, Robert E. Bondy, District welfare director, disclosed that a committee on welfare and consumers interest headed by him as an aajunct of the District Defense Council, is considering setting up a permanent staff in a central headquarters to help soldiers have a good time in the city without lowering moral standards for themselves or the community.

The importance of providing facilities for the comfort and convenience of relatives and friends who visit soldiers was outlined by Charles P. Taft, assistant defense coordinator. Taft addressed the meeting at the Hamilton attended by representatives from Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia and the District.

G. A. Parker, regional defense coordinator, said it was hoped that private enterprise would establish the proper kind of sleeping quarters, restaurants and recreation facilities in the vicinity of camps.

Mark McCloskey, director of recreation for the Federal Security Agency, was another speaker.

Bondy's committee, meanwhile, designated Ootto Lund, executive secretary of the District Chapter of the Red Cross, as liaison officer through whom are to be cleared all requests for entertainment at Army camps near the District. Organizations wishing to put on recreation programs at the camps likewise are to get in touch with Lund.

Bondy said consideration is being given to erection of information booths in central parts of the city for use of soldiers. Paul Edwards, District WPA head and chairman of the information subcommittee of Bondy's committee, is preparing to use PA assistance in setting up an organization to answer inquiries on sightseeing facilities, lodgings, and the availability of entertainment.

Defense Dancers Will Face Call to Duty Tomorrow

Enlistment and active duty will be practically simultaneously for the first hundred girls who register tomorrow for the "dance draft" to provide partners for national defenders in this area.

The girls will immediately take part in a tea dance tomorrow at 3 p. m. with infantrymen at Arlington Cantonment. Registration is limited to women in the Federal and District services and will be at 1:30 p. m. at the District Building.

A. C. Edwards, chairman of the subcommittee on Government Employes Service, who is in charge, said that women registering will give information including name, age, telephone number, and dancing ability while interviewers note "appearance" and "personality." At future dances the girls will be called according to the serial number of their cards which will have been sorted according to the above information.

Third of Fort Meade Soldiers Enroll for School Courses

By Marshall Andrews
A Staff Correspondent

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 6.—Eagerness for special vocational knowledge that amazed headquarters drove more than one-third of the Twenty-ninth Division to enroll in optional classes to be taught by civilians, it was revealed at headquarters today.

Out of more than 9,000 former National Guardsmen from the District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania mobilized here, 3,370 signed up for various preferred courses.

The largest number, 1,352, enrolled in the welding course, indicating, officers guessed, that many of the men plan to fit themselves for skilled jobs in shipyards and industrial plants when they complete their year of Federal training.

Other courses drew these enrollments: General clerical work, 242; stenography and typing, 400; tool and die making, 329; specialist in carburetion, 139; ignition and radio, 476; Spanish, 275; teacher training, general, 119; vocational chemistry, 18.

Classes to Start Soon

The classes, to be held twice a week in the evenings, will start at an early date and were ordered by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander, on arrangement with the United States office of education. The schools will be directed by John J. Seidel, vocational director of the State of Maryland, and A. S. Cook, executive officer of the State bureau.

Gas masks for training were issued today to 3,749 soldiers of the division. The entire organization will be supplied eventually. It is planned to accustom the men to their use in the field, and they will be required to wear them at drill and rifle practice.

While 432 enlisted men and 25 officers of the division—5 per cent of its present strength—were in the hospital today, most of them were there for precautionary observation and treatment for colds.

Company K, of the 176th Infantry, from Norfolk, Va., was isolated after a suspected case of spinal meningitis was found. The tentative diagnosis had not yet been confirmed by laboratory tests.

At the last sick report for the entire post, including regulars and selectees—14,537 officers and men—there were 602 men in the hospital or confined to quarters, 381 of them for colds. There were six cases of pneumonia, but not a single case of influenza was reported.

General Health Good

The general health of the camp was regarded by medical officers as quite satisfactory. They pointed out that men with mild respiratory disorders, who formerly would have been treated and sent back to their barracks were ordered to the hospitals these days, so that no chances would be taken.

An athletic carnival will be held in the division area Saturday and Sunday, under the direction of Lieut. George Adams, of Rockville, Md., newly appointed division athletic officer. Track and field events will be featured, and band concerts will be held both days. Visitors will be welcome.

Washington's 121st Engineers carried out a tactical exercise today by laying a 72-foot bridge across the Patuxent River in about 10 minutes. Companies A and F did the job.

Intruder Steals $4,600 in Jewelry From D. C. Home

Theft of $4,600 worth of jewelry from her home yesterday afternoon was reported to police by Mrs. Hazel T. Cowling, of 2314 Ashmead Place Northwest.

Mrs. Cowling said the jewelry, hidden in a closet, was stolen between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., while there was no one home. The thief entered through a first floor window.

Listed among the missing jewelry were a platinum bar inset with 16 diamonds, a wedding ring and two others, and a diamond bracelet.

Bottlenecks Can Be Curbed, Baruch Says

By the United Press

Boston, March 6.—Bottlenecks in national defense production can be very nearly eliminated by proper timing, Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board under President Wilson, said today in the Harvard Business Review.

"Proper timing is one essential in the administration of a priorities system," Baruch said, and "another . . . is price control."

In an article entitled "Priorities: The Synchronizing Force," he said the proper timing of production can ease the strain on business and price control would help preserve civilian morale by preventing necessities from going only to "those with the longest pocketbook."

The use of "priorities and price control will insure that the Nation not only wins the war but survives it economically, with a low price structure and an industrial system dislocated to a minimum degree, well prepared for postwar conditions in the international markets," Baruch said.

To illustrate the necessity of timing in a priorities system he gave this example: "An airplane ready for fighting is made up of a number of component parts . . . It is useless to accelerate the production of these parts unless all are expedited in the same fashion so that all are ready for assembly at one time.

"The manufacture of all parts must be synchronized as well as all the industrial processes beginning with the extraction of the raw material."

Urges Money Control

Baruch, who was responsible for industrial mobilization during the World War, advocated "strict control of the supply of money . . . with an eye to preventing an inflation . . . which might put pressure on the price structure and make the task of administering prices and priorities more difficult."

Shortage of materials caused by priority would require price control in which "all rates will be free to fall below a fixed level and certain prices may be adjusted upwards . . . to correct inequalities," Baruch said.

"There is no need for such a thoroughgoing plan until a general rise in the price level is threatening. Before that time it will be sufficient to control the prices of individual commodities affected by scarcity which causes them to be bid up above equitable cost relationships.

To be more efficient, he said, the priorities administration must be ready to envisage the use of substitutes, conservation, inventions and commandeering.

'Naval Battle' Believed Thunder

Santiago, Chile, March 6 (AP).—Admiral Julio Allard, commander of the Chilean navy, declared tonight that reports of a naval battle at the Atlantic entrance to the Straits of Magellan appeared to be without foundation and that the roar of a thunderstorm probably was mistaken for cannon fire.

Legion Chief Back, Thinks British Can Win

New York, March 6 (AP).—Milo J. Warner, national commander of the American Legion, and three other legionnaires today returned from England, where they made a special study of the Nation's civilian defense.

"We visited a number of cities and towns in and about London and made a most satisfactory tour that included Army, Navy, Royal Air Force, coastal and defense units," he said on alighting from the Atlantic clipper.

"The British feel and I can't help but join them in the belief that, with our help, they'll win out," Warner said.

The mission, he said, will report to the Legion's national executive committee meeting in Indianapolis next week, when the Legion "will take definite action which we feel will be helpful toward unifying thought and action in the United States and to carry out the resolution of our national convention at Boston last September, which called for all practical aid to Britain."

Warner was accompanied by Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, U. S. A., retired; Franklin D'Olier, president of the Prudential Insurance Co., who was first national commander, and Joseph Deutschle, of Columbus, Ohio, Warner's aide.

Among the 23 passengers was 2-month-old Maria Teresa Hapsburg-Bourbon Hopfinger, youngest transatlantic passenger yet carried by Pan American Airways. With the baby were her parents, the Archduchess of Hapsburg-Bourbon, a cousin of the late King Alfonso of Spain, and her Polish husband, Dr. Joseph Hopfinger. They were en route to Palm Beach, Fla., to visit relatives.

Also aboard was Lucien Leeds, who described himself as a banker affiliated with Myers & Co., of London. He said he was here "to get dollars for England." With him was his daughter, Lucienne, 21, who said conditions in some parts of England were "terrible."

Judge Sears to Hear Bridges Case

Attorney General Jackson yesterday appointed Judge Charles B. Sears, who recently retired from the New York State Court of Appeals, to preside at the deportation hearing for Harry R. Bridges, Australian-born West Coast C. I. O. leader, beginning at San Francisco March 31.

Sears, a Republican, makes his home at Buffalo, N. Y. He served on the New York Supreme Court bench for 23 years and was appointed to the Appeals Court last year.

The proceeding against Bridges, based on the allegation that he was a member of an organization advocating overthrow of the Government by force or violence, was ordered February 12 as the basis of evidence developed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and in consideration of new provisions for deportation in the Alien Registration Act.

Weygand Has 2-Hour Parley With Petain

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, March 6.—Imperial questions were undoubtedly uppermost in the conferences Gen. Maxime Weygand had today with Marshal Petain and Gen. Charles Huntziger, the war minister, and which will be continued with other government leaders.

Weygand arrived this afternoon and was closeted for two hours with the marshal.

Afterward it was declared that he made a report on the high mission entrusted to him in which he detailed the military and political situation in Algeria, Tunisia and Morocco, and in French West Africa, to which he made trips on two occasions.

The purport of Gen. Weygand's report will be communicated tomorrow to the council of ministers, which will have much to consider regarding the empire.

First, there is the accord over French Indo-China, which, despite the claim of an announcement made in Tokyo, has not been the subject of any communication here. It is not thought possible that a settlement could have been reached without some cessions of territory.

Despite the determination of the government to defend every inch of the empire bit by bit, even in the most remote and defenseless sections of it, France is being despoiled of her colonies.

There is less concern here over reports published in Paris that the situation has become serious for France in Syria. These reports, emanating from undisclosed sources in Beirut, charge that efforts have been made to stir up trouble among the Syrian tribesmen and that there have been troop concentrations on the Palestine frontier.

Gen. Weygand, who organized the army and defenses as commander there during the war before his recall to France, will be able to give an authoritative opinion on the situation there.

His West African report, too, will be of considerable interst, for as yet there is no fear here for the state of things in Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia.

There was intense secrecy here regarding Gen. Weygand's visit, the precoutions going even to the extent of an unfounded announcement of his arrival herre. This was done by the official agency here just before midnight last night, but no confirmation was obtainable.

Since the death of Jean Chiappe, shot down in an airplane over the Mediterranean while en route to his post as high commissioner in Syria, all official trips cause anxiety. As a matter of fact, the general did not arrive until 4 this afternoon, coming on the transport airplane Ville de Paris.

Dressed in civilian clothes and accompanied by two staff officers, also in civilian clothes, he was greeted by Gen. Auguste Marie Laure, general secretary, on behalf of Marshal Petain. Gen. Weygand was tanned by his sojourn in Africa and had the spirited step of a younger man.

Count Potocki Pays $10 Fine For Speeding

Like an ordinary citizen, Count Jerzy Potocki, former Polish Ambassador, walked into Traffic Court yesterday, pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding and was fined $10.

The former envoy appeared at court alone during the regular radio broadcast, and his case was called immediately. When the accusation —"exceeding 30 miles on Sixteenth Street Northwest"—was read, Count Potocki said he was guilty.

"Do you claim diplomatic immunity, sir?" Judge Hobart Newman asked.

"No, sir," the count replied.

Policeman W. L. Sherer, Sixth Precinct, testified he paced the Ambassador's automobile from Oglethorpe to Longfellow Streets Northwest Wednesday at 45 miles an hour.

Count Potocki's only defense was that he "thought the speed too high." "I only touched that speed in spots," he declared.

Without comment, Judge Newman imposed a fine of $10, which was subtracted from $25 collateral. Count Potocki was returned $15.

isha Cvetkovitch, and Foreign Minister Alexander Cincar-Markovitch. Dr. A. Machek, leader of the government opposition, and the Slovene minister without portfolio, Franc Kulovec, also attended the conference.

The Greek mediation effort was reported to have been launched by Prince Paul as a result of a conference with the German and Italian foreign ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, held secretly two days ago at his country estate.

Prince Paul, it was said, took the view that the efforts of his government to end the Italo-Greek war offered the best chance of averting Yugoslavia's involvement in war.

A Yugoslav government spokesman and the British legation both denied reports that a British ultimatum had been served on Yugoslavia, warning her against lining up with the Axis. The British legation called the rumors "utter nonsense."

The general impression was that Yugoslvaia would not formally join the tripower alliance as Bulgaria has, at least not for the present, but that a "new formula" for closer collaboration with the Axis had been found.

Closer economic and cultural ties with Germany may be the solution, it was said.

Hitler was reported to be willing to permit Yugoslavia to remain out of the Axis alliance for the time being because Yugoslav public opinion evidently is opposed to such a move. Any movement of foreign troops across Yugoslavia would be likely to arouse Serbian nationalist protests, it was pointed out.

Therefore, a "middle way" probably will be found in some respects to the relations existing between Germany and neutral Sweden whereby German war materials would be permitted transit across Yugoslavia.

(Budapest heard that Yugoslavia would be asked to allow German troops to move through the Vardar valley toward Greece to ease the traffic jam in Bulgaria. Budapest reports also said that Germany was believed to be seeking the use of southern Yugoslav air bases since Bulgarian air facilities are limited and cannot quickly be enlarged to the point needed for a major Near Eastern campaign.

(The only thing that can prevent Yugoslavia from casting her lot with the Axis, it was said in Budapest, would be a last-minute Russian guarantee for the Balkans but there was no indication that such a Soviet guarantee would be forthcoming.)

Yugoslavia's decision to enter "closer collaboration" with the Axis was reported as Sir Ronald Campbell, British minister to Belgrade, sought to confer with Yugoslav leaders in a last-minute effort to keep the nation out of the Axis camp.

British Write Off Yugoslavia

London (Friday), March 7 (U.P.)—Great Britain early today appeared to have written off Yugoslavia as lost to the Axis and diplomatic quarters admitted that the position of encircled Greece has become "extremely precarious."

Belgrade, March 6.—An interrupted telephone report from Sofia today disclosed that the German general staff, headed by Field Marshal Gen. Sigmund List, called upon the Bulgarian Premier, Bogdan Philoff, at the foreign office and made a visit to the Bulgarian war office in moves interpreted as a tightening of the Bulgarian-German political and military liaison preparatory to action against Greece.

The same report, repeatedly interrupted by the German censors, carried details of continued mass troop movements through Sofia and around Sofia upon a new road being durably constructed, and of bulwarks to the west of the capital.

A complete blackout is ordered although the German authorities express private convictions that there will be no Royal Air Force bombing until the departure of the British minister and his staff late this week.

Censorship is so severe that most correspondents were departing today or already had departed. It required 11 telephone communications, accompanied by artificial sound machines creating noise on the wire, to transmit this brief message to Belgrade.

The condition of the Bulgarian foreign minister, Ivan Popoff, is reported worse and Sofia circles understand that Philoff has now assumed all the duties of the foreign minister.

One Sofia correspondent, cut off immediately by the censors, reported that "A German attack upon Greece . . ."

Axis press dispatches reported Greek troops massing on the Bulgarian frontier.

Seville, Spain, March 6 (A.P.)—Friends of former King Carol II of Rumania said tonight he and Mme. Magda Lupescu possibly would fly from their Lisbon refuge to the United States soon.

Previously, Carol had been represented as seeking permission to enter the United States. (In Bucharest, too, friends of the former monarch said he and Lupescu planned to go to America).

From Lisbon, Carol telephoned proprietors of his hotel here to assure them that the bill he left when he fled to Portugal would be paid.

Beware of Nazi Amity, Press Advises Turks

By G. E. R. Gedye

Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, March 6.—Urgent warnings not to believe any of Germany's assurances of good-will to Turkey and to beware of fifth columnists, spies and propagandists are given by Hussein Cahd Yalchin in today's Yeni Sabah.

Yalchin, whom the German press angrily terms "the Turkish Churchill," calls on every man, woman and child to be prepared to fulfill the most sacred duty at this grave hour.

Now, says Yalchin, that Germany has become Turkey's neighbor, the press assures Turkey of her good-will.

"That is an indication that we must redouble our vigilance," he writes. Such assurances, he adds, have always preceded Reichsfuehrer Hitler's attacks on countries he covets.

The Turkish government and diplomacy can be trusted to have taken already the necessary military and diplomatic steps to face the danger implied by friendly gestures from Germany, he continued. "But that alone is not enough; every Turk, old or young, man or woman, must stand vigilantly on guard. Soon the whole force of Nazi espionage and propaganda, of which we have already felt traces, will begin working here and spreading false rumors daily. Let every one be prepared to resist."

Reply Drafted

It is learned that a brief reply has been drafted from President Ismet Inonu to Hitler, which will be presented by the Turkish ambassador in Berlin. As the Fuehrer's message was written in German the President's reply will be written in Turkish.

It is learned that the plane bringing the German courier with Hitler's letter crossed the Turkish line in Thrace before the necessary permits had reached the Turkish outpost. It was fired on by the Turks, and on arrival in Ankara there were several bullet marks visible in the fuselage of the plane.

Various fresh precautions of a defensive character are being taken in Istanbul and arrangements made for moving several schools, including military schools, to the interior of the country. The Bulgarians are causing so many difficulties at the frontier, including holding up trains for six hours, that the usual regular Balkan trains from Turkey are now avoiding Bulgaria and going via Greece and Yugoslavia.

Axis Offer Reported Rejected

Ankara (Friday), March 7 (U.P.)—Turkey will reject within the next three or four days an invitation from Adolf Hitler that a high Turkish statesman be sent to Germany to discuss "closer cooperation" with the Axis, authoritative Turkish sources said last night.

1 in 100,000 Odds Prove Fatal To 'Chute Trooper

Columbus, Ga., March 6 (A.P.)—The Army lost its first parachute trooper at Fort Benning today when Sergt. Floyd S. Beard, 28, of Company C, 501st Parachute Battalion, fell to his death.

His chute failed to open as he leaped from 750 feet in what was to have been a mass jump of 36 men as a part of the training course. The regular jumping parachute which opens automatically when a jumper leaves a plane failed to billow and Beard reportedly pulled the rip cord on his emergency parachute too late.

In Washington the death was described by Beard's company commander as "the sort of thing that might happen once in 100,000 times."

Capt. William P. Yarborough expressed belief Beard's parachute was tangled by the blast of air from the plane from which he leaped. He said he believed it was "physcially impossible for the parachute to fail to open under usual circumstances in a leap from 750 feet.

8 Missing Draft Registrants Found

The Federal Bureau of Investigation agents have located 8 of 12 Alexandria Selective Service registrants who failed to reply to questionnaires mailed out by the local board several weeks ago, and have attributed failure to comply with the law to "ignorance," Clerk Addison Slaymaker disclosed yesterday.

Slaymaker said the investigation disclosed that the eight registrants merely had neglected to inform the board of changes in their addresses, and there appeared to be no willful evasion of the law. State Selective Service officials said they would not prosecute the selectees, but indicated they would effect a "sterner attitude" in future cases.

office and telegraph office.

The invaders immediately attacked the fish oil plants and rescued the British manager of one factory. Blasts were heard as the Britons fired oil storage tanks. The inhabitants welcomed the invaders with open arms.

Most of the prisoners came from a 10,000 ton floating fish oil factory which was sunk by one unit of the raiding force. Another party captured 17 German air force men, apparently sent to the islands to establish a naval air station to raid British shipping.

Almost the only opposition came from a German force on an armed German trawler which fired at one British vessel, but was almost immediately sunk. The seven Germans killed were all aboard the trawler. One German crew member jumped overboard and was rescued by the British.

As the British raiders prepared to leave a lone German plane appeared overhead. It fled as the warships opened up an anti aircraft barrage.

For those Norwegians who could not be taken off the island, the raiding party left food, blankets, chocolate, tobacco and other supplies. The fishermen were avid for cigarettes, since tobacco supplies on the islands were exhausted.

The more than 300 Norwegian patriots rescued included men, women and children. Scores of young men were brought to Britain to join the refugee Norwegian army and navy, fighting here under King Haakon of Norway. Grinning British and Norwegian sailors helped elderly grandmothers aboard their ships with shouts of "Any more for England?" All had hurriedly gathered their best possessions into bundles which they carried on their backs.

The joint admiralty and Norwegian naval communique read:

"The raid was planned with a threefold object. In the first place it was desired to destroy a plant used for the production of fish oil. This is the season in the Lofoten area in which the production of fish oil takes places, and the whole of the fishery produts, like all other Norwegian productions, required by Germany are entirely absorbed by Germany.

"The fish oil produced was of particular importance to Germany, as it is used as glycerips in the making of explosives.

"The second objective was to destroy any German ship or ships under German control found in the locality. Thirdly, it was desired to take prisoner Germans concerned in the control of the fishing industry and such local Quislings who were aiding and abetting the enemy."

A Norwegian language broadcast of the B. B. C. immediately gave detailed accounts of the invasion to listeners in Norway itself. Swedish newspapers reported that the news caused a sensation in Norway, and that anti-Quisling elements already showed increased activity.

Continued Snow And Rain Slow Up Greek Operations

Athens, March 6 (A.P.)—Continuing snow and rain on the Albanian front confined activity today to the shelling of Italian positions by Greek artillery and the destruction of an Italian tank by antitank guns, the Greek spokesman reported tonight.

The government spokesman said the Italians claimed to have bombed and hit the harbor of Mitylene in the Aegean Sea, but, in fact, the Fascist planes dropped bombs on the port of Yera, the explosives falling into the sea.

Of Italian losses in the Greek-Italian war, the spokesman said:

"Generally, the Italian losses in Albania are estimated by medical officers and prisoners at a minimum of 50 per cent of the forces which took part in the various battles. If the information is correct, this means the Italian losses must exceed 120,000.

Germans Court Favor of Turks And Portugal

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 6.—Two British friends at oppposite ends of Europe—Turkey and Portugal—were courted today by Nazi organs of public opinion while the Reich waited silently and watchfully, on events in Greece.

While tightening their military hold on the Balkans, the Germans took time to tell both the Turks and the Portuguese how much, in the Nazi view, they would gain through friendship with the Third Reich.

"Our diplomatic activity is never ended anywhere," an authorized spokesman said.

Official sources said the results of "several conversations" in Ankara, in connection with Adolf Hitler's recent message to President Ismet Inonu of Turkey, were not known here, but it was evident that the German public was awaiting the outcome of this maneuver with interest.

Trade Figures Cited

The well-placed commentary service, Dienst aus Deutschland, said Britain could not replace Germany as a trader with the Turks, since 47½ per cent of Turkish imports in 1938 came from Germany and 11¼ per cent from Britain. Even after the start of war, said the commentary, when Turkey favored Britain economically over Germany, it was Italy, the Reich's Axis partner, which became the chief exporter to Turkey.

Portugal, it said, is "the last take-off place for English air traffic, the last haven for connections with the empire—in short, the last loophole for London."

Yet it claimed, the British navicert system has shrunk Portuguese trade so that Portugal "gets practically no good out of her big colonial possessions and can import only for her own use and for transshipment to British harbors."

Goering, Antonescu Confer

Yesterday's conferences at Vienna between Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and Ion Antonescu, the Rumanian dictator, were described as dealing with "war economy." However, various military experts attended, leading to speculation that other matters were discussed, such as protective measures for Rumania which, with Bulgaria, is in danger of British air action because of the presence of German armies.

Reports that the two had talked about a Soviet demand for Rumanian Black Sea bases were described as "English wishing." (In London, the reports were called "German propaganda.").

The outcome of British Foreign Secretary Eden's visit to Athens was eyed with interest, although spokesmen merely remarked it looked as if the Greeks were glad to see him depart.

British Clash With Armored Units in Libya

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 6.—Advanced British mechanized forces have driven off "enemy" motorized detachments west of El Agheila in Libya, the British command announced tonight. (These forces presumably were German.)

The British communique stated:

"Libya: Forward elements of our mechanized forces have again driven off detachments of enemy armored fighting vehicles west of El Agheila.

"Abyssinia: Patriot forces (Ethiopians in revolt) continue to harass and to inflict substantial casualties on the withdrawing Italians.

"Italian Somaliland: Our troops have occupied Fer-Fer. The advance is continuing.

"In all other areas operations are progressing satisfactorily. So far the number of prisoners taken exceeds 10,000."

El Agheila, the scene of the only Libyan action reported, is 405 miles southeast of Tripoli, principal city of the colony.

Several other Libyan clashes between German and British mechanized units have been reported by Axis sources.

During the day the Italian high command reported in Rome that Fascist counterattacks in Eritrea, near Cheren, a strategic town dominating the British approach toward the Eritrean capital of Asmara, had resulted in the capture of some British prisoners.

TNEC Report Urges Unified Buying by U.S.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A sharply critical report on Government purchasing during the predefense period, coupled with recommendations for development of unified and cooperative large-scale Federal buying, was issued yesterday by the Temporary National Economic Committee.

The report found that purchase orders by 45 Federal agencies "showed little regard for opportune timing" in making the purchases, "with probable substantial losses to the Government," according to a statement by Dr. Dewey Anderson, TNEC executive secretary.

Dr. Anderson added in many instances the Government bought at prices which were too high because of the absence of genuine competitive bidding.

10% Found Identical

An analysis of 300,000 invitations for bids by 45 agencies in a 12 month period showed that 10 per cent of the bids were identical, or at least that there were no bids lower than the identical bids. For particular agencies, the report added identical bidding ran as high as 34 per cent.

Non-competitive bidding was especially prevalent in the fields of cement, steel and automobile tires, the report found. Private buyers of steel, it added, often effected purchases below the base price whereas the Government was called upon to pay the full base figure.

For automobile tires identical bids were made on Federal contracts at progressively higher prices, while costs to private bidders remained stationary, the study declared.

Cost-Plus System Hit

The report, prepared under the general supervision of Dr. Morris A. Copeland, now on the staff of the Defense Commission research and statistics division, criticized the cost-plus system of buying during the World War as being open to abuse because the Government's interest and that of the contractor were "diametrically opposed."

The war-time supply system, the report added, was characterized by "disorderly purchasing, inefficiency and delay (and) excessive prices and profiteering."

In the event this country were involved in another major war the report recommended that dependable records of purchases and inventories be maintained; that these records be used as a basis for estimates to be submitted to a central procurement coordinating office; that such an office have power to disapprove or modify the estimates, and that the office have the power to require that all orders be cleared through it.

Observers noted that a recent "directive," clarifying powers and functions of the Office of Production Management purchases division closely followed these recommendations, giving the division powers virtually identical to those suggested in the report.

Extensive Spy Ring Found; 18 Dutch Doomed

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam, (via Berlin) March 6.—The Dutch were warned today in a military court which has heard a striking account of a secret organization for espionage and sabotage all over the Netherlands that anyone who conspires, even in thought, against the German Army is playing with a death sentence.

The president of the court himself voiced the warning against underground resistance. The court yesterday condemned 18 Netherlanders to die by shooting, sentenced 19 others to prison terms, and has a number of cases yet on the docket.

Among the statements given by court officers and witnesses in the proceedings were these:

A secret society known as "Geuzen"—the name given Dutch soldiers who fought the long wars against Spain in the sixteenth century—organized along semi-military lines, functioned in all parts of the Netherlands from May to December, 1940.

The Germans have not yet captured the leader, who was known to his followers only as "Col. Verdun."

The "Mollen cocktail," a poisonous mixture, was one instrument of destruction planned for use against individual German officers. "Mollen" is the colloquial Dutch name for German.

Pamphlets advising mistreatment of German soldiers were circulated.

Some members of the organization planned to cooperate with an invading British force.

A spy division checked activities of the German army. Some members signalled British airmen.

A dynamite division had the task of blowing up bridges.

German soldiers have fallen victim of sniping. Others have been pushed into canals and rivers at night.

Stores of arms, dynamite and poison have been uncovered.

Some of the accused said their concern was only against the Dutch Nazi movement.

The condemned were given a chance to appeal for mercy.

Calling upon the Dutch people to recognize that the war is over for them since the capitulation of their army, the court declared they must conduct themselves accordingly or the authorities will be forced to resort to the strictest measures.

The present trial must be considered a "last warning," the court said.

Hitler Seeking Tokyo Stand if U.S. Joins War

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo (Friday), March 7.—Chancellor Hitler has summoned the German Ambassador at Tokyo, Gen. Hugen Ott, and Japanese officials to an important conference to discuss Japan's attitude in the event Germany is involved in a war against the United States, according to well informed circles.

The conference is expected to take place in about two weeks, which will give Ott and others sufficient time to reach Berlin. Ott is scheduled to leave tomorrow. The conference, naturally, will also be attended by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Ambassador at Large Heinrich G. Stahmer, and the Japanese Ambassador in Berlin.

Hitler has been insisting on a conference of this kind ever since the conclusion of the tripartite alliance last year, but the approaching session of the Japanese Diet made impossible the assembly of all the important officials.

The Germans are expected to explain their plan for the long-awaited spring offensive against Britain. According to these informants the Germans will request clarification of how far Japan is prepared to go in the Pacific if America enters the war. It may be recalled that the Japanese Cabinet and high military command have been holding conferences regularly, the last being held yesterday.

Matsuoka May Go to Berlin

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, March 6.—Rumors that Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka will shortly visit Berlin, with a stopover in Moscow en route, though still unofficially unconfirmed, have acquired greater solidity from the imminent conclusion of Japan's mediation between French Indo-China and Thailand and German Ambassador Eugen Ott's departure for Germany.

Siam Settlement Declared Near

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Friday), March 7.—Extension of the truce between Thailand and French Indo-China, which expired at noon today, will be unnecessary, the spokesman of the Japanese cabinet information bureau reported, because "all possible differences have been eliminated" by a Japanese-negotiated settlement which is now virtually complete.

Even though "minor details" of an undisclosed nature remain to be worked out, there is "no possibility of a hitch occurring," said the spokesman, Koh Ishii.

He said a tacit truce in the border fighting would remain in force without further formalities.

U.S. Urged to Buy Axis Air Lines In South America

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, yesterday introduced and discussed a bill to authorize the United States Government, in cooperation with South American nations, to acquire control of all commercial air lines in South America owned by Axis powers.

Fish explained that the measure would permit the outright purchase of the air lines by this country or American financing of the acquisition by the Latin-American governments.

"The Axis powers," he said, "have 20,000 miles of air lines criss-crossing every South American country except Venezuela, Colombia and Paraguay. It's time we stop talking about the danger to the United States of an Axis attack from South America and do something about it."

French Resisting Nazis, Letter to Md. Girl Reveals

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., March 6.—The French are passively resisting the Nazis in occupied France and are daily hoping for a British victory, according to a letter received here by Miss Beatrice Summers, Frederick school teacher, from a friend residing in Paris. The letter, which was three months in transit, was smuggled out of Paris and mailed from Vichy. The writer was in the French army until fall of the republic, Miss Summers said.

In one portion of the lengthy message, which is written in French, the writer says:

"The resistance to oppression is growing firmer. In Brittany it is common for the Boches to be intoxicated by the population and then thrown into the sea. In a corner of the Brittany coast there is a reprisal camp, where there are some Boche soldiers who refused to embark for an invasion of Britain on September 16. They were replaced by Storm Troopers."

In commenting on Great Britain, the letter say:

"The R. A. F. is doing good work; may it come often. We are all waiting for it and applauding the precision of its aim. Long live England, long live the Londoners for their pluck, and may we soon be back in the game to help them."

The letter had been opened by the French censor, but was unchanged, Miss Summers stated.

'Sham Invasion' Repelled, British War Head Says

London, March 6 (INS).—War Secretary Capt. David Margesson revealed in the House of Commons today that a huge "sham invasion" of Britain, staged a month ago, showed that German forces could land on British soil, but could not keep their footholds.

Margesson said the sham landings were carried out on a scale "far heavier than anything the Germans actually are likely to make" and precipitated a "battle" that lasted a week and resulted in the driving of all the "invaders" back into the sea. "Many landings were made by sea and air," Margesson related, adding:

"All our armed forces came through with the greatest credit to themselves."

Army Flier Killed In Landing Crash At Langley Field

Langley Field, Va., March 6 (AP).—Second Lieut. Bernard P. Smith, jr., 26, a pilot from the Third Observation Squadron at Langley Field, crashed in an Army bomber in shallow water adjacent to the flying field today and was killed instantly.

The crash came as Lieut. Smith, of Bartow, Fla., was preparing to make a landing. He was piloting a B-10 Martin bomber on what officers termed a "transition training flight."

Army officers explained "a transition training flight" was one designed to acquaint the pilot with a new type of ship preparatory to transfer to another division in the Air Corps.

Killers to Broadcast 'Goodbys' Before Ascending Gallows

By the Associated Press

Columbia, La., March 6.—Four condemned killers, with death by hanging less than 24 hours away, labored today over radio manuscripts from which they will broadcast farewells tomorrow before mounting the 13 steps to the gallows.

The quadruple executions, scheduled at noon tomorrow, came as the aftermath of a sensational Labor Day break last September from the Arkansas convict prison farm.

The men go to the gallows for the shotgun killing of Frank Gartman, Columbia posseman killed by the convicts when they were trapped with three young high school students as hostages in a swampy woodland near here the day after they escaped.

Twenty-five-year-old William Meharg, who said he would warn others that crime doesn't pay, and Floyd Boyce, 29, previously had let it be known they wished their farewell messages broadcast. William Landers, 39, and William Heard, 43, indicated today they, too, would go on the air.

Radio station KMLD of Monroe arranged the broadcasts. Today microphones were set up in the cells of the condemned men, who were visited by relatives and several ministers. The sheriff's office said the four men appeared resigned.

The convicts were among the 36 who escaped a prison farm at Cummings, Ark., September 2 in Arkansas' greatest prison break. In a rapid succession of motor thefts, abductions, wrecks and brushes with law officers, they fled southward, but were eventually trapped in the swamp here.

The two girls and one boy hostage eventually escaped unharmed. Of the six convicts who terrorized northern Louisiana for two days, one was killed here and one at Vicksburg.

U. S. Owes SchenckMoney, Defense Says

By the Associated Press

New York, March 6.—The Government today unloaded stacks of ledgers, vouchers, bank records and personal accounts in Federal District Court preparatory to presenting to a jury the private life of the motion picture producer, Joseph M. Schenck, on trial charged with evading $412,000 income taxes.

United States Attorney Mathias Correa charges that a total of $155,000, which Schenck listed as tax-exempt entertainment expenses, was actually spent for Schenck's own pleasure during the tax years 1935-36-37.

"Certainly, Schenck did entertain lavishly," Defense Counsel Harold Corbin said. "He spent money day and night on business executives and prospects."

During the years 1935, 1936 and 1937, the prosecutor charged, Schenck received $2,016,007 instead of the $1,601,832 he reported, besides illegally deducting such items as:

Fifty-three dollars for a mattress bought for his sister-in-law, $536 for a personal barber, $63 for a kitchen cupboard for his home, $209 for automobile insurance for a woman friend, $136 for transportation of a masseuse from Hollywood to New York and $2,092 for a weekend party.

Corbin declared that instead of Schenck owing the Government $412,000, as alleged in the indictment, "the Government actually owes Schenck more than $165,000."

The attorney said Schenck had filed a demand for that sum following a Government ruling that capital taxes were not the same as ordinary income taxes. He said Schenck had paid under the former category and would get a refund.

Schenck, slightly nervous and wearing the same serge business suit and blue tie he wore yesterday, sat soberly through his attorney's 2¼-hour address in which he was portrayed as an "honest, fair-dealing, decent citizen—a genius at settling disputes between temperamental characters — and a born gambler, he always was and he always will be one."

Corbin described two sales of Schenck casino and racetrack holdings in Agua Caliente, Mexico, to friends—with Schenck receiving no cash in return—as "perfectly decent, understandable transactions between friends."

The Government contended the "sales" were arranged in 1935—the racetrack stock which originally cost $133,448.22 going to William Goetz, an associate, for a nominal $5,000, and casino interests that cost Schenck $403,000 going to Roland West, restaurateur, for $50,000—so that Schenck could write off the losses in his income tax return.

Corbin said that neither West nor Goetz paid Schenck, but he contended that they owned, controlled and operated the stock. He said Schenck, as board chairman of the Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation wished to disassociate himself with gambling interests.

"Schenck told Goetz and West," Corbin quoted, "if the stock turns out to be worth something, you make the profit. But I'm not going to stand for your losing anything by it.' He wasn't going to see a friend suffer on the sale of stock."

teenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest and he was an eye-witness to both wind-carbon assaults. Yesterday Ney completed his investigation and confided the results to The Post.

Interviewed at his post, he asked:

"See those bits of coal?"

"See that building there?"

The building indicated was 1345 E Street Northwest, whose top floor is occupied by the Public Roads Administration of the Federal Work Agency.

"Well," said Ney, "they deliver coal there on Tuesdays and Fridays. Now check back on the days when all those women got their socks sliced up."

February 18 and March 4 both fell on Tuesday. And, as witnessed by Policeman Ney, coal was unloaded at the PRA Building both days and on both occasions high winds swept E Street and other downtown thoroughfares.

Officials of the Roads Administration, evinced considerable interest in Ney's theory.

Last year, it was recalled, such quantities of soot filtered into the building that complaints were lodged with the District smoke inspector.

Members of the stenographic pool of the administration were even more perturbed.

"Why, at least 20 of the girls had three and four pairs of stockings ruined," one stenographer exclaimed, "and the coal right here in this building! Has Congress heard about this?"

Britain Fights Off Lone Wolf Raiders; 1 Thought Downed

London, March 6 (AP).—A brief air raid alarm, signalizing the 501st appearance of German planes over the capital area, sounded early tonight following a day of considerable activity by single raiders over the east and southwest coast.

Antiaircraft batteries roared in some sections of the capital shortly after tonight's alert, but the all-clear soon followed.

A lone raider which bombed and machine-gunned a town on the southwest coast was driven out to sea by British fighter planes and believed shot down. Two daytime alerts sounded in the capital area where bombs were dropped at one point, but casualties were small. Daylight bombings of east Anglian and Kentish towns were also reported.

Prosecutor Grant W. Kelleher, arguing against the defense motion in behalf of the Harris County (Texas) Medical Society, was attempting to refute opposing counsel's claim that the Texas group was acting in no conspiracy when it instituted disciplinary action against Dr. Raymond E. Selders, a member.

Justice Proctor interposed:

"You don't think there action (the Texas society's) could just as reasonably be attributed to the fact that they felt, after all, that they should not participate in this controversy as it related to Selders?"

(Kelleher had accused the Harris County group of "passing the buck," in connection with disciplining Dr. Selders, to the American Medical Association and District Medical Society.)

Not Laughing Matter

When Kelleher replied in the negative to the court's question, there was a wave of thinly suppressed laughter from the defendants' box.

"I don't think this is a laughing matter, is it?" the Government counsel asked the bench.

Momentarily ignoring Kelleher, Justice Proctor turned a pair of blazing eyes toward the defendants—there had been no outburst from the spectators—and said:

"I have asked several times—I am very much opposed to laughter either during arguments or testimony, and I simply will not put up with it in the future.

"I have made that request several times. If it occurs again among those who have been here continually I am going to take some action. Let that be understood."

When Kelleher began, "I think, your honor—" he was interrupted by the conclusion of Justice Proctor's reprimand: "This to me is not a funny matter. It is a very serious matter. I don't know how the defendants take it. Apparently there are some very humorous things about it."

Ask Modification of Charges

In addition to the defense motions for directed verdicts, the prosecution offered several of its own to modify the indictment on which the physicians are being tried. These, too, were taken under advisement.

Arguing in behalf of the doctors, William E. Leahy declared that the Government's antitrust case is particularly weak against Drs. Wallace M. Yater, William Joseph Stanton, Leon A. Martel, Edward Hiram Reede and J. Rogers Young, all of Washington, and Drs. Morris Fishbein, Olin West and R. G. Leland, officials of the American Medical Association.

The Government would brand Dr. Yater and Dr. Stanton as criminals simply because they made certain motions at meetings of the District Medical Society, according to Leahy; Dr. Reede, because he sat in on the society's expulsion trial of Dr. Mario Scandiffio, a G. H. A. staff dcotor; Dr. Young, for being on the staff of Casualty Hospital, which denied privileges to Dr. Selders; Dr. Martel, because of his connection with the Georgetown Hospital medical staff.

Finding no closely knit conspiracy, the Government tried to make one of "isolated acts" which had no cohesion, Leahy told the court.

"I cannot understand," the eloquent counsel for the defense stormed, "why the Government won't grant the possibility of any honest criticism of GHA."

Dr. A. C. Christie, a Washington defendant and who now lies seriously ill, was described by his lawyer as one who was indicted merely for seconding a motion made by Dr. Prentiss Willson, also a defendant.

Calls It "An Insult"

And for the Department of Justice's antitrust division to have accused the Washington Academy of Surgery of wrongdoing because, after an investigation conducted in good faith, it recommended against hospital privileges for Dr. Selders is an "insult," Leahy continued.

Similarly, he defended motives and deeds of the Harris County Medical Society, American Medical Association and District Medical Society. He said the A. M. A. "was dragged by the heels into this case."

Both Leahy and prosecution counsel, whose arguments were divided between Kelleher and John Henry Lewin, cited Supreme Court decisions in support of their respective theses.

Lewin characterized the defendants' behavior with regard to G. H. A., a medical care cooperative for Federal employes in Washington, as "a plain, ordinary, selfish boycott." Even if G. H. A. had been illegal, according to their "groundless claim," the doctors had no right thereby to break a Federal law, Lewin said.

Cites Documents

To Leahy's statement that, for all the record shows, Dr. Leland may not even have known of the exisence of the District Medical Society, Lewin cited documents in evidence showing that the A. M. A. executive came here as a "trouble shooter" to advise the local doctors. Further, that Dr. Leland was present when the District society's own "trouble shooters" conferred in Chicago with A. M. A. leaders.

One by one, Lewin, followed by Kelleher, ripped into the other defendants who, according to their counsel, were innocent of any wrongdoing. Dr. Reede, it was pointed out by the latter, did not merely "sit in" on the Scandiffio expulsion trial but presided. Kelleher argued that the Texas medical group kept Dr. Selders "under a cloud" during all but the last few weeks of 1938 before deciding to drop charges and accept his back dues.

Leahy, having the last word, charged the prosecution with attempting to put over suspicion, rather than proof. This is particularly true, he said, with respect to the Texas medical group, Dr. Yater and Dr. Martel.

"Instead of giving you facts, the desperation of the prosecution has given you suspicion," the defense counsel concluded.

Supreme Court Again Stays Man's Execution

Joe Vernon, Birmingham Negro sentenced to die last night for murder, was granted a stay of execution by the Supreme Court for the second time.

The postponement was granted yesterday pending disposition by the high tribunal of Vernon's appeal from a decision by the Alabama Supreme Court denying a petition for habeas corpus. The Alabama officials will have 20 days to file a reply to the petition.

Once before, Justice Frankfurter granted the Negro a stay shortly before he was to have been executed January 31.

Dale Whiteside Gets Interior Dept. Post

Dale Whiteside, assistant supervising agent of the White House police, has been appointed director of investigations for the Interior Department, it was announced yesterday.

WHITESIDE

Whiteside, veteran of nine years with the Secret Service, stationed at the side of President Roosevelt during most of his official tours since 1935, left the Secret Service to take his new post.

Bradley B. Smith, former director of investigations, is retained at his present salary as associate director.

Huskily-built and athletic-looking, Whiteside had one of the most responsible jobs in the Secret Service. Born in Kansas in 195, he became a Secret Service field investigator in 1932.

In 1935, he was transferred to the White House detail, becoming assistant supervising agent in 1939.

Whiteside's new duties will entail appraising and classifying land withdrawn from the public domain for mineral prospecting, extraction, grazing and for national defense; cooperating with law-enforcement agencies in connection with fraudulent schemes involving oil and gas leases and misuse of Government property; also investigating occupancy of public lands by individuals and companies where no effort is made to obtain title to the land from the Government.

President Keeping 'Hands Off' Lend Bill, Says Early

The hite House said yesterday that President Roosevelt was bringing no pressure to bear to insure passage of his aid-to-Britain bill, and that reports to the contrary were completely false. The announcement was made through the President's press secretary, Stephen T. Early.

"The White House," Early said, "is not, either through the President or anyone else, exerting pressure or asking anyone to vote for or against—to be paired, present or absent—when action is taken on any amendment to the lease-lend bill, including the Ellender amendment.

"The President is keeping his hands strictly off, and those around him are doing likewise."

Mr. Early also said that the President denied stories concerning the mobilization of millions of American women in a home defense program.

Selects Held Bearing Burden Of Defense

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., charged yesterday that Selective Service youths are the only Americans making any sacrifices for national defense.

The Secretary was the first high New Deal official to put into publicly spoken words some thoughts that Administration officials have been expressing privately for several weeks.

In a press conference discussion of how national defense savings bonds will be sold. Morgenthau said "there is no pressure going to be brought on anybody in the Army" (to buy a bond).

"They are doing enough now," the Secretary continued. "As a matter of fact they are the only group that is doing anything. I mean, making sacrifices. That would be the last group I would go after."

The Cabinet member's outburst came as many New Dealers were privately asking whether President Roosevelt would soon "crack down" to enforce his threat, expressed in a fireside chat last December, that "the notion of business as usual" must go.

Some quarters interpreted Morgenthau's remarks as a veiled hint that after the "lend-lease" bill is disposed of the Administration will "move in" on business with mandatory requests for plant expansion and sacrifice of normal profit spreads.

At his press conference the Treasury Secretary also announced that defense savings securities would go on sale May 1.

More than 250,000 channels, centering around the Postoffice organization, will be utilized in selling the bonds, savings certificates and stamps, he said.

Morgenthau disclosed that the securities would be sold through at least 48 regional offices, headed by State chairmen but employing Treasury personnel.

House Passes $890,824,037 Farm Measure

By the Associated Press

A bill appropriating $890,824,037 for the Agricultural Department next year, including a $212,000,000 fund for farm parity payments, was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

The measure, which will make an overall total of $1,420,000,000 available for farm programs beginning next July 1, carried $500,000,000 for the usual soil conservation payments and authority for the department to borrow $250,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for rural electrification, farm tenancy and rural rehabilitation.

About $50,000,000 would be allocated outright for the parity payments with authority given the department to make contractual obligations for the remaining $162,000,000.

Efforts to increase the parity and rural rehabilitation loan funds and to strike out the $50,000,000 item for farm tenant loans failed.

The measure passed on a voice vote.

The world's desperate bidding for "guns instead of butter" has caused the volume of American agricultural exports to sink to the lowest levels since 1862.

Commerce Department statistics revealed yesterday that in January American farm exports represented only $22,000,000 out of a total of $325,350,000 foreign trade, or less than 1 per cent, according to preliminary figures.

This was an even worse showing than the last six months of 1940, when agricultural products declined to only 8.7 per cent of the export total, as compared with 22.4 per cent for the comparable 1939 period.

Services Today For Navy Pilot Killed in Crash

Funeral services for Lieut. Seymour A. Johnson, Navy test pilot who crashed to his death near Norbeck, Md., Wednesday, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Fort Myer Chapel. Interment will follow in Arlington National Cemetery.

At Anacostia Naval Air Station, meanwhile, a board of three officers was convened to investigate the accident. The board, which is not expected to file a report for a day or two, consists of Lieut. Comdr. William V. Saunders, Lieut. Charles V. Griffin and Lieut. William R. Counts.

Dr. C. E. Hawks, Montgomery County medical examiner, at the same time issued a certificate of accidental death in the case. Johnson crashed on a farm near the Manor Club while on an altitude test flight with a new 400-mile-an-hour Grumman fighter.

The Navy Department announced that Lieut. William J. Kuhn, of the Chaplain Corps, will conduct the services for Lieut. Johnson, and that six brother officers will serve as pallbearers. They are Lieut. Comdr. J. G. Crommelin, Lieut. Comdr. F. M. Trapnell, Lieut. George Anderson, Lieut. C. D. Griffin, Lieut. S. G. Mitchell and Lieut. J. J. McRoberts.

Zinc Producers Told to Set Aside Pool for Defense

Zinc manufacturers were instructed yesterday by the Office of Production Management Priorities division to set aside a specified quantity of each month's production as a pool to be allocated "to ease shortages as they may occur in defense industries."

E. R. Stettinius, jr., priorities director, said the plan, which was worked out with industry representatives, would go into effect on April production, for which month 5 per cent of the total output will be set aside.

It was believed the allocation plan will serve, at least for the time being, to forestall the imposition of a mandatory priority system, which the industry is reported as anxious to avoid. The need for some form of allocation, however, arose some weeks ago when an important maker of cartridge brass for the Army was threatened temporarily with a shutdown through failure to obtain zinc.

Two More to Aid In Hankin Hearing

Two members were added yesterday to the Senate Subcommittee which will hold hearings, probably next week, on the nomination of Gregory Hankin as a member of the Public Utilities Commission.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, asked Chairman Reynolds to appoint Senators Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont, to assist him in the inquiry.

Senate Confirms Two As U. S. Ministers

The Senate late yesterday confirmed the nomination of Wesley Frost, of Kentucky, to be Minister of Paraguay, and Pierre Delboal, of Pennsylvania, to be Minister to Nicaragua.

Contract Bridge

Sitting South, you hold these cards:

♣ K 10 7 3

The bidding has gone:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | ? | — |

What action do you take?

Answer

Three no trump. This is exactly the type hand on which the little used immediate three no-trump response should be made. Holding between 3½ and 4 honor-tricks, intermediates, balanced distribution and some trump support, your hand answers all the requirements. No approach bid, such as two clubs, would do nearly as well.

The Gallup Poll

Men of Draft Age Favor Lease-Lend Bill As Much as Older Groups, Survey Finds

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., March 6.—One important question raised in the Senate debate over the lease-lend bill is whether or not American men of draft age—the young men who would have to do the fighting if the United States went to war—approve the measure.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler and others who oppose the bill as a "green light for war" claim that college professors and presidents who favor the measure do not speak for their students.

What is the attitude of the young men of the country?

In its role as a fact-finding organization, the Institute has conducted a survey on the lease-lend bill reaching a national cross-section of all age groups. The latest vote of men in the younger age bracket, 21 through 29 years—the age groups from which a national army would be chiefly drawn—are as much in favor of the lease-lend bill as the national average for all age groups.

The results follow:

Men Aged 21-29

|---|---|
| Yes | 55% |
| No | 24 |
| Qualified Opinions | 10 |
| No Opinion | 11 |

Sentiment in the older age groups is likewise predominately in favor of the bill, the survey indicates. The proportion in the age group 30 through 49 is approximately two-and-a-half-to-one in favor of the measure, and the same for the group 50 and over.

National sentiment as measured by the Institute has been in favor of the bill since it was first introduced, although the number of voters definitely in favor of the bill has declined slightly in the last ten days. If the latest national percentages are applied against the 50,000,000 persons who voted in the November, 1940, Presidential election, the results show approximately 28,000,000 definitely in favor of passing the bill at the present time as compared to 10,000,000 definitely opposed—a ratio of nearly three to one in favor of the bill.

Excluding from the Institute's sample, or cross-section, all persons who did not vote in the last Presidential election, the results in terms of percentages and in terms of actual voters on the basis of the 50,000,000 who participated in the election are as follows:

| | | Voters in Millions |
|---|---|---|
| Definitely Favor Bill | 56% | 28 |
| Definitely opposed | 20 | 10 |
| Qualified opinions | 11 | 5½ |
| No opinion | 13 | 6½ |
| | 100% | 50 |

To date, approximately 10,000 persons have been interviewed in all parts of the country on the lease-lend bill. With a sample, or cross-section, of this size, the mathematical chances are 997 in 1,000 that the deviation, or error, due solely to the size of sample will be well under 3 per cent.

The four largest States in terms of population—New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio—are for President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill, according to votes cast in the American Institute of Public Opinion's latest survey.

Illinois, a center of isolationist sentiment, is the least in favor of the measure among the big four States, while Ohio and Pennsylvania are the most in favor.

The survey question and results are:

| | Yes. | No. | Q'l'f'd. | No Op'n. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| New York | 50% | 22% | 14% | 14% |
| Pennsylvania | 52 | 18 | 11 | 19 |
| Illinois | 45 | 29 | 10 | 16 |
| Ohio | 58 | 16 | 12 | 14 |

U. S. Wheat Specialist Leaves for England

New York, March 6 (AP).—Thomas D. Campbell, mas production wheat specialist, left aboard the Dixie Clipper today for a secrecy-shrouded trip to England, after a series of conferences in Washington with President Roosevelt and other Administration officials.

Campbell, whose headquarters are at Hardin, Mont., declined to discuss the purpose of his trip, conceding only that while in England he probably would "see the minister of agriculture and any other officials that one ought to see."

Right of Way Given Mine Bill by Ways Unit

By the Associated Press

Legislation for annual Federal inspection of all coal mines, minus requirements for special inspections on petition of miners or their bargaining agents, was granted legislative right of way by the House Rules Committee yesterday.

The action came after agreement by the House Mines Committee to eliminate the requirement for the special inspections. Under the agreement inspections would be "in the discretion of the Bureau of Mines."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

LOVELIEST LATIN to appear in a Washington floor show is Rosita Rios, now at the Troika. La Rosita's singing voice is indescribable. It'll make you think of honey, perfume, star sapphires and other nice things. And while she can be the very essence of romance, she also has a beautiful talent for cutting up. From the spirituelle "Cielito Lindo" she's likely to leap into wild yippee in "Rancho Grande" and the naughty nuances of "Mama, Yo Quiero." Her every number has a flash of the unusual. Thus she electrified opening night ringsiders by singing "Ferry-boat Serenade" in Spanish. Rosita rates as an unqualified "must" on your program of evenings out. She'll be at Troika only nepxt week.

De Lloyd McKaye, one of the country's most brilliant pianists, will head Paul Young's new floor show opening next Tuesday. She comes direct from Philadelphia's luxury spot, the Club Bali. You'll enjoy her velvety vocals, birdlike whistling, almost as much as her piano magic. Adept Pete Randall of New York will be the new emcee.

A POCKET-FULL OF CHICKENS will probably astound various Metronome Room patrons when Magician Guili-Guili opens there tonight. Guili-Guili is partial to using baby chicks in his act. His flowing white robe conceals an approximation of a henhouse, we suspect . . . Guili-Guili has the most impressive magical pedigree in the world. He's the forty-fourth of an unbroken line of Egyptian magicians. Naturally he has a list of tricks that would fill a volume. Some of them probably date back to the Egypt of the Pyramids. Others are strictly 1941, and chromium plated.

MOST EXPENSIVE HAT in town is that big gold-embroidered sombrero worn by Vicente de la Garza in the King Cole Room. It cost Vicente 100 round pesos in Mexico City. That makes it as costly as a Lily Dache model.

IN LOUNGE RIVIERA. All the folks completely delighted with Ida Clarke's organ interludes, many tiptoeing over to ask her for pet numbers . . . Bill Briggs, of Eastern Air Lines, just in from Florida with the first good news about Rickenbacker. It appeared in the headlines a couple of hours later . . . Patricia Prochnik and Tinsley Adams sitting at the "engagement" table . . . Maestro Pete Macias tells us that Saxist Bob Holben will join his band next Monday.

Paul Kain's group of star diversionists will close at Mayfair on April 5. Just a week later, on April 12, Paul will begin to wave the baton over his big dance band at Glen Echo's opening. Meanwhile the Mayfair management is scanning the entire East for smart successors.

PLEASANT BULLETINS. Arden Clar, gifted young pianist-composer of the Barnee-Lowe orchestra at the Shoreham, has sold his tone-poem, "Jade," to BMI . . . Those are native Mexican songs that Lina D'Acosta sings so fetchingly to her own guitar accompaniment in the Neptune Room . . . The girls of the Kappa Gamma Sorority are going to have a big party at the Parrot tomorrow . . . Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, is all pleased because his song, "Charming," has been officially cleared for BMI broadcasting . . . Leo MacDonald, manager of Olmsted's Grill, tells us that Fordyce Minnick, former Washington hotel man, is now a major in the Quartermaster Corps, stationed at Cleveland, Ohio.

BING CROSBY is one of the most faithful fans of Carmen Cavallaro of the Cosmos Room. Bing makes a habit of presenting his friends with Cavallaro record albums, hopes that Carmen will soon come to the West Coast and work his Kraft Music Hall.

BALTIMORE IN RAINBOW. Baltimore has imported a flock of Washington entertainers, according to news we received in the Rainbow Room from Publicist Jim Walter. Marian Dawn (ex-Casino Royal) is singing in the Commerce Club. Yvonne Logan and Nadine's Co-Eds (ex-Maryland Gardens) are now in the Pirate's Den as the Rhapsodettes. Roy Kyser (ex-Wardman) and Judy Ellington (ex-Lotus), are both in the Club Charles.

John Frazier, psychoanalyst of Cafe Caprice, will go to New York late this month and give a series of lectures before women's clubs.

PIANO STARS. Red-headed Sandy Ross of Jimmy Summerville's Four Ms in the Hi Hat, merits a handful of the best adjectives. His piano work is glittering, dexterous, fascinating, original. And we mean every word of it . . . Vic Nini of Ciro's Famous Village combines the solovox artfully with his extremely finished and delightful pianistics. He's one of the few who play "boogie-woogie" and classical piano with equal adeptness . . . The Heintze Brothers of Restaurant "823" are the favorite pianists of thousands of Washingtonians. Viennese waltzes and the most beautiful and difficult of the classics are their forte . . . Felix Zimmer, of the Casino Royal, does a lot of much appreciated clowning at the piano, but for all that he's recognized by all of Washington's musicians as a real master of the ivories.

THE PLYMOUTH OPENING was hilarious and jampacked with merrymakers. Bob Straszny's new gypsy quartet provided music that was both lilting and unique. All of the Straszny musicians have been members of the National Symphony.

PET OLDIES are being resurrected in a big way by Rodd Raffell's orcehstra at the Nightingale. They're all arranged in the 1941 manner, so that the contagious tunes of a couple of seasons ago have the combined charm of old favorites and fresh musical treatment. Newest Raffell "odlie" is "I'll Be Tired of You," being sung my Tomm Lawrence.

Bill Kavakos says that he has an extra-tops, super-special floor revue booked into his Kavakos Grill for the weekend.

Oklahomans Sue For Oil Royalties

A group of Oklahoma citizens sued in the District Court yesterday to compel Secretary of Interior Ickes to pay them $60,000 in oil royalties from Indian lands.

H. E. Ledbetter, Ardmore, Okla., trustee for the plaintiffs, contended that the royalties were awarded by an Oklahoma Federal court and the judgment was upheld by the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals. Nevertheless, said Ledbetter, Ickes failed to pay.

Ledbetter's complaint was filed by Attorneys Neil Burkinshaw, Daniel B. Maher and F. M. Goodwin.

Wife Got FAT—
LOST HUSBAND'S LOVE

The above headlines appeared in a New York newspaper in connection with a divorce trial that had attracted wide attention: "She was a beautiful woman" one witness testified, "but she got fat and is not attractive any more."

Thousands of women are getting fat and losing their appeal just because they do not know what to do. If you are fat, how would you like to lose some of it and at the same time gain in physical charm and attractiveness—more energy—greater activity?

Why not do what thousands of women have done to get rid of pounds of unwanted fat? Take ½ teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts (a famous English formula) in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and keep it up for thirty days. Cut out pastries and fatty meats and go light on white bread, potatoes, butter and cream. Then weigh yourself and see how many pounds you have lost.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts will last you for 4 weeks and costs but little. Ask any druggist for a bottle of Kruschen, plain or new effervescent—sparkling—pleasant—and start today to lose fat. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back.

Battle of Boston Baked Beans, Hominy Grits Rages in Army

By John B. McDermott
United Press Staff Writer

Atlanta, March 6.—The battle of Boston beans versus hominy grits was fought today as Fourth Corps Army headquarters discussed what to feed Yankees and Southerners being concentrated in camps in the South.

Even soldiers in lightning warfare travel on their stomachs, and the U. S. Army quartermasters must see that the draftees and National Guardsmen from New England get their Boston baked beans and that those from the South are served grits.

They must be sure that a consignment of maple syrup is not given a company from Mississippi, while a detachment from Massachusetts doesn't have anything but molasses on pancakes.

"We've got a hell of a problem on our hands," Lieut. Col. Joseph P. Sullivan, Camp Shelby, Miss., quartermaster, said.

"Not long ago complaints kept reaching me that an Ohio outfit was not getting its potatoes. I investigated, and they weren't. The K. P.'s (kitchen police) were peeling the potatoes with meat cleavers. That meant tossing about 90 per cent of the spuds into the garbage can."

Quartermasters from the eight States of the Fourth Corps area today held the first session of a three-day conference on their problems of food and equipment.

"Looks like we're going to have some fun at Blanding," Maj. Harry Cullins, of Fort Blanding, said. "The Yanks are coming and that means food troubles."

The soldiers from Louisiana demand chicory in their coffee and those from the north drink black coffee.

"The difference between the two is that buckshot will float in the chicory and sink in black coffee," Lieut. Col. William R. Jackson, of Camp Claiborne, La., said.

Natives of Florida eat lots of fish; Northerners are strong for doughnuts, bacon and eggs. The boys from Dixie like cornbread, and few Yankees will touch it. Louisianans want navy beans and rice often.

"If a soldier is hungary, he'll eat almost anything," Frink said. "What they want most is food, food, and more food. Give them quantity and quality, and they will be satisfied."

Fallen Plane's Gas Sufficient, Employe Says

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, March 6.—A flight dispatcher's report today outlined at the Civil Aeronautics Board hearing the anxiety with which Eastern Air Line employes awaited word of a missing sleeper plane whose crash near the Atlanta Airport last Thursday killed eight persons and injured eight.

Dempsey Brown, E. A. L. dispatcher at Candler Field, told of how the big plane left Washington for Atlanta with 650 gallons of gasoline, enough to reach Atlanta and fly back to Charlotte or farther, if necessary.

All went well until after the plane checked over the Stone Mountain marker on the outskirts of Atlanta, Brown said. This was at 11:38 of the night of February 26.

Given latest altimeter and field instrument readings, the sleeper plane was not heard from again until it reached "the range point' about 2½ miles southeast of the landing field.

At 11:55, said Brown, he could not hear the motors, and became worried. About midnight there came a call from a tourist camp on the Jonesboro Road, about 16 miles away, saying that a plane had been heard flying southwest and flying low. Later, said the unnamed telephone informant, there was "a rumbling sound" and nothing more.

The plane was found early February 27 in a pine thicket about 5 miles from the airport, torn to bits, three crew members and four passengers dead, and nine passengers, one of them Eddie Rickenbacker, president of E. A. L., injured. Later another passenger died.

United States Weather Bureau forecasters and E. A. L. meteorologists agreed that although the ceiling was from 200 to 500 feet and that it was misty, there was no reason why the sleeper should not have been able to land safely.

One witness, Paul Gareau, special meteorologist of the safety bureau of the CAB, said that E. A. L. weather forecasts had been found to be "remarkably accurate."

House Votes Probe Of Plane Crashes

Foreign Commerce Committee.

Members refrained from blaming recent air crashes on the President's reorganization which led to the abolition of the Air Safety Board, but Republicans called attention to the record and Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, observed that "the facts speaks for themselves."

Committee Inspections

The House inquiry will seek to determine whether there is any connection between the transfer and the crashes which have caused 54 deaths since July 1, last. For 17 months prior to the reorganization, members pointed out, there were no fatal accidents on commercial air lines.

The House committee, it is understood, will make inspections and hold hearings at the scenes of the crashes. Eddie Rickenbacker, president of Eastern Air Lines, who was injured in the fall of a night plane near Atlanta, will be called as a witness.

Nichols, in outlining the purpose of his resolution, expressed the hope that the committee will do "a quick, concise, and hard-hitting job" and recommend remedial legislation promptly to the House.

One provision in the resolution authorizes the committee to investigate "the liability of such air liners on account of loss of life or injury to persons and property."

Randolph Tells of Growth

"So far as I know not a single judgment has been obtained against a commercial air line," Nichols said, "because it is almost impossible to prove negligence."

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, who introduced a resolution proposing an investigation by the House Interstate Commerce Committee, called attention to the rapid growth of aviation in recent years.

Recalling the legislative history of the CAA, Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, said he felt like "we've marched up the hill and down again."

The House originated the Civil Aeronautics Act, he explained, and refused to sanction the reorganization.

Army Pilot Killed In Hawaii Crash

Honolulu, March 6 (INS).—Lieut. Brewster Ward, 25, of the Army Air Corps, was killed instantly today when his pursuit plane crashed near an emergency field on Haleiwa Beach. Ward was on a routine flight when the ship suddenly dove to earth. He was a native of Buffalo, N. Y.

after a cold then what

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal. Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. In the absence of a focal infection or organic disease, you should note improvement in the way you feel and look within the first 10 days. The confidence of millions over many years is the best testimonial of this product.

An experience with S.S.S Tonic will cause you to say to your friends, S.S.S. made me feel and look like myself again.

Pair Use Noodles; Get Cash Return

From Soup to Signs

Brother and Sister Made Name Plates From Soup Alphabet

There is money in alphabet soup—at least there was for 16-year-old David H. Horsman, of Edgewater, Md.

Last November David and his sister Marie, 19, who works at the Washington Institute of Technology, formed a partnership. Raw materials: One 10-cent package of alphabet soup noodles, a few scraps of balsam wood, some brass pins, plastic wood, and quite a bit of ingenuity.

From these items David made wooden pins with names and slogans on them. Marie acted as business manager and in a few months they cleared $20.

"But," said Marie, "the business is seasonal, and besides the 10-cent stores have them now. Too much competition."

Ten-cent stores, quick to recognize a fad, are now selling bits of wood cut in various designs, with a package of letters to glue on the pin.

David doesn't care. He is happy fooling around on his father's boats.

Home Defense Plan to Cover Both Sexes

The White House emphasized yesterday that plans to enlist citizens for home defense will embrace men not of military age as well as women.

"No plan of action has originated here to mobilize millions of women," White House Secretary Stephen Early said.

President Roosevelt has several times let it be known at press conferences that he and his aides were studying plans that would give men and women who cannot serve in the armed forces "something to do" for national defense.

The President's latest remark on the subject occurred at a press conference this week when he said that working out the home defense plan was one of the hardest administrative problems he ever tackled, that the objective was to find a plan that could be carried out locally, decentralizing authority.

About a month ago the President met with a group of women in official position to discuss home-defense plans. He appointed Mrs. Florence Kerr, of New York, assistant WPA commissioner, to a committee to draft a program for consideration. Also named to the committee were Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, and Harriet Elliott, of the Defense Commission.

This White House meeting with the President was preceded by an organization meeting called by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in the Red Room of the White House residential quarters, where she outlined her views on the problem to a group of about 60 or 75 women. Included were wives of Cabinet members and Supreme Court justices, women holding executive posts with the Government and female members of Congress.

That meeting led to the mass interview with President Roosevelt, which gave the plans some official standing. After the conference with the President, Mrs. Kerr made public a memorandum of the plan she favored. This one was limited to women and was predicated on "social defense" to make America "a better place in which to live."

According to Mrs. Kerr's plan, women were to be allowed to voluntarily register to perform a variety of national defense tasks. These would include preparing and conserving food, aptitude testing, first-aid training, learning Spanish, learning "how to get things done" in the community, map making, map reading and drafting, training as civic aides, training in volunteer leadership, prevocational and vocational training, providing school lunches, training in health and training in many other activities, such as nursing and communications.

How much that early plan has been changed could not be learned. It is one of several proposals now before the President for study.

The White House said that the plan was being prepared in response to "thousands" of requests that have been received by mail.

Geographic Society To See Bird Films

In advance of their return from Florida, news reels of the social life of the Southern colony of songsters and other birds will be shown members of the National Geographic Society, at Constitution Hall, tonight.

The lecturer, John H. Storer, has recorded in full color motion pictures America's most spectacular birds in their haunts from Florida to the Gaspe Peninsula. One sequence records the courtship dance of the Florida crane. Close-up studies of the yellow warbler, cliff swallow, osprey, ring-billed gull, white pelican, coot and other species are also included.

'Western Union' Is Wired For Sound Melodrama

Palace Film Is a Rip-Roaring 'Western,' With Benefits of Ace Cast and Technicolor; Short Subjects Inspiring and Hard on Nerves

"WESTERN UNION." Twentieth Century-Fox production, featuring Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger, Robert Young and Virginia Gilmore, with John Carradine, "Slim" Summerville, Chill Wills, Barton MacLane, Russell Hicks, Victor Kilian, Minor Watson, George Chandler and Chief Big Tree. Directed by Fritz Lang. At Loew's Palace Theater.

"WESTERN UNION," it seems, had no less arduous and hazardous a time in conquering a continent than "Wells Fargo," "Union Pacific" and the other pictorial enterprises that have based their drama on spanning the coasts in turbulent times. Wires are its chief worries, instead of pony expresses and steel rails, but the general pattern of its exciting disclosures is much the same.

BELL

The period of the picture, revealed for the first time on a Washington screen at Loew's Palace yesterday, is tossed back into the 1860s, when the War Between the States was providing solace for few and social and commercial complexities for many. The Confederate soldiery comes in for its piece of the action, and Indians, grotesquely camouflaged in their war paint, are all over the place, principally to see to it that Western Union doesn't completely entangle their territories in telegraph wires. An eloquent demonstration of the "strong medicine" that flows through those wires is a potent factor in causing them to change their simple minds.

But "Western Union" is less an epic recital of the struggle for existence of a great commercial project than it is an excuse to hang every thrilling element of the most tempestuous "Western" upon the poles of the company. The action is persistently punctuated by hard riding, gun battles, forest fires, horse thieving, cattle rustling and all of the other violent activities that characterized trigger-finger life on the pioneer prairies.

That the picture is executed in another of the Technicolor cameras' most notable triumphs in harmonizing soft tints with the homicidal results of hard living adds greatly to its conviction and strength.

The characters of the play have been chosen less with an eye to glorifying Western Union than to epitomizing the hardihood and the spirit of the Old West, stretching from Omaha to Salt Lake. There is a Harvard tenderfoot in the story's dramatis personae, who turns out suddenly to be a completely westernized killer; two brothers, one on the side of the law—the other as pretty a rascal as you ever would care to meet; the head man of Western Union and his sister, who keeps alive such remote romantic interest as the film possesses. These pivotal characters are surrounded by a magnificently motley crew—including all those redskins.

Robert Young, who apparently nurtures an equal facility in either comedy or melodrama, is the young tenderfoot who goes heroically he-man in the closing episodes of the picture and Randolph Scott is the more honorable of the brothers who shoot it out, finally, in the village barber shop. The tycoon of the telegraph keys is played by Dean Jaggers—not quite so effective as he was in "Brigham Young"—and Barton MacLane is the dirty dog who plays all the mischief with everybody, including himself. Virginia Gilmore, the girl in the case, it seems to me, was a little more interesting with Cesar Romero in the recent "Tall, Dark and Handsome" than she is here. The comedy vein is discovered and richly worked by Slim Summerville, as the camp cook, and John Carradine, Chill Wills—a perfect name for this sort of thing—Russell Hicks and a staggering number of others keep the business going at what amounts to a breakdown clip—at least for many members of the cast.

Among the supplementaries on the new bill at the Palace is one of those trick-spectacle, three-dimensional items dreamed up by Pete Smith, having to do with a "Microscopic Murder," or something like that. Everything that happens, happens right at the end of your nose or in your right eye. All very exciting, unless you have learned from past experience that the gadgets never really will smack you in the kisser. Then there is "The Great Meddler," concerning the career of one Henry Bergh, who instituted the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and what inexplicably was a tardy corollary, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and had an exceedingly tumultuous time doing it. The new issue of the "News of the Day" completes a bill that may be given an ironclad guarantee to keep you awake and on the edge of your pew.

Andy Graduates, Cum Laude, In New Hardy Film at Capitol

"ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY." Metro-Goldwyn, Mayer picturization of a story by Katharine Brush, adapted to the screen by Jane Murfin and Harry Ruskin, featuring Lewis S. Stone, Mickey Rooney, Fay Holden and Ann Rutherford, with Sara Haden, Kathryn Grayson, Ian Hunter and Gene Reynolds. Directed by George B. Seitz. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Mickey Rooney acquires a private secretary and a prize assortment of diverting griefs in "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary." But even more importantly, the screen seems to have acquired a new star in the person of Kathryn Grayson, the lovely youngster elected to take dictation from Rooney.

As a new luminary in the movie heavens, she shines with no uncertain light. Little Miss Grayson "has everything," beauty, quantities of personality, a very commendable acting ability and as her ace, an astoundingly beautiful soprano voice. The combination should carry her as far as Deanna Durbin or Judy Garland. Most of her numbers are extremely difficult operatic arias, executed with perfection and delicacy. But in her one popular song, "I've Got My Eyes On You," she shows a complete mastery of the 1941 technic of "putting a number across."

Andy Hardy gets through high school by the skin of his teeth and amid much pulling and hauling in this latest Hardy family picture. He also finally graduates from his jallopy into the car of his dreams, one of those convertible roadsters with a top that goes up and down at the push of a button.

One of Series' Best

As diversion, "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" stacks up well among the best of the Hardy family pictures. Lewis Stone, if possible, is even finer than usual. Fay Holden and Sara Haden occupy their wonted roles of mother and aunt with their usual ease and charm. Also familiar is Ann Rutherford, as piquant Polly Benedict. Andy's big heart interest. This group of regulars is augmented effectively by Ian Hunter, playing Kathryn Grayson's father, a gentleman down on his luck but with happy days a-coming as the picture ends.

Big laugh spots abound. There's the Greek tragedy enacted by the high-schoolers; Judge Hardy's paralyzing adventures when he drives Andy's jallopy, a one-man car if there ever was one. But funniest of all is Andy cramming for an English exam that means everything. He fairly perspires questionable infinitives, is dragged to the exam looking only slightly more vigorous than a wet washrag.

Adler Grabs Brass Ring

Larry Adler and his harmonica stopped the stage cold. Yesterday's younkers at the Capitol's afternoon show whistled, shouted, demanded more and more encores at the top of their voices until Larry finally made a curtain speech introducing the Watson Sisters. There's no doubt about it. You've never heard a harmonica really played until you've heard Adler.

The youthful audience took the veteran Watson girls right to its bosom, too. But the Watson girls, even if they were stars in granddaddy's day, will never grow old. Fanny may be big as a garage, but she's just a Peter Pannette at heart.

Of the certain click type, too, was the balance of the stage bill. The Thompson Brothers and Norma combine ballet technic and tap dancing in brilliant, modern fashion. The Alexander and Santos Revue is crammed with color. And Sam Jack Kauffman and his orchestra, with Singer Lynn Allison, "give" in their best form in a "Desert Song" overture.

MARY HARRIS.

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 6 (INS).—Mae West has herself a movie job! Yes indeed! She signed a contract with William Shapiro, who brought Bobby Breen to the coast. Shapiro, at one time associated with Sol Lesser, obtained capital to finance the West movie. And now here's, to me, the part that should make even the Sphinx smile—Shapiro has an option on John Barrymore's services and is trying to get him to play opposite La West.

PARSONS

Bernard Schubert, who has authored the story, pictures Mae as an older glamour girl, who is satiated with romance and tired of the world until she meets her ideal man—John Barrymore, no less—a retired hero. Then love blooms all over again for both. Ah me! Ah me! And here's something for the books—Mae, of all things, is being backed by New England capital.

The three hard ridin', hard actin' lads at Universal—Dick Foran, Leo Carrillo and Andy Devine, are down for seven movies with Latin-American backgrounds. Universal plans to give these movies a Mexican and Argentine flavor with a view of courting the patronage of our sister country. The first is "Beyond the Pampas" and the second, "In Old Monterey." A good time to film movies that appear to our sister countries, with Uncle Sam so eager to show his friendship for Mexico and South America.

Pat Dane, the gal-about-town who has been up for contracts at both M-G-M and Warners, finally lands at Metro and the studio has changed her name to Sandra Sherwood. One of the stipulations in the new deal is that Pat (pardon me, Sandra) curtail some of her night-club stepping with a differen beau every night. You really cannot blame these youngsters like Pat—and Lana Turner—for wanting to have a good time. They're pretty and young and good dancers and it's fun being popular. But the studios are smart in realizing that their baby glamour girls must be serious about their careers and get to bed early. Louis B. Mayer believes Pat may be a brunnette Jean Harlow so it's up to her to work hard.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The whisper is that Madeleine Carroll will quietly wed her French captain, Richard De La Roziere, in Miami where she joins him; Ben Bernie's son Jason, who works in the editorial department at Universal, has been called by Uncle Sam and leaves in a few weeks; Bill Cagney, Jimmie's brother, finally parted with his appendix at the Queen of the Angels Hospital; Rudy Vallee took a look at the sun this morning and said, "Mmmm. Unusual California weather."

Quentin Reynolds calls Eddie Moran "A man of a few thousand words;" Rex St. Cyr departed from Hollywood today, bag and baggage. The Cobina Wrights, junior and senior, were at the station to say au revoir; Denials notwithstanding, it's my private opinion that Lupe Velez and "Big Boy" Williams are no longer even remotely interested in matrimony; Bill Holden gifted Brenda Marshall with a new car which he originally bought for himself; Gene Markey is testing Phillip Reed, who has been on the English and Broadway stages for nearly six years; Gloria Swanson arrives here March 20 to talk a movie deal.

William F. McDowell, who has been a studio doorman at Paramount for 15 years, is soon to make his debut as an actor. Well, he has watched them come and go; Richard Wharf and Elizabeth Frazer both in the Lunt-Fontanna play, are being tested at Warners for "King's Row." Speaking of Lynn and Alfred, Ouida and Basil Rathbone are entertaining for them tomorrow night after the theater; also in honor of Somerset Maugham, English author, who is here; Deanna Durbin's future mother-in-law, has sent out cute little pink invitations to a shower for Deanna next Friday.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 6.

PREVIEW: In a private projection room at Radio City Music Hall Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, made mention of the fact that Tuesday was the anniversary of her son's inaugural as President. "I remembered the anniversary," she confided. "I wrote him a letter" . . . The President's mother then was introduced to Oscar and June Levant, parents of a new daughter. "Now that I see Mrs. Roosevelt," Oscar sighed to his wife, "for the first time I realize it's not bad to have a son."

LYONS

DEFEAT: Lady Ashley, widow of Douglas Fairbanks, sr., returned from Hollywood this week. She had submitted to a screen test for George Cukor, but decided to forego a film career. . . . Joan Crawford had appeared with Lady Ashley in that screen test—one of the most unusual tests ever given in the movie colony. The film novice had not been told what lines she'd have to recite. She and Miss Crawford simply were placed in front of a camera. She heard: "Camera!" then "Action!"—and Miss Crawford started to beat her. That was the test. . . . "Let's try it again," Cukor directed—and so again Joan Crawford started hitting Lady Ashley—but this time harder. . . . "Thank you very much," said Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, sr., "I don't want to be an actress."

ESCAPE: Baron Franz von Werra, the Nazi aviator who escaped from Canada by crossing the border, has been trying to sell his story to all the magazines—with no takers. His story is an amazing one. His plane was shot down while he was flying over England. His English is perfect, and so—posing as an RAF pilot—he hitched a ride to the nearest airport, walked to a plane, and ordered a mechanic to prepare it for flight. Then the alarm sounded, in time to capture him . . . He was taken to Canada. There, after his escape, he found his way to an airport, and hid in the bushes, waiting for a pilot to leave plane unguarded, with engine running. It was while he was waiting in the bushes—a long wait, in vain—that his ears were frozen.

COURTESY: Gabin reported that whenever Nazi officers came to Fouquet's, to dine, every Frenchman in the Paris restaurant immediately walked out. One of the officers finally complained to the proprietor: "Your customers are being very impolite. After all, you French have a tradition of politeness. Common courtesy requires that they should wait at least 15 minutes, before they leave" . . . The next day, when the Nazis arrived at Fouquet's, every Frenchman immediately placed his watch on the table, tolled each minute for 15-minutes—and then walked out.

CONFLICT: Alan Corelli of the Theater Authority and American Guild of Variety Artists—known as AGVA—went to Miami Beach last week to correct some situations there. He went to Slapsie Maxie's, where Maxie Rosenbloom was entertaining. . . . Cully Richards, the master of ceremonies there, whispered to Rosenbloom: "Careful. Corelli's here—y'know, the man from AGVA." . . . "So what?" replied Rosenbloom. "They can't squawk. I ain't singing their songs."

CHATTER: Cornelius J. Tiers, the socialite who returned from France two weeks ago, after serving in the Foreign Legion will volunteer for the Army here . . . The movie version of "Tobacco Road" has helped increase the business of the Forrest Theater, where the play is still running. There were standees twice last week . . . A new commercial plane will be christened "The Kay Kyser." Orson Welles, who will leave for Mexico this month to start his next picture, will employ the film stars of Latin America in many of the roles . . . When W. Averell Harriman leaves for his London post this week his baggage will consist of one extra suit, some vitamin pills and woolies . . . A movie deal is being set for Ed Wynn.

NAME: When the Reyners, entertaining at the Village Vanguard, met the proprietor, Mr. Max Gordon—not the theatrical producer—they evidenced the respect due an employer. After a few days, however, they began addressing him as "Max." . . . "Max? Max?" Mr. Gordon protested. "Wait two more days, before you start calling me Max." . . . "Why two days?" Mr. Gordon was asked. . . . "Because that'll be the end of your week," he explained, "and then I'll be owing you money."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 6.

I wondered at what point "Footsteps in the Dark" stopped being satirical and became just plain corny. 'Tis the ultimate in detective stories. Everyone shows up, the socialite amateur sleuth, tolerant inspector, the stupid, bungling police sergeant. It's all terrifically trivial, but amusing. Errol Flynn has a nice light comedy touch, and Brenda Marshall is pictorial. Don't bother your pretty head about the plot: there are turbaned servants, intravenous injections, a blond and the stolen "jools," of course. Incidentally, with Brenda's lovely coloring, wish they'd do her next in technicolor.

HOPPER

Who says Jean Arthur isn't cooperative? Why, she spent a whole day at the Westside Tennis Club, making swimming and tennis pictures for Life magazine. Come to think of it, I don't remember ever seeing Jean in a bathing suit.

With all the beautiful skaters about, Metro's actually searching for one to play in "Dr. Kildare." Remember a few years back they signed Jo Ann Sayers, the ski queen? But she didn't ski. She was introduced as a find in "Kildare." Now is a hit in "My Sister Eileen" on Broadway.

For some time Judy Garland has been tired of her long bob, so decided to do something about it. She did—piled her hair on top of her head into a pompadour, added braids, gave herself the works, then proudly displayed herself to her mother. Her mother looked and said, "Judy, you don't look a day over 58." You've never seen a face—or hair—fall so quickly.

I hear that our rich Americans, like the Dan Toppings and others, have their homes up for sale in Honolulu. They aim to get out before the fleet gets in. Hear that 34 per cent of the inhabitants of the islands are Japanese.

Incidentally, Jayne Shattuck, who was Mrs. Topping, now is Mrs. Durant, is blessed-eventing next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sendrey (he worked on music for "Thief of Bagdad") named their baby girl Merle. Merle Oberon is her godmother . . . Rosemary Lane declares movies are not too far fetched. While driving home from La Quinta, a tire went phhhttt! Nothing worked until she tried Claudette Colbert's old trick in "It Happened One Night," when a 60-year-old rancher stopped and gave her a lift to a gas station. He looked her over and said, "You're one of the 'Four Daughters,' ain't you? No, come to remember, you're a 'Mother' now."

While I was chatting with Charles Boyer, who looks romantic shabbily dressed, in a dingy roadside garage setting in Mexico for "Hold Back the Dawn," he kept looking at a fellow acter who had to bump his head on the hood of an automobile as part of the scene, and Charlie was plenty worried. Not about his scene, but about the other fellow's—and turned to me and said, "If you think acting's not a headache, imagine what that chap's going to nurse tonight." "A blond, probably," spoke up Paulette Goddard.

Army to Ask GuardTraining Be Extended

12 months' training was advisable and that a minimum of six months was essential.

This disclosure came coincidentally with a war department announcement showing that 28 per cent of Army cantonment and construction building is behind schedule and that only 8 per cent of the projects have been completed. This has been a major factor in delaying induction of trainees under the selective service program. These were expected originally to be trained sufficiently in large numbers by September 15, 1941, to give the Army a fairly well schooled nucleus of regulars and trainees and, thus, to permit National Guard members to return home. As of February 28, the last date for which official figures are available, however, only 201,000 draftees had been inducted into service.

Large Force Necessary

It is held obvious here that under modern mechanized war conditions, trainees inducted from this date forward will not be trained sufficiently by next September 15 to let the guardsmen go home, only partially trained themselves. The Army feels that a larger force than would be available without the 223,000 members and 14,000 officers of the National Guard is necessary for national defense as long as the world crisis continues or if it grows more acute. There is little thought in official circles that the war will be over by next fall.

Yesterday's revelation made it appear certain, therefore, that Congress would be called upon to extend the term of active guard service, even though there was no declaration of national emergency, in which case the organization could be kept in service without further legislation.

Although the War Department stated that "exceptional progress" has been made in cantonment erection and construction between January 3 and February 21, despite adverse weather conditions, figures published on the status of the program showed the effect of earlier delay.

Off To a Bad Start

Of the 236 Army camps, cantonments, ordnance and munitions plants under the temporary emergency construction program January 3, 44 projects had not been started, 104 were behind schedule, 60 were on schedule, 20 ahead, and 8 had been completed.

Of 239 similar projects listed February 21, only 13 had not been started, 55 were behind schedule, 129 were on schedule, 24 ahead and 18 had been completed. In other words, on the second date 64 per cent of the projects were on, or ahead of schedule and 8 per cent had been completed.

In line with speeding up the training of men, the Army plans this month to establish replacement centers where soldiers will be given 13 weeks' training in the specialties required by mechanized warfare. These men will be shipped to regular units to replace men who will, in turn, take the special courses in civilian or Army vocational and special traning schools.

Their Golden Wedding Picture

Bullitt Asks Funds To Replace Thefts FromSovietChurch

William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Russia and to France, last night issued a public appeal for contributions to replace holy vessels and other articles stolen from the Church of St. Louis in Moscow.

"Three times recently the Church of St. Louis in Moscow has been entered forcibly at night. The holy vessels have been stolen and the church and altar revoltingly desecrated," Bullitt said.

"This church is the only Catholic church in a sixth of the earth's surface which lies within the boundaries of the Soviet Union to which a foreigner may go freely to mass. The priest of this church is Father Leopold Braun, a native-born American, of New Bedford, Mass.

"Freedom of religion is guaranteed by the Soviet Union in the documents exchanged by the Government of the United States and the Government of the Soviet Union before the United States recognized the Soviet Union. The Church of St. Louis lies close to the headquarters of the OGPU the most powerful and ruthless police organization in the world. In spite of this fact, these thefts and desecrations have continued.

"I appeal to Americans of every church, faith and sect who believe in the right of man to worship God, to contribute for the replacement of the holy vessels and other articles stolen from this Christian church.

"Contributions should be sent to William V. Griffin, Bank of Manhattan, 40 Wall Street, New York."

British Losses Put At 1% of Fascists' In African Drive

London, March 6 (AP).—A British casualty list scarcely more than 1 per cent of the losses suffered by the Italians in the African campaign between November 30 and February 11 was announced to the House of Commons today by Capt. H. D. R. Margesson, the war secretary.

British imperial land forces in that period lost only 438 killed, 87 missing and 1,249 wounded, he said, as against "the capture or destruction of the whole Italian army in East Libya, estimated to exceed 150,000 men."

The war secretary's figures, which did not cover the bitter fighting in the Italian Somaliland, Ethiopia and Eritrea since February 11, were given in connection with his presentation of the army's budget estimates, the amount of which was kept secret.

Large reinforcements have been sent to the Middle East, he added, together with "material aid to our allies."

Japanese Suspects Held in Manila

Manila, (Friday) March 7 (INS).—Several Japanese were held for questioning by Manila police and Philippine constabulary officers today following a raid on Manila's Japanese compound in which an unlicensed radio transmitting set was seized.

Experts Say D. C. Housing Crisis Is Near

days. He said dwelling units are being created here at the rate of 1,500 a month. Public housing agencies have building or projected, he said, 2,049 dwellings for this area.

Four per cent of the homes for sale in this area have a price tag under $6,000, according to Loy Anderson, director of the District office of the Federal Housing Administraiton. The same percentage of homes covered by FHA mortgages, said Keyserling, rent for less than $30, a rental suitable for a family income of $1,800. Keyserling pointed out that the average Government family income is $1,800.

Twelve per cent of FHA homes are for families with incomes under $2,000, 54 per cent for families with incomes from $2,000 to $3,000, 31 per cent for families up to $5,000 and 3 per cent for families over that figure.

Explains Crowded Conditions

S. Miles Montgomery, of the Washington Real Estate Board, countered statements that Washington rents are the highest in the country with the exception of four cities, by pointing out that lack of interurban transport facilities has been a factor in crowding dwellings within the city and therefore keeping land values up.

Montgomery declared that Washington rents have gone up more slowly than those in other large cities, although, he added, "you might say that was because they were higher here to start with."

Ihlder pointed out that although the Alley Dwelling Authority is able to maintain a rent range of from $11 to $39 a month, there remained in Washington families too poor to pay that much even if there were dwellings enough to house them. These families, he said, are the migrants, the employable unemployed who take the "leavings that no one else will take."

To List Vacancies

Mrs. Hoffman disclosed that the housing committee of the District Defense Council will open an office for listing of available dwellings at 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest Monday. The office, she announced, will receive applications for housing facilities on March 17.

A plea for more housing for Negroes was made by Mrs. Lois Sentman of the Council of Social Agencies. "What is being done for Negroes now is a mere drop in the bucket compared to what ought to be done," she declared. "We must have a living wage for all workers and abolition of discrimination."

Anderson contended that Washington builders "are missing a good bet." He said there are less than .8 of 1 per cent colored vacancies in the city.

Cecil Owen, president of the Washington Industrial Union Council urged support of the Randolph rent bill, but Keyserling said he believed there was a good chance that such legislation would prove to be the same "ghastly" failure as its World War prototype.

Keyserling contended that the bill would tend to discourage building and to encourage landlords to overcrowd properties. He said that more housing was the only answer to the problem and most of the panel agreed.

Accuses Corporation Counsel

Mrs. Hoffman accused the corporation counsel's office of failing to act on findings of building code violations by the District building inspector. Robert H. Davis, representing the inspector's office, said the District lacked inspectors. Dr. Ruhland said the Health Department needed eight additional sanitary inspectors. He warned that a sharp increase in the city's disease and death rate would result from housing shortage.

Darr, in opening the meeting, declared that 20,000 persons in the District are living in unfit houses.

British Ridicule Report of Nazi Numbers in Libya

Copyright by New York Times

London, March 6.—The British today described as "fantastic" reports from Washington that the Germans had 100,000 troops in Libya.

Whether or not British information is true, this is what they believe: Some German troops, probably numbered in the hundreds, perhaps numbered in the thousands, have landed in Tripolitania. They have been slipped over there under cover of night. There may be 10 German tanks in the area.

According to British figures, it would have taken 50 ships of 5,000 tons each to transport the men alone, let alone trucks, equipment, food, munition and 1,000 tanks.

It is pointed out also that the British navy is patrolling all the area and would have seen any such extensive transports as would have to be employed in such a major troop movement.

Guarding Our Life Line

The agreement permitting the United States to establish air bases in Panama is the third major step taken in recent months to protect the American life line connecting the Atlantic and Pacific. Our ability to defend the Panama Canal was potentially strengthened when the Administration acquired sites for air and naval bases on various Caribbean Islands from Great Britain last fall. About the same time the canal was put under military control and the construction of numerous protective devices to make it less vulnerable to air attack was undertaken. Either long-range or short-range attacks will thus soon have to be put into the category of foolhardy ventures.

Construction of new bases in Panama has become necessary because of the speed with which modern bombers move. Should bombers break through the outer ring of defenses, they might be able to damage the canal if its defenders had to confine their operations to the narrow strip of the Canal Zone. With searchlights, antiaircraft guns and plane detecters strategically located in the Republic of Panama, the danger of a successful attack will be notably minimized. One base leased from Panama has been undergoing improvements for three years. Because of the "international conflagration" Panama has now agreed to permit the construction of such additional bases as are necessary to an impregnable defense of the canal. And Secretary Hull gives assurance that our Government will lose no time in getting this work under way.

Other preliminary steps remain to be taken, however, before the safety of the American life line can be fully assured. Air bases in other Latin-American countries adjacent to the canal should be made available for defensive use by the United States if that should become necessary. While the Panama agreement was negotiated in accord with a special treaty, it amply demonstrates that the American republics can make their policy of cooperative defense effective without any danger of sacrificing sovereign rights. The United States will occupy the Panama bases only for the duration of the present emergency. In the case of other Latin-American countries it appears that negotiations are not aimed at the occupation of bases but rather at the construction and equipment by each country of bases that would be available for hemispheric defense in case of need. If Panama's action hastens agreement on establishment of other defense bases south of the Rio Grande, it will serve a doubly useful purpose.

Discredited Short Cuts

In effect the Supreme Court told the NLRB, in a decision handed down on Monday, that the task of enforcing the Labor Relations Act cannot be thrown upon the courts through the issuance of blanket orders by the NLRB. The Court upheld that portion of the board's order which instructed the Express Publishing Co. to bargain collectively with its employes and to "cease and desist" from interfering with their rights of self-organization. But it refused to sustain another part of the order by which the NLRB sought to restrain the employer from violating the act in any manner whatsoever.

The effect of the order would have been to subject the employer to a summons for contempt of court on mere allegation by the board that he had violated some other provision of the act. Alleged new offenses would thus have been tried by the court through contempt proceedings, instead of being first investigated in the proper manner by the NLRB. It is not surprising that the Court repudiated that short cut. Fair play does not permit any governmental agency to raise a presumption that a person violating one section of a law will in the future indulge in violation of other unrelated sections.

This emphasis upon straightforward procedure in enforcement of the Labor Relations Act is particularly timely because of the War Department's attempt to enforce that measure through defense contracts. When Undersecretary of War Patterson appeared before the House Judiciary Committee he was reminded that Congress has on several occasions refused to make compliance with Federal labor laws a prerequisite in the awarding of Government contracts. The reason for that position is crystal clear. Questions as to what constitutes a violation of the NLRA may be carried to the Supreme Court. To hold up defense orders while such decisions are being made would be unthinkable. It is strange that the War Department, which is primarily concerned with speedy production for defense, should cling to an impediment which neither Congress nor the courts has sanctioned.

We Think We're Right

A majority of the members of the House evidently agree with The Post's view that this is no time for boosting farm subsidies. For the House has passed the agricultural appropriation bill after decisively rejecting a series of proposed amendments calling for heavy increases in parity payments on five basic farm crops. The debate on parity payments was touched off by Representative Cannon's attack on a Post editorial denouncing farm bloc efforts to make the national emergency an excuse for further raids on the Treasury. Mr. Cannon argued that The Post was inconsistent in objecting to more subsidies to raise farm prices to 1914 levels when The Post itself is charging more for its own news and advertising services than in 1914 and paying increased wages and salaries. If newspaper publishers, singly or as a class, were appealing to the Federal Government for funds with which to offset increases in operating expenses and declining profits, the remarks of the gentleman from Missouri would have some point. But there can be no valid comparison between the wage payments made by unsubsidized private employers and the subsidies handed out by the Government to one class of producers at the expense of all the people. The former payments are conditioned by economic factors largely beyond the control of the individual employer. Parity payments and all other farm benefits are subject to legislative determination and are limited only by the taxing and borrowing capacity of the Government itself.

Mr. Cannon also challenged The Post's assertions that the present scale of benefits is ultra-generous, that the farmer's economic position is improved, and that the general index of prices received by farmers is the highest since 1937. Facts speak for themselves: passage of the agricultural appropriation bill will make available for the benefit of farmers more than $1,000,000,000. That is a huge sum judged by any except the distorted standards of legislators dazzled by visions of defense billions. And the Bureau of Agricultural Economics—not The Post—is responsible for the optimistic opinion concerning the farmer's improved prospects. The Post would not presume to question the authoritative judgment of this conservative fact-finding agency.

Although the would-be Treasury raiders were finally routed, the debate on parity payments made it painfully clear that a large number of Congressmen believe the defense spending program justifies another boost in agricultural subsidies. Representative Stefan of Nebraska provided a typical argument in favor of giving the farmers a bigger slice of the defense melon: "We close our eyes and vote billions," he said, "for battleships, guns, powder, tanks, airplanes and other death-dealing material. We do not debate those gigantic appropriation bills very long because we want national defense. We are told that in these times of crisis we must just throw money away. So let the farmers participate in some of this spending." The only pertinent reply to such dangerous and specious reasoning is that the defense program is not a pump-priming scheme. It is an essential mobilization of our resources and man power to safeguard our national security. We must spend less rather than more for farm relief and other nondefense purposes to conserve our national strength. To do otherwise would be to encourage a dissipation of our reserves which would increase our vulnerability to attack.

Tit For Tat

In requesting the United States to close our consulates in Naples and Palermo, the Italian government was within its rights. Less could be said for the order promulgated in Rome prohibiting foreign diplomats from leaving the capital without the express permission of the authorities. The United States did not protest this order which very considerably restricted Ambassador Phillips and his staff in the performance of their duties. But the Department of State has now replied with comparable action. Italy has been asked to close her consulates at Detroit and Newark, and all Italian consular and other officials except the personnel of the embassy here have been notified to "confine their movements" to the areas in which they have their official duties. The Italian Ambassador is also requested to keep the Department of State "concurrently informed of movements outside of Washington of the military and naval personnel attached to the Italian Embassy." As The Post pointed out on February 14: "There is no reason why the rule of reciprocity which lies at the bottom of an exchange of envoys should not work both ways." And, in view of the restrictions imposed on the movements of Franklin M. Gunther, our Minister to Rumania, now German-occupied territory, there is no reason why the action of the Department of State in the case of Italian officials in this country should not be applied to the representatives of Nazi Germany as well.

Greece Stands Firm

"The future may be arduous," Anthony Eden, the British foreign secretary, told the Greek people on the eve of his departure from Athens, "but be assured that we shall not rest nor falter until the final victory is won." How arduous that future may be for them the Greeks know full well. The meaning of Germany's military occupation of Bulgaria needs no underlining. It is a pistol pointed at Greece's throat. The presence of a considerable German force on Bulgaria's southern border thus constitutes a brutal invitation to the Athens government to abandon the war with Italy and, like Rumania and Bulgaria, become a satellite in the "new order."

Thus far, however, the Greeks have given no indication that they are or will be intimidated. On the contrary, the communique issued by the High Command on Wednesday shows no weakening of the determination of the Greek kingdom to fight for its liberty and independence. "The army and the Greek people," says that statement, "have decided to face events, no matter from what direction, and to fight on with the same undying will for their liberty and their fatherland." And another communique issued at the conclusion of the parley between Mr. Eden, Gen. Sir John G. Dill, chief of the British Imperial General Staff; Premier Korizis and King George of Greece declared that "they have found themselves in complete agreement on all points of the situation."

There can be no doubt that as a consequence of Bulgaria's capitulation to the Nazis, Hitler is now in a position to strike out against Greece and thus put that brave nation in a tightening vise. Yet actual military operations against Greece would complicate his task. For there is at least a possibility that if Greece resists a German assault Turkey may decide to abandon her perch on the sidelines and implement her alliance with Great Britain. On the other hand, the show of resistance manifested by the Athens government may induce Hitler to strike at once before any large numbers of British troops and planes can be sent to the Greek peninsula. The next few days are likely to be crucial for the Balkans.

Gutzon Borglum

John Gutzon de la Munthe Borglum, to give this lover of bigness his big baptismal name, was an artist with an inborn and possibly quite unconscious gift of showmanship. In this, as in his irascible temper, he resembled Cellini, but for versatility he must be compared to Leonardo. Sculpture was only one of the tempestuous activities that kept him in the public eye for the latter half of his seventy-some years.

No doubt he owed much of his fondness for great magnitudes and masses to the same influences that made his brother, Solon Borglum, a great animal sculptor, for their early life was spent among the vast perspectives of the Rocky Mountains. He also owed some of it to the peerless Rodin, whose pupil he was for a time and whose influence is perceptible in nearly all of Borglum's work. But the pupil carried his instinct for the massive and heroic to extremes that the master can scarcely have dreamed of—whole mountainsides and compositions involving more than a thousand figures. It was sculpture on a scale that rivaled the greatest ancient and modern works of engineering, and future generations will doubtless include the Mount Rushmore Memorial, for instance, among the wonders of this age.

Thus if that artist is greatest who, like Praxiteles or Michelangelo, best evokes the genius of his age, then Gutzon Borglum was the greatest sculptor of modern America. More than any other he expressed the audacious spirit of his generation and of its cult of great magnitudes. It was this same generation which produced the great skyscrapers, the great hydroelectric dams, the great bridges, the billion-dollar corporations and the Hollywood entertainment industry. It is interesting to note that the adjectives oftenest used by critics to describe Borglum's work—even his statues—are the favorite words of our times: "amazing"—"colossal"—"stupendous!"

"On Being Too Current"

I wish to express my deepest appreciation for the article "On Being Too Current," by Walter Lippmann, in The Post of March 1.

No truer words were ever spoken and it has long been my opinion that such education as he outlines would truly educate and bring the youth of the country into sympathy with their elders, and tend to heal the segregation which seems such a serious menace to parents as monitors, as well as the present class effrontery of the so-called Youth Movement which makes so much front page sensationalism in the daily news.

After all is sifted there are only a few essentials in life, as everyone finds out by experience—even youth—and inevitably history repeats itself. So, for their own safeguard, respect to elders and a willing listening to the voice of experience should be taught and insisted upon in the home, school and church.

The Chinese hold together so well today—in a new order—because they have learned obedience and reverence. Without these essentials in education, we, rather than being "modern," revert thousands of years in the training of our youth.

Virginia's Heritage

I should like to extend a hand of thanks to Senator Glass for his stand as a gentleman from Virginia. Senator Glass is carrying on for those great statesmen who have gone before him—George Washington, Madison, Monroe, Jefferson, Patrick Henry—Virginians all, who faced all crises with the fearlessness and wit that has made our country one to be respected and feared all over the world. Hold that line, Senator! Virginia is looking at you.

Court Practice

All good citizens will applaud your exposure of the improper handling of the case of an attorney driving his car while under the influence of liquor, when a lesser offense was allowed to be filed in Police Court and the defendant permitted to pay out under it.

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech is to be commended for reopening the case. Whoever was responsible for the way the case was handled in the first place should be punished. Such practices cannot be tolerated in our Police Court, even though the offenses charged may be of a minor character. Corrupt court practice will do more to break down good government and the proper administration of justice than anything, and when a people has lost confidence in its courts, government by men instead of by law is not far off.

"War Is Hell"

Hitler is alleged to have said that if Germany wins, every one will have to learn to speak German. If the time ever comes when we have to refer to a "hone" as a rasiermesserstein, then we will surely know how right Sherman was when he said that "War is hell."

Strikes And Defense

Are our American young men being treated justly by the present Administration when they must be drafted in time of peace, give up their work, have their careers broken and blasted and their home life sacrificed? Many have just started on what they hoped to be their life's work, with a young wife, and the beginnings of a home. All are shattered, and what do they get for this sacrifice? One dollar a day.

If we are true American citizens we are willing to defend our country at any cost against an attacking enemy, and we welcome preparedness in any form. But my complaint is the discrimination being shown. If a young man refuses to answer the call, he is branded a slacker, a deserter, and is punished by our Army. And justly so. But what is our Administration doing to the thousands of union strikers who are now within the draft age, and probably will not be called to arms because they are working in our industrial plants on defense work. And yet they refuse to work; they strike for higher wages, slow up defense work and demoralize the whole plan of protecting our democracies against the enemy. These strikers are well paid and well protected on their jobs. They make no sacrifices, while those who are drafted and sent to camp are giving up their all for $1 a day, and may have to fight to protect these strikers and the industrial plants.

Will our Government control the unions or will the unions control the United States Government and industry? The question of strikes on defense work should have been safely worked out by Congress at the very beginning of our entrance into the plan to furnish help to the Allies and prepare ourselves. The strong arm of the law should at once correct and control the lawlessness now practiced by the unions. Every man on defense work should be drafted. The unions should not be permitted to deprive a laborer of work or charge heavy dues for membership. The fees now exacted are nothing short of a gangster racket, yet are allowed by our Government. If these evils cannot be stopped by our Administration, then we are unworthy of the name democracy. If our President can defend warring nations across the ocean, he can defend our country and stop these strikes on defense work.

Walter Johnson

In the special election to be held to elect a Representative in the Sixth Maryland District, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Byron, all minds will focus on Walter Johnson as the probable Republican candidate. I write this from the stands, so to speak, but knowing Walter Johnson's extreme modesty, I apprehend that it will be difficult to prevail on him to accept the nomination. That is as it should be. Our theory of government is that the office should seek the man. The individual who muscles in and drafts himself for any important elective position richly deserves defeat at the ensuing election.

Walter Johnson will live in baseball's Hall of Fame. He was a great player up to the day he gave up the game to live the quiet life of a farmer. He was not spoiled by applause from the stands, because he possessed character, as Abe Lincoln, Cal Coolidge and Will Rogers possessed it. His like is badly needed in public life today.

Walter Johnson's friends should immediately rally to his support and insist on his nomination. He made it a close race in November with the Presidential contest as a handicap. He can be elected at this time.

"The Unready Republic"

One could wish that the admirable series of articles by Duncan Aikman on "The Unready Republic" in The Post might be made required reading. Representing, as they do, four months of Nation-wide first-hand contacts by a responsible journalist, these articles afford a shining contrast to the subjective material turned out by columnists and special writers whose motives are so apparent that their message loses value in the reading of it. Indeed, so clearly written and so closely reasoned is Aikman's contribution to intelligent public opinion that, because of its very excellence as journalistic material, it may miss a majority of readers whose daily pabulum is the comic strips and the sports pages. If ever there was a crucial time for citizens of this Republic to inform themselves on current events, very surely this is that time, when the Nation hovers on the brink of involvement in this world revolution that is already much more than a war.

Already it becomes evident that prodigious appropriations of billions of dollars are being in considerable measure squandered and wasted. Nowhere does there appear any adequate conception of the truth that our involvement in the general world struggle necessarily involves enormous individual and group sacrifices. Instead, the whole body politic appears to find in national defense an opportunity for pecuniary gain, an up-surge of the same "prosperity" which in the 20's led to the collapse of 1929. I quote from the first installment of Aikman's syndicated series published in The Post February 25:

"Fundamentally we are planning for profits first and defense afterwards . . . The physical plant of the United States is organized for separate individual transactions, not for coordinative effort . . . Along many top sectors of the business and industrial front I found an almost religious suspicion that unselfish organization is in itself immoral." And the characteristic answer Aikman finds far and wide on his four months' tour of the Nation is, "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

This is the antipodes of ballyhoo. It has no advertising value. But there ought to be some way of hypodermically injecting it into the public consciousness at this eleventh hour. In the wild confusion of what we are pleased to call national defense, while from 19 to 36 strikes for higher pay hold up production of necessary military material, while the overlords of the lumber industry combine to shove up prices for Government contracts from 25 to 32 per cent, while 40 per cent of the draftees in some States are reported physically unfit for military service, while 41 new hotels are opened in Miami to catch the flood tide of war profiteering vacationers, many of whom are stymied from European pleasure jaunts while this streamlined jamboree gathers headway much as the corresponding floods rose in 1917-18, the same old discredited "military experts" are adding up their columns of figures and already boasting of what the United States will do to poor Japan and the misguided Axis!

Six months from now these materialistic forecasts will make strange, if not sad, reading to a disillusioned "American way of life." In this world revolution money cannot conquer men in the long event. Material cannot break indomitable, self-sacrificing spirit. We are riding headlong into a vast world-wide showdown. And when, as very soon we shall be, we are inextricably involved in the conflict which we have done nothing sanely to avoid, let us hope there may come a national awakening to new values.

The Post Impressionist

The Life Of The Ship

He is the life of the ship. You know—one of those fellows who are never happy unless they are organizing sports, running sweepstakes, getting up concerts or arranging futile and fatiguing tugs-o'-war.

All ships carry them. They slap you on the back when you are just dozing off in a comfortable deck chair after lunch and drag you off to play a round in the quoits tournament. Their heavy hands fall on your shoulder at the very moment when the pretty girl in the white beret has at last acknowledged your existence, and you are removed, protesting feebly, to the lounge where a game of something or other is about to begin. They bellow raucously in your ear about entering the deck-tennis championship matches whenever you settle down for a quiet smoke, and unless you are very, very firm they put you down for some conjuring tricks at the third-class concert, when the only really effective trick you know is to make liquid disappear from an ordinary glass.

They are the men who have all the deck chairs hidden away on the very day you really feel in need of restful quiet, and instead you find yourself sitting foolishly astride a wooden pole while an athletic young matron swats you freely on the head with a sandbag until you fall off. You trail miserably away and have just succeeded in catching the smoking-room steward's sympathetic eye when the Life of the Ship pokes his head in and roars, "Ah, there you are!" And as you crawl into the sunlight you are knocked over by a ridiculous massive lady in full cry, carrying an egg in a spoon. She is obviously overheated and angry, and appeals to the judges for a foul and you have to explain that you really had not bet on the lean spinster who was limping along half a lap behind her.

After dinner, when you are making for the boat deck with the charming widow who wants to see the Southern Cross, a hand like a leg of mutton clutches your arm.

"One minute, old man. Miss McGinnis is waiting for you. You know, you're her partner in the bridge tournament."

Yes, you know. You had been trying to forget it ever since you first saw Miss McGinnis and realized what people meant when they talked about the luck of the draw. And, of course, someone else comes up just then and goes off with the widow, leaving you wishing that skippers were still as handy with the yardarm as they used to be.

The Life of the Ship came to me one steaming evening in the tropics.

"We're getting up a little Treasure Hunt tonight," he said. "Want you all to enter. Lots of fun in it, you know."

I didn't know, but I agreed. Somehow, when the Life of the Ship suggests anything, I always agree. It saves a lot of trouble.

At dinner the stewards distributed neatly typed documents, which stated that competitors in the Treasure Hunt would assemble in the lounge and on a given signal would disperse on the search, using the clues provided. As we duly assembled, the Life of the Ship subdued the clamor and explained that the hidden treasure consisted of a small flat object. Careful and intelligent attention to the clues would, he assured us, lead straight to its hiding place, and the first to find it would be suitably rewarded. Then he gave the release signal and everyone talked at once. Personally, I lingered in the hope that the pretty girl in red would share the rigors of the search with me. I was, in fact, just about to suggest the desirability of such a course, when a shrill feminine voice piped high above the din.

"I'll bet you're sitting on it!"

The Life of the Ship went very red as a sweet young thing pointed an accusing forefinger. Without a trace of the beaming smile we all knew so well, he snappped back, "How do you know?"

But the game was up, and very reluctantly he arose, disclosing the small flat object—to wit, a penny, lying on the cushion of his chair.

"Looks like it didn't work," he growled, apologetically. "I'm afraid I'll have to ask all of you to step outside for a minute while I hide it again and change the clues."

"Don't I get the prize?" the sweet young thing wanted to know.

The Life of the Ship fixed her with a glittering eye. "Certainly not. You didn't follow the clues."

"I found the penny, didn't I?" she protested.

The Life of the Ship positively scowled. "You did. But not honestly."

The sweet young thing stiffened. "I beg your pardon!"

The Life of the Ship shifted uneasily. "I mean you must have seen me put it there."

The girl flushed. "How dare you!" She turned appealingly to a stalwart husband. "I didn't see him hide it, did I?"

The Life of the Ship threw up his hands.

"Of course you didn't. You just guessed," he said, witheringly. He snatched up the penny, put it in his pocket, glared around and marched away, turning at the door to shout, "The treasure hunt is off!"

But the husband followed him.

"Say, he isn't going to accuse my wife of cheating," he growled. "I'll make him apologize for that."

Half an hour later I took the pretty girl in red on an informal treasure hunt of our own. And, leaning over the rail in an attitude of gloomy despair, we saw the solitary figure of the man who had once been the Life of the Ship.

The Race Against Freedom

THE OPPOSITION group in the Senate seems to be under the illusion that they are running a race with the President and with the people of the United States. They are not. They are running a race with Hitler.

THOMPSON

And what they are doing for Hitler is to put this whole Nation on a treadmill, so that we cannot run at all. They are paralyzing the Government; they are disrupting unity; they are creating the breeding ground for dissension; they are stimulating fear; they are fostering distrust.

And in doing so they are retracing here the pattern of behavior that destroyed the Republic of France.

THE LEASE-LEND bill is not being discussed. What is being discussed is the entire American foreign policy, which the opposition group is attempting to set completely adrift in a moment of desperate danger; leaving this country without leadership, without a chart to follow, rudderless and unprotected.

The foreign policy was clear at the beginning of this debate. It had been ratified by 49,000,000 American voters in the Presidential elections, whether they voted for Mr. Roosevelt or for Mr. Willkie. That policy was to do everything within our financial, technical, industrial and labor means to keep Britain up, while we armed ourselves.

After the elections, the only cry from the country was for more leadership, more energy and for swifter and more coordinated action. When the President made his first post-election speech, indicating leadership and action, all parties and all classes felt relief that the Government intended to steer this Nation with a steady hand along the charted course.

The lease-lend bill was offered by the Administration as a means of efficiently integrating our own defense effort with support for Britain. Certain amendments were offered by the leaders of the opposition. Mr. Willkie revealed himself as a statesmanly and patriotic American, able to put first things first and country above party in the world's most critical hour. For this he has been ruthlessly knifed by many of his own followers, who thereby have revealed the insincerity of their support of him all the time.

AS THIS nightmarish debate goes on it becomes revealed that the isolationist Senators are not performing their function as members of a deliberative body, but are using the Senate as a rostrum from which to agitate the country, confuse and disrupt the foreign policy of the United States, defeat not only the President but the Secretaries of State, Navy and War as well as the Defense Board, and thus paralyze all action.

Senator Nye uses the occasion for a prolonged attack on Great Britain, an attack containing preposterous and untrue statements against the Empire and Commonwealth with which we have been at peace for over a hundred years, and which in a world aflame with war and revolution is our only possible ally.

Senator Holman picks up, almost verbally, the official Nazi propaganda and depicts the struggle in the world as a plot of international bankers, in the face of the cold fact that the appeasers in every country in the world have been in the highest financial and industrial circles, and in France contributed to sell out their country to fascism and to the enemy.

Senator Wheeler in an only slightly veiled way takes up Hitler's other cry that opposition to him is all a Jewish plot.

And our "isolationism" turns into a concerted attempt to make us the enemies of God and the world, while the "interventionism" becomes reversed. Interventionism is going on with a vengeance—the intervention of Nazi Germany in the internal affairs of the United States.

The opposition in the United States Senate, now, as during the elections, is writing the propaganda for fascism and parroting it. Their own words come back to us from Mr. Goebbels and from Mussolini, who, in his last speech, attacked Roosevelt as an American dictator and shed crocodile tears over the collapse of American democracy.

EDWIN W. THORN, past commander of the Paris post of the American Legion, returning Wednesday from France, reported that Gestapo men in Paris had told him that the Germans would be in London by June and that the United States was next."

"You will be sold out at home," they said.

Hermann Rauschning, who more than any other living man has accurately revealed the plans of Hitler, warned that Hitler's theory is that the American party system, personal political jealousies, class, sectional and racial cleavages can be so exploited as to render America paralyzed and impotent.

We have before us the contemporary history of the whole pattern of a technique. Divide friends, smash alliances, stir up partisan political hatreds, support the Communists, support the Fascists, support the pacifists, agitate them all against each other, conduct smear campaigns against those who try to reveal the full picture. Strike when a nation is divided.

THE NEW YORK DAILY NEWS, on February 25, commenting on a speech of Senator Reynolds', quotes the Senator as believing that "a revulsion, perhaps violent," will inevitably come against the present Administration as a result of the difficulties and dislocations that these terrible times are bound to bring in their wake. Senator Reynolds is preparing his own future political career with that moment in view. So is Senator Wheeler, who announces that he will continue to attack the Government from the public platform even if the bill passes.

Col. Lindbergh, in his Chicago speech last summer, indicated boldly that he anticipated a Nazi victory and that it would then be necessary for us to make a treaty "with the dominant power of Europe," and his wife says that nazism and communism are riding the wave of the future. Lawrence Dennis, who fancies himself as the Alfred Rosenberg of the coming American fascism, looks ahead to the moment when Britain falls and predicts a new "in" "elite" of politicans and intellectuals.

WHILE THE "elite" of the coming new order in America occupy the respectable foreground, the popular demagogues mobilize the mass following among the disgruntled, the gullible, the frustrated. Gerald L. K. Smith, Joe McWilliams, Winrod, Elizabeth Dilling, Father Coughlin and innumerable lesser lights blend the familiar pattern of racial antipathy, antitrade unionism, and vague populism, with a drop of the Oxford Movement and Buchmanism, and prod Americans to persecute each other all under the pious mask of avoiding war.

The Britain of Churchill and Bevin becomes the menace to freedom and democracy, and not the Germany of Hitler and the Italy of Mussolini.

Thus, in the guise of keeping us out of war, we are being prepared for the plunge into paralysis, chaos and revolution.

THE PATTERN became traced during the Presidential elections, when a separate defeat-Roosevelt campaign, run by anti-Willkieites, contributed to defeat Mr. Willkie and prepare the way for paralyzing the leadership of the President.

Now we see the second stage in the round. The battle of the twentieth century is not only fought over the English Channel and in Greece and Africa—it is being fought in Washington—fought by a handful of men, against a majority of the Senate, against the President and his Cabinet, and against the American people themselves, a minority dictating paralysis by a filibuster and crying out against the "dictatorship" of majority opinion.

AMERICANS, learn from the history of your times, before it is too late.

Defense Problem

By Ernest K. Lindley

Employment Service

WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN has called upon all defense contractors to recruit their workers through the offices of the United States Employment Service. Next week the other side of the coin will be revealed—a campaign to register with this service every person who may be available for work or training in occupations required by defense industries.

The United States Employment Service has 1,500 local offices, under State direction. Already it has done a Trojan job of registering and classifying workers with special reference to their usefulness in defense industries.

LINDLEY

Why a single clearance system for defense labor is needed is trenchantly stated by Mr. Knudsen. Too many employers are importing labor when labor just as well equipped is still available in their own localities or regions. Too many are advertising for workers—and drawing many who are not suitable for their use. Too many are raiding other defense industries.

The results are confusion, unnecessary migration, and the slowing up of production by superfluous shifting of labor from one factory to another. Some employers would prefer to take fully trained workers from other industries—even if they have to pay more than they would pay for somewhat less well-trained workers in their own localities. Others would prefer to import labor, with the hope of getting it at lower wages. Either way, there is a loss to national defense. And often the post-war problem of readjustment is made more difficult.

THESE DISTURBANCES can be reduced if all employers will use the offices of the United States Employment Service. It is in the best position to know what the local labor supply is—at all levels of training and experience. If labor of the type needed is not available locally, it knows best where to find it.

That is the theory, and to a considerable extent it is the practice. The campaign to register all potential labor with these offices should make these offices beyond all doubt the best channel for obtaining labor.

The call for registration will, of course, emphasize all the skills needed in aircraft and aircraft-engine making, shipbuilding, and machine shops and machinery manufacturing.

The public employment offices are also the channel to the training schools which are now set up for defense workers.

If you have done mechanical work but are rusty, you can take a "refresher" course in a public school. Workers needing "refresher" courses are referred to the school authorities by both the public employment offices and WPA.

If you already have a job but want to improve your skill, you may be able to get a special supplementary course.

If you are employed, or unemployed, you may be able to receive training on the job. Training on the job is highly favored by many of the industrialists in the defense setup, including Mr. Knudsen.

MEN WITH THE right aptitudes can learn single operations, even rather difficult ones, with remarkable speed. As the defense industries, especially in the production of aircraft, are being expanded, work is being subdivided. For the emergency period a man who can learn to operate a single machine can be useful and earn a good wage. A few examples are on record in which almost an entire corps of workers has been reproduced within a few weeks simply by taking on one learner to work with each member of the original force. The learner shortly learns his part of that particular task, even though he may not be an all-around machinist or machine operator or metal worker.

For persons desiring more thorough training, there is always the traditional apprentice training. This, as a rule, is much too slow for national defense purposes. Short cuts must be devised, and both industrialists and labor are finding them.

For young workers without experience, the National Youth Administration is one of the best avenues to a defense job. The NYA provides what it calls "work experience," and this is increasingly geared to defense needs. Recently I visited the Cleveland Youth Center, in which some young men were getting enough experience within 30 to 90 days to get beginners' jobs in defense industries. The NYA, incidentally, was screening out the errors which even the most skilled personnel directors in industry make in hiring men.

The Civilian Conservation Corps also provides some job experience with pay.

But whatever the method of training, the United States Employment Service and its State-controlled local offices are being established as the main channel between the labor supply and jobs. The drive for registration which is to begin next week should fortify it.

MR. KNUDSEN has come about as close as anyone can come in a democratic system to telling employers—and workers—that in the interests of national defense they must use this channel.

The Art Of Sarcasm

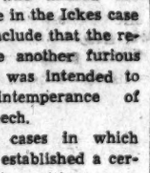
ANY WISE editor will tell you, probably, on the basis of painful experience, that irony and deadpan sarcasm are dangerous weapons, because persons of literal mind cannot detect subtlety. In our business we learn this the hard way, as, in my case, the time I wrote that marriage was a casual relationship in this country and the marriage compact a frivolous agreement by comparison with the mortgage or the lease, because it was revokable almost at the will be either party and was repudiated in and by the courts in one case out of every six. Several religious publications construed this as an indorsement of a condition which it was intended to deplore.



PEGLER

An important case in point occurred recently in New York where the Protestant Digest Associates hailed Harold L. Ickes before a large company and, in a spirit which surely must have been one of mockery, presented him with a citation for tolerance. Of course, Mr. Ickes himself strove to dispel any public impression that the citation could have been sincerely meant when, in response to this clever jest, he denounced Maj. Al Williams and Col. Charles Lindbergh as Quislings, who would "cravenly spike our guns and ground our planes in order that Hitlerism might more easily overcome us."

BY THAT TIME it must have been apparent to all present that the citation could have had no other purpose than to reveal the violent intolerance with which Mr. Ickes commonly reacts to any opinion conflicting with his own. But cold print, lacking tone of voice and the play of facial expression, could not convey to the greater number who were there any other impression than that the hosts of the evening actually did honor Mr. Ickes as an uncommonly tolerant man.

I need not point out that if, in future, the same organization should wish to honor some genuinely tolerant citizen in all seriousness those who missed the point of the joke in the Ickes case might easily conclude that the recipient must be another furious bigot whom it was intended to pillory for intemperance of thought and speech.

I might cite cases in which persons, having established a certain character in writing, were sadly misunderstood when they pitched their change of pace. One was an effort of mine in which, on a sudden fancy, I eulogized Knute Rockne—an experience so startling to him that he notified our sports editor, Arch Ward, a Notre Dame alumnus, that the rewards of public life were not worth the pain of such cunning slurs, and that he was forthwith resigning his job as coach of the Irish. Mr. Ward then realized the tribute and persuaded him to reconsider, but could not convince him that a vinegar cruet ever gave syrup, nor could I.

SIMILARLY, the late Bill McGeehan, of the Herald Tribune, after years of impish lampooning of the grotesque dignity of William Muldoon as the Duke of Muldoon, on one of Muldoon's last birthdays praised him lavishly as a wise and noble citizen, only to evoke from the duke a protest to the editor against such vicious sarcasm. Mr. Muldoon said he didn't mind open criticism but would not submit to dirty innuendo from any man.

In another instance Gene Fowler was assigned to greet Charles Levine on the return from Europe of a man who had flown the Atlantic as passenger and then, without so much as a student pilot's license and all alone, had taken off in his multi-motored plane from Paris and put it down safe in London. Levine had been ridiculed rather than praised for this amazing exploit, so Fowler, on a generous whim of his own, hailed him as a man of inspiring bravery to the extent of more than a column, only to be told by his city editor that his "veiled and nasty anti-Semitism" could not pass the desk while he was there.

SO ALTHOUGH the Protestant Digest Associates have a right to their joke, I would point out that such humor often defeats itself and suggest that henceforth they make their fun more obvious.

Of Balkan Rumors And Realities

THE BALKAN atmosphere is thick with rumors these days. Some have the hallmarks of Dr. Goebbels' propaganda mill which has been working overtime in Budapest, Sofia, Belgrade and Bucharest, not to mention Berlin and Rome. It always does on the eve of a crisis. Other rumors give evidence of wishful thinking. Still others are buttressed with supporting data. Others are not. All of them must be taken with a grain of salt.

NOVER

Russia is the subject of a host of these rumors. One of the most spectacular is that the Kremlin has sent an ultimatum to Rumania demanding the cession of territory on the Black Sea. The basis of this rumor is the fact, admitted in Bucharest, that the Rumanian government is in receipt of a note from Moscow and that the kingdom's puppet dictator, Gen. Ion Antonescu, suddenly found it necessary to fly to Vienna to confer with Field Marshal Goering.

NOW, IT IS not unlikely that this time, as in the fall of 1939, Russia may be allowed a few crumbs from the conqueror's table. The Kremlin's reward then was eastern Poland, to which Russia later added the Baltic republics and the Rumanian areas of Bessarabia and northern Bukovina.

Yet the fact must not be lost to sight that following Russia's action and the Vienna agreement, whereby Hungary was given part of Transylvania and southern Dobrudja was given back to Bulgaria, Rumania received a German guarantee, i. e., a guarantee against further loss of territory to Russia. Rumania was occupied by German troops and lost the little independence left to her. It is doubtful if, under the circumstances, Russia would bother to make any formidable demands on the Bucharest government. If she has any bill to present for her benevolent inaction in the Balkans during the last few months she will present it in Berlin. There is, probably, considerable substance in the London conjecture that the alleged Russian ultimatum to Rumania is German propaganda, designed to create the bogey of a Russian menace in the Balkans and thus permit Hitler to play the role of protector of the Balkan kingdoms against the Red colossus of the East. At a time when the Fuehrer is trying to inveigle Greece, Turkey nad Yugoslavia into the Nazi net, it does not seem unlikely that he would agree to carve up, for Russia's benefit, the first Balkan nation he took under his wing.

FROM SOFIA and from obviously inspired sources at Belgrade come rumors that Yugoslavia is about to give up the struggle to maintain her neutrality and will accept Axis dictation.

That Yugoslavia's position is difficult hardly needs to be emphasized. It was bad enough before the German occupation of Bulgaria. It is worse now that Nazi troops are on another of her borders. And there can be no discounting the possible effect of the terrific pressure which Germany has been applying to the Belgrade government to get it to do Berlin's bidding. At the very best, Belgrade may have to make further concessions to the Third Reich. But it is far too early to assume that Yugoslavia is ready to capitulate.

WHAT YUGOSLAVIA ultimately does may depend in no small measure on the stand taken by Greece and Turkey. If those countries show a readiness to stand up against Germany Yugoslavia's will to resist will be stiffened. In particular, a decision by Turkey to throw her full weight on the side of Greece, if that country is attacked by the German forces now in Bulgaria, would enormously influence Yugoslavia's decision. It might ultimately even lead her to join the anti-Axis front. It would certainly strengthen her determination to stay neutral.

The Turkish position remains an enigma. The Turks continue to talk of maintaining the British alliance unimpaired. What they mean by that is far from clear. They did not join Great Britain when Italy brought the war into the Mediterranean area. They remained on the fence when Greece was attacked. It is still far from clear that Turkey will get off the fence when the German legions now assembled on Bulgaria's southern frontier are given orders to move on Salonika. It is even less certain that the Ankara government is committed in advance to any such course.

POSSIBLY Turkey is waiting to see whether Greece resists and to what extent the British will help her. Greece has performed prodigies of valor against the Italians. But the Greek armies have made no perceptible progress in Albania in almost a month. The Greeks' plight would be serious if, with the bulk of their forces lined up against the Italians, they are subjected to an attack by the Germans. Yet the communiques issued in Athens following the visit of Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, and Gen. Sir John Dill, chief of the Imperial General Staff, shows no weakening in the Greek spirit of resistance, it reveals an uncompromising determination to fight on regardless of odds.

These communiques tend to offset the gloomy forebodings arising out of the circumstances that the Greek minister at Sofia did not follow the example of his British colleague and leave the Bulgar capital when Anglo-Bulgarian relations were broken off and the fact that in an effort not to give Hitler any excuse for invading Greece, the Athens government has so far hesitated to accept a British land force.

IF GREECE continues firm in her determination not to give way to German pressure, it would put a serious crimp in Hitler's plans. These plans do not, in the first instance, call for war on Greece at all. They call, instead, for a capitulation by Greece brought about without the use of force.

A war on Greece by Germany would seem, at first glance, to be a simple matter. It might, however, have unpredictable consequences. For once the fighting begins in Thrace there is no telling whom it might ultimately involve. The possibility certainly cannot be excluded in Berlin that if the Greeks fight Turkey will join the fight and if Turkey does Yugoslavia might, too. Moreover, in any Balkan fighting Germany would have British sea and air power to reckon with. Thus even if Germany won the war in the Balkans, and her chances of winning it would be well-nigh overwhelming, the struggle in that corner of Europe might compel her to postpone her all-out attack on Great Britain or engage in it with less than her full resources.

THAT IS WHY Hitler is using every device of propaganda, pressure and intimidation to achieve a "peaceful" solution of his aims in the Balkans. He may succeed. The odds are very much in his favor. But the stand taken by the Greeks on the occasion of the Eden-Dill visit suggests that the victory he hopes to achieve has not yet been won.

Society Women Take Ambulance Driving Tests—No Accidents Recorded

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The professor said they were good. "That's is," he said, "they're pretty good."

He was speaking of the 41 women who spent nearly three hours on the Mall yesterday afternoon demonstrating that what men say about women drivers is just another example of masculine prejudice.

The women were members of the American Red Cross Volunteer Motor Corps, taking tests by way of learning how to drive an ambulance. In a few weeks most of them will be driving invalid soldiers and veterans from Walter Reed Hospital on recreational tours of the city and otherwise performing necessary chauffeur functions.

The professor is Amos E. Neyhart of Pennsylvania State University, national American Automobile Association consultant on road training. With Dr. F. R. Noffsinger, national A. A. A. educational consultant, he laid out the testing course along Jefferson Drive between Sixth and Seventh Streets Northwest.

First the women had to drive straight for 175 feet along a four-inch white line, pass between two stanchions with six inches clearance on either side and then stop within 40 feet with front tires squarely on four-by-ten-inch white "spots." The stop had to be made so smoothly that a milk bottle placed on the floors of the cars, remained upright.

Then stanchions were spaced every 25 feet along the white line and the women were asked to weave their way through, first forward and then backward, without hitting anything. A Park policeman demonstrated that this phase of the test probably is more easily passed if you use a motorcycle.

At that, only two of the women bumped a stanchion or so, appreciably at least, while a third found it necessary to resort to stopping and backing to negotiate the turns. While she was making these maneuvers an A. A. A. official who deserves the protection of anonymity, remarked:

"I can tell who's driving that car without looking at her face." To which an onlooker with a baby in his arms replied:

"Who is it, your wife?"

In consideration of the fact that the women performed before an audience of scientific driving experts like the professor, a half dozen Park policemen, newspaper photographers and assorted other kibitzers, they would seem to an unbiased observer to deserve about a B- for the course. Sidney R. Gould, instructor in motor mechanics and safe driving, will figure out their grades in a few days.

The professor said the tests had been worked out in years of experimentation to determine ability to maneuver a car in narrow space, to stop smoothly, and to measure such driving skill factors as "thinking time" and "braking distance."

If the women habitually ran past the stop spots—only one or two of them did—it meant that they were potential "rear-end colliders," said the professor. If they stayed on the same side of the white line, it meant that they had "dominant eye," he stated. "A driver with dominant eye sees the white line where it isn't and is apt to be a sideswiper, though not habitually," observed the professor.

The women who took the tests—society leaders and wives of diplomats—included Mrs. W. R. Forester, Mrs. H. G. Brumman, Mrs. Donat M. Wilson, Mrs. Joel R. Parrish, Mrs. B. A. Epperly, Mrs. Audrey L. Snider, Mrs. E. L. Brien, jr., Mrs. Lynn F. Woodworth, Miss Betty Gaither Smith, Mrs. L. P. Holcomb, Mrs. Edward M. Fay, Mrs. Everett Buchan, Mrs. M. L. Hull, Mrs. R. E. Hoyt, Mrs. Virginia R. Mrs. Boston drove soldiers from Walter Reed to the city during the World War. She said she wore out an automobile doing it.

Skilled Hand of Gutzon Borglum, Sculptor of Many Well-Known Federal Monuments, Is Stilled by Death

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

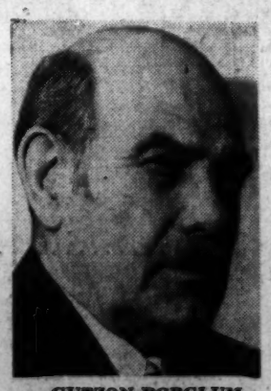
Quiet death, from a heart attack, ended the hectic life of the sculptor Gutzon Borglum in Chicago yesterday.

His face was familiar in Washington, where he frequently came to win support for his gigantic carvings of great American faces on the Black Hills and his genius remains here in marble and bronze.

Notable is his head of Lincoln, the gift of Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, to the Government in 1908. This work is kept in the Capitol Rotunda. The equestrian statue of Civil War Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, Borglum's work, is set in a ring of Norway maples in Sheridan Circle on Massachusetts Avenue and his statue of William Jennings Bryan, describing the "Great Commoner" in an attitude of oratorical peroration, is at Potomac Parkway and Twenty - sixth Street.



GUTZON BORGLUM

Born March 25, 1867, in Idaho and educated at Julian Academy and Ecole des Beaux Arts, Paris, Borglum's career was highpointed in controversy reaching its greatest notoriety in a row with the sponsors of the Stone Mountain Conference Memorial in Georgia.

He was fascinated by gigantic tasks and his mind dreamed over great figures in stone. He responded enthusiastically in 1916 to an invitation to carve a mammoth figure of Gen. R. E. Lee on the Georgia mountain. He went and saw the mountain and decided one figure wasn't enough. His own design would include 200 figures. The World War interrupted it. Resumption came in 1924.

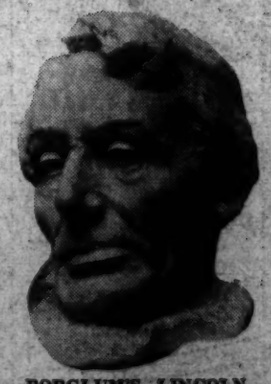
THE HEADS AT MOUNT RUSHMORE

Lee's head, 20 feet high, was carved and a beginning made on other figures. Then controversies arose with the sponsoring committees and Borglum was arrested for alleged malicious intent to destroy his working models. This passed off.

He had startled the Nation in the conservative year 1900. Then his declaration was that all angels are male. This pronouncement was made to critics of his ideas on the sculptural aspects of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Here, in 1939 to attend a Gridiron Dinner, he was asked if American art is on the upswing and replied "it is bound to be. This is because it has hit the bottom." And asked his opinion of Washington architecture he grunted.

Once he strode, in his wide active step, from the realm of great stone men into the more realistic precincts of politics. This was a term of service in the Connecticut House of Representatives.



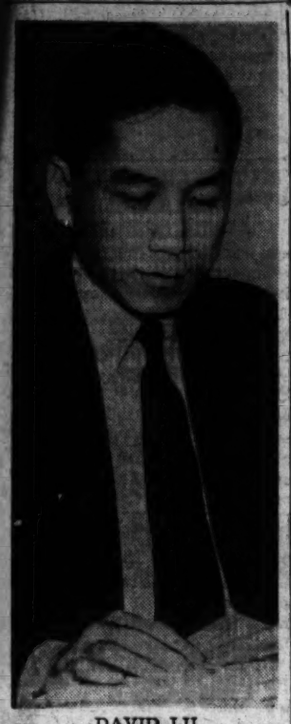
BORGLUM'S LINCOLN

Drama touched his personal affairs. He named his infant son "Lincoln." Then, with the dedication of his Wheeler Memorial Fountain in Bridgeport, Conn., the baby was baptized in its waters.

His salary, of late from the United States Government, was a runner-up to the President's. As sculptor-director of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission his pay in 1938 was $16,013; 1913, $28,494, and 1940, $35,000.

His wife, son and daughter were with him when he died. Physicians said his heart failed from overwork. His son Lincoln, 28, was expected to oversee completion of the vast work Borglum dreamed of and chiseled on Mount Rushmore.

U. S.-Born David Lu Covers Capital for China News Agency



DAVID LU

Has Lived in Orient Most of the Time Since He Was 11

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Washington's fast-growing corps of correspondents now includes the representative of a Chinese news agency—David Lu, of the Central News Agency of China, owned and operated by the Chiang Kai-shek government.

Like his by-line, Mr. Lu is short. He stands only 3 feet 3 inches, so it will be to his advantage to arrive at the White House early on press conference days, if he is to get up where he can see President Roosevelt.

He speaks good American. In talking about the morale of the Chinese people, for example, he says:

"It's tops."

This is not surprising when you know Lu's story. He was born 35 years ago in New York City, where his father ran the City Hall Tea Garden, a chop-suey place popular with the newspapermen of Park Row. He went to the New York public schools until he was 11. Then his father sent him to the old country for his formal education. He attended Lingnan University, an American missionary institution in Canton, and Yenching University, an American-British missionary school in Peiping. He began studying journalism there, and then, in 1930, he enrolled in the University of Missouri School of Journalism, where he remained for two years under an exchange of fellowship.

Registers for Army Service

Lu returned to China the year after the Japanese moved into Manchuria. For the last 8½ years he has been an active newspaperman, working for the Peiping Chronicle, Shanghai Press, Reuters, and, since 1936, the Central News Agency. He was attached to the Hong Kong bureau when he said goodby to his wife and two children and boarded a Pan American Clipper for the flight to San Francisco.

By virtue of his New York birth, Mr. Lu is an American citizen, so one of the first things he did when he came back was to register for selective service. He nearly missed the draft, at that, for he will be 36 in September.

He thinks it is high time that China had a full-time correspondent in the United States, seeing that Japan has 21 of them. He hopes his dispatches will further cement American-Chinese friendship, and he hopes also that some day his agency will be able to service the 12 Chinese newspapers in this country—five in New York, five in San Francisco and two in Chicago.

Reports on McNutt Speech

Correspondent Lu's first dispatch out of this city was based on a story he found in Wednesday's issue of The Washington Post. It concerned a speech by Paul V. McNutt, in which the Federal Security administrator urged American economic aid to China on the same basis as aid to Britain. Lu's dispatches, which go by press wireless, cost 10 cents a word. In China newspaper shops, they are set up by hand. A Chinese compositor, it is said, uses 7,000 characters, and usually walks about 5 miles in setting type for one edition.

Mr. Lu, who is staying at the Lee-Sheraton, joins a coterie of foreign correspondents here who have more freedom than any such group in the world. Its dean is Sir Willmott (Bill) Lewis, brilliant correspondent of the London Times. Others are Kurt G. Sell, veteran correspondent of the German News Bureau; Leone Fumasoni Biondi, of Italy's Stefani Agence; Laurence Todd, of Russia's Tass; Clarke H. Kawakami, an alumnus of Central High School, who represents Japan's Domei Agency, and J. C. Baube and Henry L. Sweinhart, of France's Havas Agency.

Red Cross Grants $10,000 for Greek Quake Sufferers

The American Red Cross yesterday granted $10,000 to the Greek Red Cross for relief of victims of the recent earthquake at Larissa.

Charles L. House, American Red Cross representative in Greece, has been at the scene of the disaster since March 2 cooperating with the Greek Red Cross and government agencies in handling relief work. He reported the town of Larissa was largely destroyed as a result of previous bombings and the earthquake leaving the population almost entirely homeless." He estimated 50 persons were killed and 300 injured by the quake.

The American Red Cross said that relief totaling more than $1,500,000 has been sent or is en route to Greece. Additional shipments are being prepared.

Spaghetti Expert Likes Canned Kind

Student Home From Italy Brings Back A Number of Savory And Exotic Recipes

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Food Editor

JEAN Adkins went to Italy to study languages. She found the Italians with whom she lived and studied to have a great enthusiasm about many things and not the least was their zest for food. Jean found something as glowing in their food as she did in the paintings in their art galleries.

Martha Ellyn,

Perhaps it is because Jean is a home economist, although she is now on the staff of the American Association of University Women here in Washington, that she takes such a keen interest in food wherever she travels.

When Jean returned to the United States she brought along a zeal for Italian food—especially spaghetti. She says that the Italian seems to have an inborn sense of cooking a dish to the "right minute." In some parts of Italy she says that both macaroni and spaghetti are cooked in a piece one yard long and great care is taken not to break it. Also the Italians cooked their spaghetti only 'so long"—"al dente" as they call it. That means just until it is sufficiently firm to be felt "under the tooth" and almost crisp. Sodden macaroni is as unpardonable to an Italian as lumpy mashed potatoes are to American cooks.

Canned Variety Good

Jean said she pondered when she returned to this country if she would ever be able to cook spaghetti to the "turn" of the Italians, and if she could achieve the excellent sauces that are used there. As a business girl in New York, she didn't have much time for preparing meals. But not long after her return she joyfully discovered spaghetti in cans that seemed to fill the favored place in her food preferences. She entertained her friends with spaghetti dinners telling of her experiences while she was away. Now that she has come to Washington she is still giving spaghetti meals.

I was a guest at one of these dinners recently and Jean carried it out in a simple but effective way. She served her favorite brand of canned spaghetti, a bowl of mixed vegetable salad with a distinctive Italian dressing, the popular Italian wine, Chianti; stuffed olives, Italian bread and a large bowl of fruit composed of bananas, grapes, apples and pears and a strong demi-tasse.

The stuffed olives were very novel. These are the directions that Jean gave me for making them:

Stuffed Olives—Stone large Spanish olives carefully and then fill with a forcemeat made with a little white chicken meat, ham finely chopped, Parmesan cheese and a pinch of nutmeg, all cooked in butter, with the addition of an egg to bind the mixture. The olive is wrapped either in pastry or coated with flour, brushed over with yolk of egg and lastly dipped in white breadcrumbs and fried in very hot oil. The olives may be eaten hot or cold.

Rice Dishes

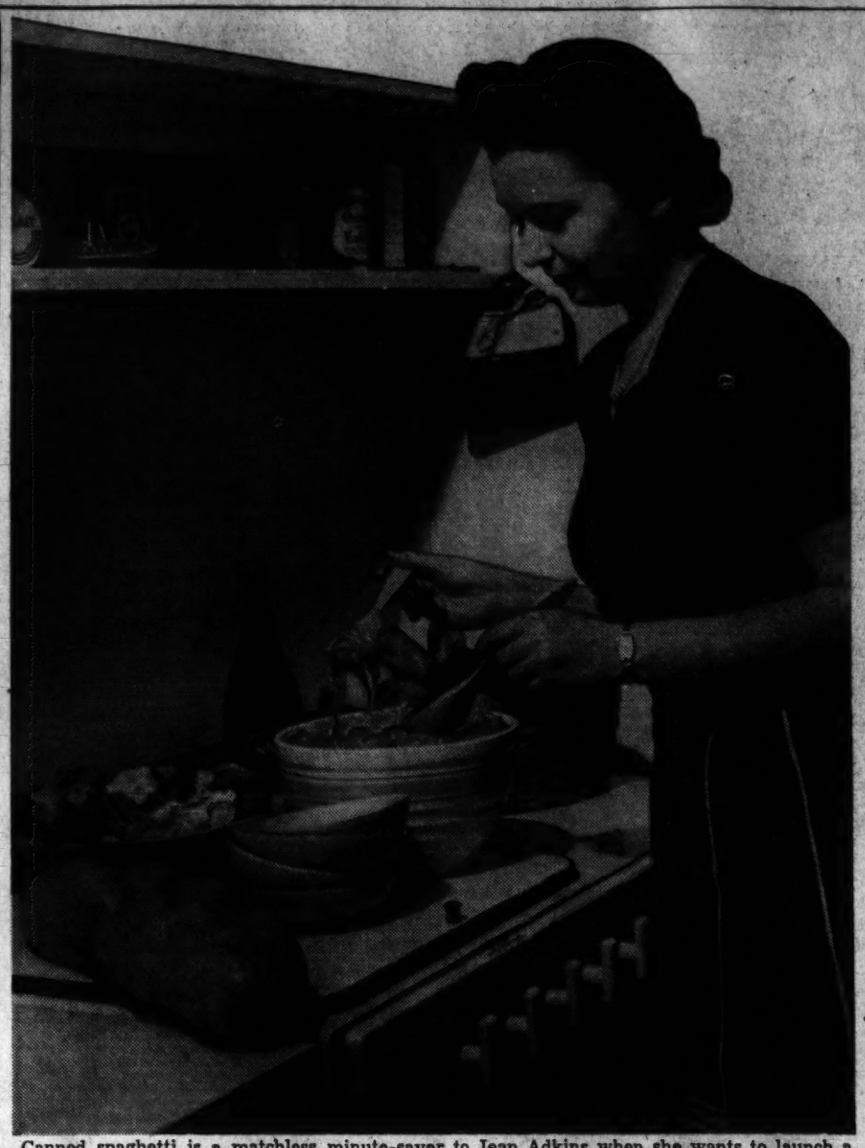
Risotto Alla Milanese, a famous dish known throughout the world, is one of the best known of all Italian risottos (rice dish). This dish is almost as much in Jean's favor as spaghetti. Here is the way she makes it:

Risotto Alla Milanese—Put 8 tablespoons butter in a deep frying pan, and when hot add 1 chopped onion and cook until the onion browns. Then add 2 cups rice and stir well. Cook for 15 minutes, add 3 cups of beef or chicken stock, 4 tablespoons white wine, a pinch of saffron, salt and pepper and mix all well. Simmer for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally, and just before serving sprinkle with Parmesan cheese 4 tablespoons of butter.



Canned spaghetti is a matchless minute-saver to Jean Adkins when she wants to launch a spaghetti supper after a day at business. Jean is shown here assembling her first Washington supper party, consisting of canned spaghetti, a tossed vegetable salad, Italian bread, Chianti and fresh fruit. The wooden salad bowls and pottery bowl holding the spaghetti were bought at the ten cent store

Cook's Library

By MARTHA ELLYN

"THE JOY OF COOKING," by Irma S. Rombauer, of St. Louis, is a cookbook with a soul. It is lively and engaging in style and covers the subject of cooking most comprehensively, giving recipes for every imaginable dish. The best features of old and new cooking are embodied in this book, for it combines common sense with a thorough knowledge of cookery with scientific, modern principles. The author has successfully imparted the feeling that cooking never is nor should be a dull task.

This recipe book has 2,500 recipes for inspirational dishes. One feature is its simplicity, for the bride who has never cooked a dish ought to be able to tackle lobster Thermidor and win a blue ribbon, if she follows Mrs. Rombauer's directions. The experienced cook, too, will find the book highly practical.

The book is unique in its type arrangement, not duplicated in any other book, and this greatly simplifies its use and clarifies instruction. All cooking terms and weights are simplified for home use.

When you want a practical gift for a bride, you will find this book an ideal selection. It is so clearly written that even a new bride who has never before cooked an egg in her life, will surprise her bridegroom with her knowledge of cooking, not only of the dishes, like ham and eggs, pancakes and the substantials, but also apple pies, delicious light breads, and all the things to eat that are dear to a man's heart.

The publishers are Bobbs Merrill. Price, $2.50.

Fish 'n' Wine

With oysters and fish so prominent on Lenten menus, many cooks wonder what wines to serve with oysters or fish. It is best to serve various kinds of slightly acid white wines with them. Rhine, Moselle, White Burgundy, White Bordeau, served at room temperature are all fine to use. it is also permissible to serve Dry Sauterne with this course at a somewhat lower temperature—40 degrees. Cool Sauterne slowly.

Quick-Frozen Foods Simplify Lenten Menus

You can give a generous afternoon to Lenten charity or Red Cross work, hang up your hat at six-thirty and have a delicious dinner on the table by seven if you take advantage of quick-frozen foods.

Fish fillets with tangy deep sea flavor are thrifty treats nowadays no matter how far you live from the surf line. Quick-freezing seals in vitamins and ocean fresh flavor until you are ready to cook them. All the preparation tasks are disposed of before the Arctic cold is applied. Along with the quick-frozen fish you can use quick-frozen vegetables that are a boon to hurry up cooks. Peas, asparagus, cauliflower, broccoli, spinach and Brussel sprouts are all cleaned and trimmed before they are quick-frozen. You just open the carton and pop them in boiling water. For dessert you can serve quick-frozen berries and fruits as they come from their cartons. Just let them thaw at room temperature. Here are some recipes that will make your hurry-up Lenten dinner as easy as it is delicious:

Broiled Fillet of Haddock

Use 1 package quick-frozen fillet of haddock (frozen or thawed). Separate fillets, spread with softened butter and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Place on well greased broiler and broil 12 to 18 minutes, turning to brown both sides. Serves 2 to 3.

Broccoli with Quick Hollandaise Sauce

Cook 1 package, 13 ounces, quick-frozen broccoli according to the directions on carton and serve with sauce.

To make the sauce add 4 tablespoons melted butter gradually to 2 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored, a small amount at a time, beating constantly with rotary egg beater. Add ¼ cup boiling water gradually, beating after each addition. Place in top of double boiler and cook over boiling water until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from hot water; add lemon juice and seasonings. Makes about 2/3 cup sauce.

When spring is in the air—as it seems to be now—hostesses are looking about for dishes for buffet suppers. Canned salmon, that reliable seafood staple that should be on every pantry shelf, offers any bewildered menu-planner many tempting answers to this problem.

Curried Salmon in Hominy Ring is a main dish that is attractive to look upon as well as delicious to eat. The nippy East Indian flavor of curry blends temptingly with the delicate flavor of canned salmon and the neutral flavor of hominy. But besides the flavor appeal, this dish also boasts an economy angle which will find favor with the thrifty hostess. For the feature ingredient, canned salmon is one of the most economical buys on the grocer's shelf. Few foods offer so much food value at so low a cost or come to the table in such a wide variety of different dishes as canned salmon.

Curried Salmon in Hominy Ring

Cook 1 cup hominy grits in 3 cups boiling water, to which 1 teaspoon salt has been added, for ¾ hour. Pour into ring mold and chill thoroughly. Brown 1 tablespoon minced onion in 3 tablespoons butter. Add oil from canned salmon and blend in 3 tablespoon flour and 1 tablespoon powder. Add 1½ cups chicken stock and ¾ teaspoon salt. Cook until mixture is thickened. Add 1 pound canned salmon, flaked, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Unmold hominy ring and heat in oven. Serve hot curried salmon in hominy ring.

Dr. Woolley Sees Hope In 'Power of the Spirit'

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

The power of the spirit is the supreme need of the world and the hope of a new world order, Dr. Mary E. Woolley, former president of Mount Holyoke College, told members of the Mount Holyoke Alumnae Association last night at a dinner given at the Sulgrave Club in her honor.

Speaking on "The World of Tomorrow," Dr. Woolley pointed out that the World of Tomorrow in 1919 has become, in 1941, the World of Today, and urged that the mistakes of the past, responsible for the troubled world of the present, not be repeated. The present conception of preparedness, she said, could not be accepted as a permanent solution of the problem of human relationship.

"Preparedness for construction, not for destruction, learning how to live together, not how to destroy one another, that is the problem of the century, the problem which must be solved if civilization is to endure," she declared.

Pointing out that we do not hesitate to use power in the physical world which we do not fully understand, or cannot fully explain, Dr. Woolley said: "We ask, not what the power is but what it can do, and then put it to test; snap on the electric light; turn on the radio, start the car. The miracle made commonplace, using common in the sense of the taken-for-granted, is an outstanding characteristic of our physical environment," she continued, "why may it not be made the outstanding characteristic of our inner living, our real selves?"

Quoting Paul's letter to the people of Galatia, in which he cited the accomplishments of the spirit as "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness and self-control," she pointed to the power of such a spirit "if it prevailed between labor and capital; between Jew and Gentile, between colored and white, between liberal and reactionary; even between Republican and Democrat."

Dr. Woolley laid the present war at the door of wasted opportunities for a new world order in the years between 1918 and 1933. The United States, she said, answered the call to the battlefield in "a war to end all wars" but refused the call to the conference table afterward.

"On June 22, 1932, the French delegation in Geneva, at the Conference on Reduction and Limitation of Armaments 'damned with faint praise' the Hoover plan for a one-third disarmament," she said. "On June 21, 1940, the French delegation at Compiegne observed the anniversary of their failure to improve an opportunity for disarmament by signing an armistice with their Nazi conquerors."

The only way to make a beginning toward a new world order, Dr. Woolley told her audience, is to conquer brute force.

Mrs. I. William Hill is president of the Mount Holyoke Alumnae who gave the dinner in Dr. Woolley's honor.

MISS MARY E. WINSLOW

Nelson A. Rockefeller, Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations between the American Republics, today announced the appointment of Miss Mary E. Winslow as adviser for civic projects in connection with the activities of women's organizations.

Miss Winslow is the United States member of the Inter-American Commission for Women, member of the executive board of the Women's Trade Union League of America, and a member of the board of directors of the D. C. League of Women Voters. She served for ten years as director of special studies in the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor. She was the United States delegate to the Pan American Conference of the International Labor Organization in Havana in December, 1939, where she served as chairman of the commission on women and children. She has recently returned from a trip to South America, during which she visited Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Ecuador and Panama.

Miss Winslow will serve in the division of public education of the Coordinator's Office and will assist in the planning and operation of projects relating to activities of women's organizations.

Dr. Ryan Tells 20th Century Club of Latins

Anyone attempting to disrupt relations between North and South America should be branded as Criminal No. 1, Dr. Edwin J. Ryan, secretary of the Institute of Ibero-American Studies at Catholic University, stated yesterday. He spoke before the monthly meeting of the Twentieth Century Club at the Y. W. C. A. and was introduced by Mrs. Lawrence Martin, the president.

This hemisphere, he said, should be the repository for all culture and learning and, if possible, should stay out of war and serve that peaceful function. He observed, however, that "possible invasion is not mere moonshine and next year we might be getting into air shelters ourselves."

Enthusiasm in regard to Latin-America without knowledge, said Dr. Ryan, is dangerous. He declared there were many pitfalls in generalization regarding South America because of the diversity of the many Republics comprising it.

He said "the Yankee Good Willer" was irritating to the Latin-Americans because what they really needed was contracts for the goods they had in their warehouses. After North Americans have been down carrying "Good Will" Hitler's agents step up to buy what they have to sell, he said, and tell the Latins that North Americans are "just sentimentalists after all."

TODAY will be observed as "Friendship Day" in memory of M. Eleanor Brackenridge, who was one of Texas' leading clubwomen and philanthropists. The National M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club, founded here several years ago by Mrs. E. W. Schwartze, has fostered a movement to make the observance nation-wide.

The club has had printed a little card quoting Miss Brackenridge's message on "Friendship," which is more significant today, no doubt, than at the time since it was written. It follows:

"The world needs the beautiful spirit of friendship. One day in the year should be dedicated as a day in which to be thankful for the blessing of friends, a day in which to search our hearts that we may find the value of our friendship to others.

"The love and friendship that we receive is beautiful but the friendship and love that we give is vastly more important, bringing joy to the heart. Friendship Day is a day in which old friends are to be remembered kindly, tenderly in greeting by notes, letters or even some small token. Friendship day is a day in which all friends that have become estranged may resume the lovely tie of friendship."

Tonight the Brackenridge Club members here will have their annual Friendship Day banquet at 2400 Sixteenth Street, with Representatives George Mahon, Wright Patman, William R. Poage and Paul Kilday among those on the program.

PI BETA PHI—The Alumnae Club of Pi Beta Phi will have its March meeting and election of officers next Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Frederick D. Shelton, 4411 Hadfield Lane, Colony Hills. Mrs. Samuel Spruce, president of Gamma Province, will talk on the work of the province.

FOUNDER'S DAY—The Washington Alumnae Association of Randolph-Macon Woman's College will celebrate Founder's Day tomorrow at a dinner to be given at the American Association of Women quarters', 1634 I Street Northwest, at 6:30 p. m. Dean Clement French will be guest of honor and will speak on "A Liberal Education in a Democracy."

Dean French came to Randolph-Macon in 1930 as head of the chemistry department from Towne Scientific School. He has been dean since 1937, as well as retaining his position as head of the chemistry department.

Mrs. Joseph Shearer and Mrs. Warren Sager are in charge of the banquet arrangements. Mrs. Norment Doniphan Hawkins, the president, will preside. Miss Margaret Flory is in charge of the program. The table decorations will be in orange and black, the colors of the college.

Accompanying Dean French will be his wife and Mrs. S. H. Williams, president of the Randolph-Macon Woman's College Alumnae Association.

Michigan Fete Hears Capital Newswoman

Esther Van Wagoner Tufty, Washington correspondent for Michigan papers, spoke yesterday at the reception and luncheon of the Senate and House Club in Lansing.

It was the largest official function in the Michigan capital given in honor of the First Lady of Michigan, Mrs. Murray D. Van Wagoner, wife of the Governor and sister-in-law of the speaker. Mrs. Tufty's topic was "Michigan in Washington," the title of her political column appearing in Michigan press.

First Lady Gets Bids From Dixie Groups

By Hope Ridings Miller.

LOOKS AS IF Mrs. Roosevelt's going to have to work pretty hard for that rest she hopes to get in Florida. From Miami Beach comes word that no less than a dozen women's organizations have been angling to get her to attend one or more of their meetings during her Southern sojourn; and it seems to be an open secret around those parts that any number of colonists who are friends of the First Lady have been gently hinting that they plan to call on her while she is there.

Hope Ridings Miller

Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. Verne E. Minich, whose Golden Beach home is to be turned over to Mrs. Roosevelt until March 16—when she is scheduled to return to Washington—have taken off on a cruise, leaving their staff of servants to look after the First Lady.

Also from the South comes the report that Mrs. George Barnett, who has been visiting Mrs. Irving Hall Chase at the latter's Palm Beach villa, El Palmar, will leave there tomorrow for Nassau and will be the guest of her cousin, the Duchess of Windsor. Mrs. Buchanan Merryman ("Aunt Bessie") has been at Government House for some time.

Cutting quite a social swath in Miami is Mme. de Gripenberg, wife of the Finnish Minister to Great Britain, who visited here a few weeks ago. She was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Stephen O. Fuqua on Tuesday and on Wednesday she was feted at the Versailles Hotel at a "Good-Will-for-Finland" tea. Among Washingtonians attending the tea were Miss Bertha Noyes, the Misses Mary and Helen Patten and Mrs. Charles I. Corby.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Bones, of Washington, recently arrived in Miami Beach to spend a couple of weeks. Others there from the Capital include Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bradshaw, who are at the Flamingo Hotel for ten days; Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Buchanan, who are at the Pancoast, and Mrs. William L. Browning, also at the Pancoast after a visit in Nassau with Maj. Browning and their daughter, Mrs. John A. Selby. The latter have returned to Washington.

NUPTIAL NOTE: Miss Barbara Henning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning, has chosen Saturday, June 14, as the date of her wedding to Cadet Thomas Courtenay L. O'Connell, son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. George A. O'Connell, of Fort McClellan, Ala. The ceremony will take place at noon in the Walter Reed Chapel.

Mrs. Landon Head, sister of the bride-elect, will serve as matron of honor, and Miss Aileen Wrightson will be bridesmaid.

Lieut. Belton O'Connell, of Fort Bennings, Ga., will serve as best man. He is a brother of the prospective bridegroom who, incidentally, will be graduated from the U. S. Military Academy only a few days before the wedding.

VITAL STATISTICS: Since it's bad luck for a Finnish infant to have his name divulged until after he is formally christened, the young son of the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope is being widely referred to as "Anonymous." The christening ceremony, however, is to take place soon . . . now that the baby has grown large enough for that handsome christening robe given to him by Mrs. Edward Beale McLean.

Mention of a christening ceremony reminds me that one of wide interest is to take place in Old Christ Church, Alexandria, this afternoon at 4:30. The infant in question is Patrick Gavid Mitchell, son of Lieut. and Mrs. S. G. Mitchell, of Alexandria.

Jacqueline Cochran (Mrs. Floyd Odlum), of New York, the noted aviatrix, will officiate as godmother, and the two godfathers will be Commander Fred Boon and Lieut. Comdr. Wallace M. Beakly.

SOCIETY - GO - ROUND: Sir Henry and Lady Chilton will be guests of honor at a luncheon the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van de Straten-Ponthoz, will give tomorrow . . . A number of parties are swirling around Mrs. Scudder Doeg, whose marriage to Edward Foote will take place Monday. Mrs. William T. Mann will fete her at a dinner tomorrow night at the Chevy Chase Club, and Miss Ruth Tuckerman will give a supper for her and Mr. Foote on Sunday night at Tuxeden, the Tuckerman home in Bethesda . . . Senator and Mrs. Ralph Brewster will entertain at dinner on Wednesday at the Sulgrave Club . . . And Mrs. Emerson Home has invitations out for a luncheon on Monday.

DEBUTANTES, ATTENTION! The usual Washington ratio of four women to every man will be lowered considerably this weekend. A large number of young men will be in Washington on Sunday to attend the rally of College Men for Defense First, at the Washington Hotel. Delegations will be on hand from Princeton, Harvard and Yale, as well as from a number of colleges closer to the Capital. The meeting will get under way at 1 o'clock and half an hour later Senator Robert Taft will address the gathering, and his speech will be broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup.

Ambassador Johnson, who will take over his new duties in the next couple of months, is expected to join Mrs. Johnson here within the next few weeks on his "change of station" visit to Washington for State Department instructions on his new assignment. Mrs. Johnson and their two children will go with him when he reports to the capital of Australia for his new duties as minister

Stackelbergs, Van Houtens Give Parties

Two informal cocktail parties accented the social calendar for a number of Washingtonians yesterday afternoon. Baron and Baroness Stackelberg entertained a company of 30 in honor of Col. William E. Shipp, who will leave soon to take over his new duties as United States Military Attache at the Legation in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. Another teatime fete was the one given by Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Van Houten of the Netherlands Legation, who gathered in a small company at their home in Westmoreland Hills.

The Stackelberg party took place at 78 Kalorama Circle, the home of Mrs. Martin Vogel, who was also to have been a hostess at the fete. Mrs. Vogel, however, was suffering from influenza and could not be present.

Receiving informally, Baroness Stackelberg was trimly turned out in a street length frock of black velvet, fashioned on simple lines. Among those who called from 5 to 7 o'clock were the Colombian Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay; Mme. Fottich, wife of the Yugoslav Minister; Mme. Procope, wife of the Minister of Finland; Senhor and Senhora de Goutheir of the Brazilian Embassy, and Anthony de Balasy, formerly connected with the Hungarian Legation here.

Still others enjoying the pleasant party were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Amberg, George Abell, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mme. Wessel of the Swedish Legation, John Caswel, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Garrison Villard and their daughter, Miss Dorothea Villard, and several others.

Both Mr. Kilpatrick and his bride are graduates of the University of Alabama. Mrs. Kilpatrick has also done graduate work at Columbia University, and her husband has done graduate work at Harvard. The couple will live in Washington, where Mr. Kilpatrick is correspondent for the Birmingham News and Age-Herald.

Chaplain Westcott Performs Rite At Walter Reed

Walter Reed Memorial Chapel was the scene of a candlelight ceremony last night when Miss Ruth Robetta McCrory became the bride of Lieut. Thomas Alexander Rice at 9 o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Samuel Henry McCrory. Lieut. Rice is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Cornelius Rice, of Los Angeles. Chaplain H. R. Westcott officiated at the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer.

White flowers and lighted tapers were used with a background of ferns and palms. The bride wore a duchess satin gown of bridal white, made on long, flowing lines. The yoke was of Alencon lace. Her veil, which fell the length of the train, was held by a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white Killarney roses, freesia and iris.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

Miss Dorothy E. McCrory, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore an ivory white taffeta gown cut on colonial lines, with a long pointed bodice, full skirt and yoke of marquisette. She carried a bouquet of rubrum lilies tied with wide satin ribbon of American beauty red, which fell to the floor. She wore lilies in her hair.

The remaining attendants, Miss Julia Neff and Mrs. Stewart E. Wilson, wore ivory taffeta also and carried smaller bouquets of rubrum lilies, with narrow streamers of red ribbon.

Richard M. Gibson served as best man and ushers were James Corson and Jack Corson, both of California; Alan Galletly, of New York, and Glenn M. Hearin. Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride. Miss Cora L. Severe, aunt of the bride, wore a black taffeta frock with ecru lace and a corsage of red roses. Guggenheim, Mrs. Guggenheim entertained at a cocktail party last week aboard their yacht Firenze. Mrs. Ward's home in Florida is on Allison Island.

The Fuenteses Give Farewell Cocktail Party

The central figures in a whirlwind of farewell parties turned the tables on their friends yesterday and were hosts themselves. The popular Counselor of the Mexican Embassy and his chic wife, Senora de Fuentes, asked a group of their friends to drop in after 5:30 o'clock for cocktails or tea. Dr. and Senor de Fuentes will leave Washington next week and after a brief stopover in New York will sail for Chile, where he has been assigned.

Yesterday afternoon their apartment in Hotel 2400 was abloom with spring flowers. Jonquils, iris, gladioli and tulips sprouted from vases here and there. Senora de Fuentes wore an ultra simple gown of black and her coal black hair was sleekly arranged as if to emphasize that Washington is losing one of the beauties of the Diplomatic Corps.

Among the ladies asked to assist with the cocktails and tea were Senora de Garland, Senora de Gazitua, Senora de Zanni and Senora de Calderon.

Today Dr. and Senora de Fuentes have three parties on. They will be guests of honor at a luncheon to be given by the Bolivian Minister and Senora de Guachalla. Later the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastariza will be hosts at cocktails for them and still later the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Gazitua will give a dinner party.

Tomorrow evening the First Secretary of the Bolivian Legation and Senora de Dorado Chopitea will be hosts at a dinner party in honor of the Fuenteses. On Monday the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro will give a luncheon in their honor.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Vicious Circle

All the luncheons and teas I owe and owe
Haunt me so that I feel wherever I go,
An outlaw in the social regimen;
But if I pay my creditors tit for tat
They'll do something for me in two weeks flat,
And there we'll all be again.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Local dowagers, alarmed over the extra man situation, due to the depletions of the draft, will petition the Secretaries of War and the Navy to grant longer and more frequent leaves of absence to men in nearby camps so that balls, benefits, spring coming out parties, etc., may proceed apace after Lent.

This measure was decided upon at a meeting of dowagers and social secretaries yesterday at the Plush Sofa Club. Mrs. Wyncoop Bigwigger, who presided, declared that "at a time like this" it was important that the social morale of the Nation be maintained. Entertaining, she said, could not go on normally unless there was a supply of stags and dinner partners available.

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, Truthtown's eccentric dowager, as usual, threw the meeting into confusion by offering the services of her recently organized "Stags' Bureau," in which she has enrolled a large number of unemployed waiters, musicians, etc., who possess dinner suits, also many of the more active inmates of old men's homes in this vicinity.

The dowagers rejected Mrs. Beetle's offer, but appointed a committee headed by Mrs. Whitherford Schooner to "encourage elderly bachelors, widowers and young men rejected by draft boards to take a more active part in social life."

New Home

The Alexander Rhumbas' new home in Hoopla Heights is almost completed and will be ready for occupancy as soon as the popular couple return from Florida. The house will have many modern features, including a rumpus room, a taproom, a bar room, a ball room, a playroom, a television room, a trophy room, a foyer, a patio, a salad bar and 17 bathrooms. It will also have several bedrooms, a living room, and possibly a library.

Slenderizing Jacket Dress

The age-old problem of women is how to look slender when slightly plump. Jacket dresses are a slenderizing style, but it's important that they show skilled workmanship and dressmaker details. This woman's jacket dress (above) of lightweight teca crepe in Eastman acetate rayon has slimming lines. Appliqued fabric flowers point up the bands of fine tucking which come from the shoulders. Dart-fitted at the waistline, the long jacket fits smoothly over the hips

Advertising Art Self-Taught

How discouraging to the amateur artist when his drawings go wrong! The features don't fit the face, the angle of the head doesn't look natural.

But even the most successful artists had an amateur stage. To progress beyond it you may only need rigid instruction—instruction which you can follow in home study. Then who knows but you may find yourself on the road to a money-making career?

Charts and diagrams show you how to draw the human figure, visualizing the parts of the body as simple geometric forms.

The head starts as an oval. To help you place the features you draw four light guide lines—one down the middle of the face to place the nose, other horizontal lines for the brow, tip of nose and mouth.

Then as the head tilts up or down you give your horizontal lines an upward or downward curve. As the head turns toward the profile you move the line for the nose to the side.

In the same simple way you learn to draw the rest of the body in various poses. Then, adding light and shade, grouping your figures to tell a story, you start to turn out real illustrations.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Formerly Devoted Husband Rushes Off Without Kissing His Wife Goodbye, Since Young Girl Co-Worker Started Motoring Him to Office

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for seven years to a grand young man. I am 30 and he is 28. We have two children, aged 4 and 2 years. Until five months ago, we never knew what it was to quarrel, or even to be irritable with each other. But eight months ago, the firm he has worked with for eight years employed a pretty little girl of 18, from a nice family, who seems to be a sweet person.

My husband told me one day that she had the sweetest disposition of any girl he knew. Since I am not a jealous person, as a rule, I agreed that she is a sweet girl. Now, she drives her car past our home every morning, sounding the horn to summon my husband. I pretend that I don't notice, but he almost breaks his neck getting out of the house, forgetting to kiss me goodbye,—which he never before did since the day we married.

On mornings when she is late coming by, he paces the floor, watching out of the window, and sometimes impatiently flings himself out before she comes, banging the door. Then, after he is a little way down the street, along she comes, sounding the horn for him to wait. In he jumps and off they go to work together.

I work too, as we have a little home that we are buying and we are trying desperately to save. We get off work about the same time and always before, he came by my office and we walked home together. Now, when he gets off work, he goes bowling with his brother, and I noticed this past week that the girl goes bowling there, too.

I have tried, tactfully, to stress that bowling is a rather expensive habit for persons in our circumstances,—but never once have I mentioned the girl's name or indicated that I feel things aren't the same with us as they used to be. But now I am becoming nervous and really afraid, because the girl acts as if my husband belonged to her and treats me as though I were nobody.

I am afraid if I continue spending sleepless nights I shall be a wreck. I just must have some disinterested person's advice on what to do. Tell me, please, shall I go on ignoring the situation? Or shall I tell my husband that I notice these incidents? I am so afraid others in the community will begin to gossip, and that my children may suffer for it.

WORRIED WIFE.

Girl Is a Nuisance, Not a Serious Threat

DEAR W. W.: The attitude of mind to take toward this situation is one of immovable determination to weather the storm with perfect composure—serene in the knowledge that your husband is, after all, your husband, bound to you by ties of tested love, seven years of shared experiences, happy memories, children, property interests held in common, etc., etc.; that, in brief, you share with him all that goes to make up a rich and realistic human relationship, whereas the girl has, at best, only the crumbs which fall from your table.

Since your husband is attracted to her by what he fondly (and perhaps erroneously) conceives to be the incomparable "sweetness" of her disposition, it behooves you to trump her ace in that regard. You would be playing into her hands if you allowed yourself to be panicked, by a possessive desire to absorb your husband's every thought, into nagging or scolding or complaining to him about her.

What the girl represents to him, at this time, is a burnished new mirror held up to his ego: a person to whom he looks to give him back a glorified version of himself,—he who had been for years accustomed to thinking of himself as a staid old married man, perhaps slightly shabby and down at heel. This role she has created for herself in his scheme of things either by telling him outright, or by implying in her manner toward him, how wise and wonderful and handsome and godlike and understanding and heart-quickening he is. No doubt it was such an attitude on her part toward him which led him to think, at first, how "sweet" was her disposition; and as his dependence upon her gladsome appreciation increased, he began to be aware of his personalized interest in her.

And she, I suppose, is a typical coy girl newcomer to the business world, whose philosophy of conduct in relation to the male of the species, wherever encountered, is to react with a starry-eyed "Oh, you great big wonderful man" routine. I have seen dozens of such bits of fluff come and go in y own small orbit,—occasionally making a sucker of some gullible male, although more frequently earning derisive behind-the-hand comment from the majority of men co-workers, who would rather not be bothered, during working hours, by too much heady sweetness of conciously projected feminine "charm."

The girl is far from being a threat to your marital security,—if you have the good sense to treat her for what she is worth. For your husband, just now, she has a champagne-like quality. Her deliberate play for his attention is an exhilarating draught to his self steem,—and encourages him to pretend, to (as children say) "play like," he's a swashbucking bachelor in stolen intervals with her. But he knows it has nothing to do with the realities of his existence,—and for that very reason, he is inclined to snatch at what he can get.

If you could view her performance unemotionally, you would see that, in your scheme of things, from where you stand, she is simply a current nuisance; nothing more. She is about as much of a threat to your wifely security, as a determined mosquito on an otherwise peaceful landscape is a threat to the life and property of the person residing there.

So go on with your married life as cheerfully, as whole heartedly, as confident of your husband's basic dependability, as appreciative of his lovable qualities, as indulgent of his little frailties, — as you were accustomed to doing in the days before this Baby Vamp blew into the picture to singe her wings (pardon the mixed metaphor!) in a mistaken play for first position in the life of the man who knows in his heart that he belongs to you.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Federal Style Decoration Due for Vogue

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

What's new in decorating styles for spring? That's as important to the ladies as drooping shoulders and skirt silhouettes. We're sorry we can't give the answer in a nutshell—that's because so many things are good, a range wide enough for all of us to find what we like best. But out of all the exciting new styles, certain trends are discernible and will be helpful in making additions and replacements of home furnishings.

In furniture the eighteenth century English styles will continue to dominate with accent more on Hepplewhite and Sheraton than upon Chippendale. Regency as a high fashion continues to reign, but straws in the wind point to Federal American as the next revival. And that is good news—for both Regency and Federal American furniture are near relations to each other and to the eighteenth century English styles and so can be used together. If you have English furniture, it's refreshing to add a piece or two of Regency or Federal for accent.

Early American maple has won for itself a place as a classic in our furniture repertoire, but instead of sets or suites of maple furniture, it is now smarter to ensemble it piece by piece and to combine New England furniture with accent pieces of Pennsylvania Dutch, French provincial or even Spanish colonial styles. A revival of French provincial furniture is of interest to those who like a dignified informality. Modern furniture and modern interpretations of traditional styles are increasing in popularity. Wood finishes in fashion are blond tones in deeper, more golden versions, along with dark, highly polished Cordovan mahogany finishes.

Colors of importance include rose as leading in popularity, with greens tending to edge blue out of first place. Included in the rose family are all sorts of more spectacular pinks and rose tones—such as very bright pink and all the vivid camellia shades. The gray blues are smarter than the turquoise family now.

Plural Chin Is Principal Sign of Age

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT USED to be a sign of age is now a style. It is considered very chic to flaunt a "white feather" in your dark tresses—so don't be uprooting the gray hairs. They're not aging! Instead, concentrate on the four or five different spots on your figure which may pad your birthdays beyond all reason.

Take the chinline. It usually holds its own up to the age of 30, but then it has a way of slipping fast. Years of working, reading, knitting and playing bridge with the head drooped or poked forward not only destroy the line of the throat and chin but also cause a little hump at the back of the neck. And that's another aging sign.

The biggest favor any woman could do herself would be to cultivate the habit of pulling up with the muscles at the sides of the throat and holding the chin level—always. Don't let your head settle down on your neck bones. Stretch your neck muscles. Carry your head high. If the double chin is a subdivision of excess weight, diet and special exercise are in order.

Another spot where age tags your figure is the back of the upper arm. The young arm is firm and round and flabby arms, whether too fat or too thin, make you seem older. To keep the upper arm firm, do a few daily circling exercises which tone the triceps. Move the arm from the shoulder, keeping the elbows straight as you circle. Or swing the arm backward, shoulder level.

Of all the telltale signs of age, a portly midsection is the most abhorrent. A humpty-dumpy silhouette is accepted as evidence of middle age. In fact, it is called the middle-age spread.

Beware 'Settled' Look

Age has nothing to do with it. Any woman who sits too much and exercises too little is bound to acquire a roll between waist and wishbone, to have a "tummy," and to thicken through the hips. The muscles in these areas are not used, so they become infiltrated with fat and the figure then looks heavy and settled.

Your looks suffer when you carry your head forward and let the upper arms go soft and flabby. Both your health and looks are affected when you take no exercises for the important muscles concerned in the middle-aged spread. It seems to be a good idea all around to see that the muscle groups in these age exaggerating areas get a small amount of conditioning exercise every day.

Women are not so silly as to want to keep right on looking sweet sixteen. But neither is there any point in looking several years older than warranted by one's birth certificate!

Zippy Cake Sauce

Many a piece of left-over cake can go on the table in an interesting way if served with a spicy hard sauce. To make it sift together 1-3 cups powdered sugar. Beat until soft 1-3 cup butter. Add the sugar to the butter gradually. Beat these ingredients until they are creamy. Beat in ⅛ teaspoon cinnamon, ⅛ teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon lemon juice and ¼ teaspoon salt if the butter is unsalted. Chill the sauce before serving.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

16 Per Cent of Defense Applicants Disqualified

An amazing number, 16 per cent, of the applicants for defense jobs in the Federal Government are disqualified on the ground of disloyalty or weak character. The joker, however, is the fact that the Civil Service Commission thoroughly investigates only a third of the defense workers before they are assigned to jobs. The remaining two-thirds slip by because the commission's staff of 250 investgators isn't large enough to check the thousands of new appointments being made daily. The commission asked the Senate Appropriations Committee for $750,000 to build up its staff of investigators to 500 and to add about 600 other employes within the next few weeks. The committee gave them only $125,000, sufficient to hire only 200 employes.

The Senate committee also cracked down on the proposed civilian police force at Navy yards. It upheld the House for refusing to approve the Navy's request for funds to hire 3,200 civilians to replace Marine guards at Navy yards. Congress has taken this action despite a plea from Assistant Secretary James Forrestal that President Roosevelt suggested the change following his tour of Navy yards and establishments.

Federal Bureau of Investigation would be able to hire 606 employes here and 898 in the field with a $975,000 deficiency appropriation recommended yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee. Seven hundred G-Men would be hired, 198 stenographers, and several hundred fingerprint classifiers among others. The defense emergency has increased tremendously the work of FBI. Each FBI employe averages an hour and a half overtime daily. Within a year the number of fingerprint sets received daily has jumped from 8,675 to 17,012, and the number of cases has leaped enormously.

Other deficiencies approved by the House committee: Alien Registration Bureau, $2,900,000 to complete the registration of aliens and to assort, classify and tabulate the records of the more than 5,000,000 aliens . . . National Youth Administration, $22,500,000 to expand its defense training program . . . RFC, $600,000 to hire additional employes to expand its lending facilities . . . Export-Import Bank, $40,000 to increase its Washington staff to care for additional business. Its profits this year are estimated at more than $4,000,000 . . . Federal Home Loan Bank Board, $50,000 to hire additional lawyers for its examining division . . . State Department, $1,092,000 to increase its staff of employes here and in foreign countries

Civil Aeronautics Authority is being investigated by members of the House Appropriations Committee. Among other things the members want to know is the influence of Commerce officials on its activities and what happened to the money that was going to be saved by reorganization . . . Budget Director Harold Smith will be the first witness at the hearing Tuesday on automatic salary raises for Federal employes. He'll ask approval of the budget plan . . . UFWA will stir up interest in the pay raise plan at a rally tonight in Interior Auditorium.

Dale B. Whiteside, Secret Service ace who has been assigned to the White House, has resigned to take over Interior's investigations division. He replaces Bradley B. Smith, who was designated associate director . . . Senator James Mead of New York has written the President to urge that he sign an Executive order immediately that would bring under Civil Service the liquidating agencies of PWA, and HOLC . . . The President is expected to sign a blanket order bringing in the jobs of thousands momentarily. The jobs probably will be brought under merit as of April 1, but it'll be about eight months before affected employes are given noncompetitive exams.

Nearly 900 Social Security Board employes have quit to take jobs in defense agencies, mainly War, since December. Most of the employes are machine operators and typists who have been stationed in Baltimore but live in Washington. So far, SSB officials haven't objected too strenuously to the transfers as the 4,200 employes in Baltimore were disappointed at not being brought back here as was planned . . . The story that the War Department was planning to construct temporary buildings either here or in nearby Virginia to house defense workers was reported here a week ago.

Curb Service

Every day brings a new idea to the Commissioners for curing the Capital's traffic ills. Recently a citizen suggested:

"Send the Traffic Court judges out in a scout car, and as soon as a driving violation is observed order the culprit to the curb and hold court. There'll be no delay, and the judge will be a witness."

Prefers Fistic to Verbal Battle

An irate fan phoned The Post sports department last night to protest vehemently.

"The radio column of an afternoon paper said that the Conn-Hassett fight would be broadcast," the fan exclaimed. "Well, I tuned in, and someone was talking about the lend-lease bill. Why don't they broadcast something that's important for a change?

Kreml Promises He Won't Pull Punches in Safety Talk Here

Traffic Expert To Discuss District Problems Tonight

By Howard F. Wentworth

Post Staff Writer

Representatives of officials and civic Washington will turn out tonight at the Willard Hotel to hear the city's traffic problems discussed by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, the country's foremost authority on highway safety matters.

Sponsored by The Washington Post, a dinner will be held at 7:30 p. m. at which some 50 leaders in the local traffic control field will be guests of Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post. Kreml will arrive here from Evanston, Ill., at 2:30 p. m. today and is expected to consult with both police and traffic authorities before the banquet.

Representing the International Association of Chiefs of Police, of which Maj. Ernest W. Brown is president, Kreml has a broad knowledge of local motoring conditions and has studied the situation on frequent visits to Washington to confer with stuhorities on problems effecting not only the District but the whole country.

Since 1929, when he rose from a motorcycle policeman to head the country's first accident prevention unit in Evanston, Kreml has conducted Nation-wide traffic studies and in cities from coast to coast has installed his now-famous system of curtailing highway mishaps.

He has promised to "pull no punches" in discussing the District's troubles and will touch on such controversial subjects as the proposal to establish a corps of civilian traffic "observers" and recent agitation for a full-time traffic court judge.

Kreml was the Nation's first traffic "detective." His system of tracing the cause of accidents through careful analysis and investigation has been adopted in nearly ever major city. Not only has he constantly practiced his theories of traffic control, but he has helped to prepare other "detectives" at Northwestern University, where he is director of the traffic safety institute.

For his accomplishments, Kreml in 1937 received the C. I. T. Safety Foundation's annual $5,000 award for distinguished work in traffic control. Once before—also in 1937—he was guest of The Post at a similar affair.

Among guests scheduled to attend tonight's dinner are:

Senator Robert Reynolds, chairman of the Senate District Committee; Senator Harold H. Burton, chairman of a special traffic subcommittee; Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House

LIEUT. FRANKLIN KREML,

District Committee; Commissioner David McCoach, jr., Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech.

William A. VanDuzer, director of traffic; Police Chief Brown, Police Court Judges John P. McMahon, George Neilson, Walter Casey and Hobart Newman, Inspector Arthur Miller, police traffic supervisor; Whitney Leary, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council.

Harry Wender, Federation of Citizens Associations; Col. L. C. Crawford, former chairman of the Board of Trade traffic committee, and P. Y. K. Howat, its present chairman; William Cameron, Labor Department safety director.

Burton Marsh, safety and engineering director, American Automobile Association; Washington I. Cleveland, local manager, A. A. A.; George Keneipp, manager, Keystone Automobile Club; Norman Damon, director, Automotive Safety Foundation; Dr. Thomas H. McDonald, public roads administrator.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner; A. Julian Brylawski, Traffic Advisory Council; Charles Upham, president, American Road Builders Association; United States Attorney Edward M. Curran, James Colliflower, president, Washington Board of Trade; E. D. Merrill, president, Capital Transit Co.; Mark Lansburgh, Washington merchant and civic leader; H. V. Schriber, safety director, Capital Transit Co.; Grant Clark, A. A. A., and Edward J. Kelly, executive secretary, International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Slogan-Writing Attorney Named District Traffic Aide

George Curtis Shinn, 62, who says his principal contact with local traffic matters has been the writing of safety slogans, was named by the District Commissioners yesterday as administrative assistant to Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer at annual salary of $4,000.

Shinn, an attorney who lives in Forest Glen, Md., said last night he didn't know a "whole lot" about his new job, but understood he was to act as "sort of a liaison man between the District Building and the traffic advisory council." The position provides office quarters at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic at Pennsylvania Avenue and John Marshall Place Northwest.

Duties, which probably will be assigned Shinn, are memberships on the Hackers' Board and the Board of Revocation and Review of Operators' Permits, and secretaryship of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council.

He succeeds former Representative James V. McClintic, who resigned to return to his home in Oklahoma.

The job og administrative assistant to Van Duzer was created in 1939 for the purpose of promoting traffic safety in Washington. At that time, Van Duzer recommended the post be filled by a "young, energetic man with a flare for promotion and publicity work." He pointed out that the assistant would be responsible for keeping the subject of safe driving before the public in a "forceful" manner.

Shinn said he served as a correspondent of several West Virginia papers "some years ago," but had done no newspaper or publicity work in recent years. His law offices are in the Woodward Building.

The appointment came as "something of a surprise," Shinn declared, and he had "no idea" who recommended him for the job.

"But," he added, "I've known the Commissioners and other city officials for a long, long time."

The appointment file submitted to reporters by the Commissioners yesterday contained a letter from Shinn to Commissioner Hazen requesting a District government position.

GEORGE C. SHINN

Shinn is a member of the Board of Trade and currently is chairman of the highways committee—different from the traffic committee in that it deals with highway maintenance matters.

He has been an attorney here for 25 years and in 1929 moved to Forest Glen. He and Mrs. Shinn have two children.

Inspector Holmes Asks Retirement; 38 Years on Force

Formal request for retirement from the Metropolitan Police Force was made yesterday by Inspector William E. Holmes, 64, District traffic supervisor.

On leave since February 7, Inspector Holmes appeared at the office of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and signified his intention, which has been rumored for several weeks. His request will go to the Commissioners for their approval.

Holmes has accumulated leave to carry him through March 31. His request was for retirement April 1.

Holmes is a veteran of 38 years' service in the Police Department.

In April, 1937, Holmes was made District traffic supervisor, a job he held until he went on leave last month.

Post Aids Search For Missing Man Called by Draft

James M. Ober, a stereotyper, last night appealed to The Washington Post for assistance in finding his brother, Harry R. Ober, jr., 28, missing since Monday night.

After his disappearance, Ober said, his brother's draft board ordered him to appear for physical examination. Ober said he was certain his brother, who resigned his job to be ready for the draft, would return to his home at 831 Ingraham Street Northwest, if he knew of the order.

Expansion Funds Urged By McCoach

Unable to Provide Facilities in Growing Sections, Overton Hearing Is Advised

Two public hearings on the Hunter-Overton fiscal formula will be held by the House Subcommittee on Fiscal Relations, Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, said yesterday following a joint session with a Senate subcommittee.

If his subcommittee agrees, Hunter said, one hearing will be held next week and another the following week. Civic and trade groups will be given limited time to testify on the formula.

Commissioner David McCoach, jr., warned Congress at the joint session that the District would be unable to furnish at once adequate facilities for rapidly growing sections of the city under the present fiscal setup. He cited Anacostia as an example of a community that has expanded faster than the city could provide schools, paved streets and other municipal services.

Overton Explains Stand

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, in a lengthy explanation of the need for a formula such as he has proposed, said:

"I am not wedded to this plan. If anybody has a better plan that will work with mathematical accuracy, rest on a reasonable basis, and not be subject to annual controversy I will accept it."

He pointed out that any scheme for placing a valuation on Federal buildings would engender as much controversy as the lump-sum payment.

Senator Overton called attention to some of the municipal services which the District is required to furnish the Federal Government free of cost and stated that these will increase steadily as national defense activities grow.

Dirksen Takes Issue

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, interrupted to point out that the Federal Government also furnishes services to the District for which it is not paid.

"But the District services for the Federal Government far outweigh the Federal services for the District," retorted Senator Overton.

Commissioner McCoach told the committees that Congress could no more expect the District to finance necessary municipal expansions out of current revenues than it could expect a munitions plant to pay for its defense additions from current profits.

Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent explained how the 21 per cent of Federal obligation was arrived at under the land-ratio formula.

The United States owns a total of 32.6 per cent of the land, or 15,231 acres, in the District, Dent said.

The taxable area of the National Capital, he said, is 53.6 per cent of the total acreage.

Chester F. Rightor, of the Census Bureau, testified that an inquiry in 1939 revealed that Washington ranked sixth among 12 comparable cities with respect to revenue raised and ranked third in the costs of municipal operation.

Arthur R. Pilkerton, acting auditor, submitted a report which shows that the operating costs of the District are increasing at the rate of $700,000 a year and that funds available for capital improvements are decreasing.

D. C. Water To Be Guarded From Sabotage

Funds to protect the District water system against sabotage are included in $758,707.75 of supplementary and deficiency appropriations carried in the first deficiency bill reported to the House yesterday.

A sum of $158,190 will be used in three ways to protect the Capital's water supply.

The guard force which patrols Washington's aqueducts will be increased from 18 to 34. Fences to protect the water intake at Great Falls, reservoirs, filtration plants and auxiliary works will cost $65,000, while $75,000 is to be spent at the Dalecarlia Reservoir so that water may be pumped out of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal in event anything happens to the conduits.

The bill carries $560,000 to provide facilities within rapidly expanding sections of the city. Sewer main extensions will cost $160,000, surfacing new streets $250,000, and water system extensions $150,000.

"The number of building permits issued so far this fiscal year," the committee reported, "is 50 per cent in excess of those issued in the same period of last fiscal year."

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, told the committee in the executive hearings that many residents "are in the mud" along 10 miles of unpaved streets due to the rapid home construction.

An unexpended balance of $89,839.23 is made available in the bill for acquiring adjacent lands along the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway.

The recorder of deed's office was given $6,720 to administer the new law requiring registration of all motor vehicle liens. The District Training School at Laurel, Md., was allowed $7,000 for the purchase of new laundry equipment.

Rita Bement Gives Recital In 4 Tongues

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Rita Rozada Bement gives a song recital Thursday night in the Arts Club, with Margaret Tolson as accompanist. Program of lieder and songs in French, English and Spanish.

An entertaining program of songs in four tongues was presented last night for members and guests of the Arts Club by Rita Rozada Bement, whose temperamental vivacity is adjutant to a darkly colored voice. The glow of her middle tones was well shown in her opening group of romantic lieder, including Franz' "Auf dem Meere," Grieg's "Morgenthau," Chaikowski's "Nur ver die Sehnsucht Kennt," and Brahms' "Waldeseinsamkeit" and "Von dwiger Liebe." These were sung with a sedate observance of the lyric tradition and effective phrasing.

BROWN

A change of costume and manner came with the French group which contained Fourdrain's "La Porte de Seville" and three songs by the Irish - French composer, Augusta Holmes, "La Belle au cheveux d'or," "L'heure bleu" and "Au pays." To these she applied a dramatic method of interpretation which reminded one at times of Yvette Guilbert in the mimicry and character impersonations of the readings. The spontaneity and impulsiveness of her singing disclosed a natural talent for acting.

This pleasant informality marked the remainder of her program. A group of American songs offered Jacques Wolfe's "De Glory Road," and three by the Texan composer, David Guion, "Wrong Living," "Mlle. Marie" and "In Galam." In the closing group were included Alvarez' "La Partida," Laparra's "A la corrida," Falla's "Jota" and two Spanish folksongs, "Le Cana" and "Alala."

Margaret Tolson, one of the most adaptable and reliable of our resident pianists, accompanied Mrs. Bement with both skill and tact.

A. B. C. Suspends License Of New York Lunch

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday suspended the on-sale liquor license of the New York Lunch, Inc., 945 Ninth Street Northwest, for 31 days, effective 8 a. m., March 17, for violation of the liquor code.

The board found the establishment guilty of permitting the premises to be used for unlawful and immoral purposes. The restaurant was given ten days to file an appeal to the District Commissioners.

Citizens' Group Seeks More Fire Boxes

Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association last night urged a budget appropriation to take care of purchase and installation of 300 additional fire alarm boxes annually to meet the growth of the city's population.

The unit approved plans to merge the District and Police Courts here, as well as the move to give the new court greater jurisdiction in civil matters.

Congratulations were extended to the Federation of Citizens Associations on occasion of its thirty-first anniversary. A resolution expressed appreciation for the federation's active, intelligent, and effective leadership in civic problems affecting the voteless citizens of the District."

The Federation, the resolution asserted, was "best qualified and equipped to represent the voice of the citizens," and, the resolution added, the association believes that creation of a municipal assembly "would be unwise and tend to promote discord."

Midway

The legislative committee of the Midway Citizens Association was instructed last night to prepare a brief stressing needs of Morgan and Wilson Schools, for presentation at the forthcoming Congressional school budget hearings.

The association recommended the elevation of Lieut. C. H. Lutz to the captaincy of Thirteenth Precinct station upon the retirement Capt. J. E. Bobo. Pending further information, no action was taken on an invitation to join the new Municipal Assembly.

George W. Johnson, president, revealed that $100 had been raised for the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club. Robert Pike, of the District Tuberculosis Association, presented two educational sound films.

Northeast Conference

Support for the bill to set up a public defender in the District was voiced last night by the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations.

Two Fined After Row With Glass

Mrs. Dilling, Another Penalized for Invading Office Of Virginia Senator

The Bill of Rights is no excuse for disorderly conduct by those who invoke it, Police Judge Hobart Newman declared yesterday in fining Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, 45, the limit of $25 for a row in the Senate Office Building last Friday.

Fined $15 was Mrs. Clara Nibbericl., 41, St. Louis, one of a group of "American Mothers" who went with Mrs. Dilling to give Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, an American flag because they were told he had several British flags in his office.

Senator Glass supports the aid-Britain bill which Mrs. Dilling and her followers have been opposing as a measure which will "make President Roosevelt a dictator and destroy the Republic." Denied admission to Senator Glass' office February 28, Mrs. Dilling and a score of others sat down in the corridor. She and Mrs. Nibberich were arrested when officers tried to clear the corridor.

Judge Newman gave his judgment after the incident had been threshed out in five half-days of trial. "I am not unaware," he said, "of the constitutional right to petition the Congress. But it is equally true that this right may be exercised in an orderly, or a disorderly manner. I am convinced that these defendants have asserted their rights in a manner that cannot be legally condoned. I am accordingly finding them guilty."

Because Mrs. Dilling was convicted of disorderly conduct February 18, after a demonstration against Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida (another advocate of aid to Britain), Judge Newman gave her the maximum fine.

In his ruling, Judge Newman approved the constitutional argument advanced by Assistant Corporation Counsel G. R. Littlehales.

"The rights of freedom of speech and of peaceful assembly," said Littlehales, "are accompanied by other rights of other citizens—the right not to listen, the right not to be incommoded by those who invoke these rights. All these rights are correlative.

"Are United States Senators elected only to have their offices open at all times, subject to any intrusion? Have not they, too, the right of privacy? I think they have it, and they need it, especially at a time like this."

If Mrs. Dilling and her cohorts were entitled to demand that Senator Glass receive them, Littlehales argued, then all citizens have a like right. He asked whether he himself could demand an appointment and then "harass and harangue the Senator?"

Defense Counsel T. Edward O'Connell gave immediate notice that he would ask the United States Court of Appeals here for a writ of error. The higher court may grant this or refuse to hear the matter at all. Should the court reject the appeal, O'Connell said, Mrs. Dilling was determined to fight the case by every other legal avenue, to the Supreme Court. She would refuse to pay the fine, he said, go to jail if necessary, and then seek release by habeas corpus, which could be disputed through the appellate courts.

Pending the appeal, Mrs. Dilling and Mrs. Nibbericlic were freed on $100 bond each.

Turkey Will Stick By Britain, Lehrbas Tells Women's Bar

A prediction that the European war will not end for a "long, long time," that Turkey will side with Britain in defense of the Dardanelles and that Japan will not attempt an American invasion was made last night at the annual banquet of the District Women's Bar Association by a well known war correspondent.

Lloyd Lehrbas, the Associated Press writer who wrote the first eye-witness stories of the Nazi invasion of Poland, made the prediction as he recounted his personal experiences before nearly 200 persons present.

Lehrbas, who has covered the Sino-Japanese conflict as well as Nazi invasions of Norway and Denmark, said he thought the Turkish-British alliance would remain unshaken "unless the Soviet sides with Germany." He said he felt, however, that it was impossible to tell what the Soviet would do."

RULE FOR ADD 1

Politely refusing to convert his prediction of a "long" European war into a number of years, Lehrbas, who shared the rostrum as guest speaker with Miss Mary Craig McGeachy, a representative of the British ministry of economic warfare here, said it is impossible to foretell an exact length of time.

In stating a belief that Japan would not invade America, he said that although Japan lacked a first rate air force he "hoped no one would discount the fact that they have a good air force."

Miss McGeachy, who preceded Lehrbas as guest speaker, told of the part played by women today in England. Both speakers were introduced by Miss Helen Newman, George Washington University law school librarian.

Present among honored guests were Representative James Barnes of Illinois, Judge Fay L. Bentley of the District Juvenile Court, Representative Theodore Cogswell, North Carolina; United States Marshal for the District and Mrs. John B. Colpoys, Justice David A. Pine, of the District Court, and Mrs. Pine; District Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy, Col. Heber H. Rice, president of the Federal Bar Association.

District Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech; United States Court of Appeals Justice and Mrs. Wiley Rutledge; District Bar Association president and Mrs. Francis W. Hill jr.; Secretary of the District Bar Association and Mrs. Wilbur L. Gray; William Roy Vallance, of the State Department, and Col. Charles E. Stewart, clerk of the District Court.

8,000 Watch Conn Knock Out Hassett in Fifth

Hook to Jaw Stops Philly Heavyweight

3,000 Turned Away At Record Gathering; Louis' Challenger Is Never Extended

By Al Hailey

A record-shattering fight crowd which knew what it was in for at the start packed Uline's Ice Arena to the rafters last night and saw Billy Conn warm up for his June shot at Joe Louis' heavyweight championship by knocking out Irish Dan Hassett in the fifth of their scheduled 15-round fight.

The light-heavyweight champion from Pittsburgh finished Hassett in 35 seconds of the fifth after a one-sided exhibiton which was never a contest.

The largest crowd for an athletic event of any kind in Washington—8,000 fans—paid out a net gate of $11,696 to see the business. The crowd was so thick at the doors of the $700,000 ice arena that officials estimated 3,000 were turned away.

Although it hardly served as anything more advantageous to Billy's conditioning than a gymnasium workout, the customers took it good-naturedly. The turnout, however, definitely placed Washington in line for the top-flight attractions hitherto staged in New York and branded the Capital as fertile territory for a financial clean-up, in the eyes of New York promoters.

Hassett Breaks Hand

Hassett, little more than an overstuffed middleweight, couldn't maneuver 204 pounds out of range of the Conn's educated fists and his face was a mass of blood at the end.

The greatest damage Hassett did was break his own right hand in the first round on Conn's cranium. His ear was split open, necessitating four stitches.

Boos Greet Winner

Danny fell like the oak tree they liken him to back in the Quaker City. As Referee Ray Bowen tolled out the count, Danny rolled over on his stomach and tried in vain to rise, but his aching legs refused to answer his bidding. There was no doubt about the knockout punch, and the crowd went away comparatively happy. But as Billy danced sheepishly across the ring to where they were trying to revive the puffing and wheezing Hassett, a roar of boos intermingled with a few scattered cheers, greeted him.

Hassett never was in the running, and Billy won every round by a wide margin. But in winning, he failed to convince anyone that he is the lad who'll dethrone Louis.

Billy never had to extend himself, for Hassett proved a simple target and the Pittsburgh youngster had Dan's ear and nose streaming blood as early as the third round.

The scheduled 15-rounder was nothing more than a "test case" in the eyes of Mike Jacobs, the New York boxing czar who came down to back Ray Alvis in promotion of the venture, and if any customer on hand came, expecting anything more, he went away a disgruntled man swearing never to darken a fight hall again.

The crowd broke by some 3,500 the record for an indoor boxing show in Washington.

Hassett, who hadn't had a fight in almost a year, tried to force the fighting, but he never could land a solid blow, for the fast-moving Conn either covered up or danced easily out of range.

Billy, meanwhile, used Danny as a human punching bag, bouncing left

DiMaggio Signs; Draft Hits Rookie

Board Calls Young Rizzuto; Salary Of Outfielder Believed $35,000

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6.—The New York Yankees learned today that Joe DiMaggio, their No. 1 star, finally had come to terms for an estimated $35,000, but a sudden threat of the Army draft fell on Rookie Phil Rizzuto to keep the camp in a turmoil.

DiMaggio's holdout ended at a compromise figure somewhere between the $32,500 he received last year and the $37,500 he was believed to have asked for 1941.

President Ed Barrow, peeved at the fact his ace never has played a full season in the five years he has been with the club, first sent DiMaggion a contract calling for $30,000 this year, but this was inched upward in long negotiations.

Second to Greenberg

Barrow, who earlier this week said he had given DiMaggio the club's final offer, admitted in New York today that the contract called for a nominal raise over last year's salary. He now is believed to be the second highest salaried player in baseball, with Detroit's Hank Greenberg in first place at $40,000 or more.

DiMaggio expected to leave his home at San Francisco tomorrow and arrive at camp Monday or Tuesday.

The draft status of Rizzuto, 22-year-old shortstop brought up from Kansas City, was spotlighted when he disclosed his local board in New York City had ordered him to report to the St. Petersburg draft board for a physical examination. He has local order No. 1006.

Not Yet Classified

A spokesman for the board in New York said Rizzuto had not yet been classified and that his case would not be discussed until a report had been received on his physical examination.

Rizzuto is single, but has contributed to the support of his family, which includes his parents and a brother. His father was unemployed for some time, but now is working as a dock watchman at $30 a week.

With the Yankees' shortstopping assignment in doubt again, the veteran Frank Crosetti found himself getting new attention when he reported today for his first workout.

The club's workout was a routine preparation for tomorrow's opening exhibition with the St. Louis Cardinals.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 6.—Two bloated Negro heavyweights huffed and puffed through ten rounds at Orlando's fancy little American Legion Arena in what was advertised as the main bout, but they're weren't the main attraction in the ring. The man the folks from round about came to see was the referee—Jack Dempsey, who had dropped in to collect approximately $400 for exposing himself to the gaping gazes of Florida provincials.

POVICH

This is the harvest season for Dempsey. He averages $3,000 a week at the barnstorming business of stepping jauntily into a ring acknowledging the whoops of the people who have heard tell about him, and trying to look stern as a pair of native battlers give their pitiful all. It is in the burgs like Orlando, off the beaten path, that the legend of Dempsey is most profitable to the Old Mauler.

He hasn't changed much. He's still the champion glad-hander of all sportsdom. He shakes the hands of the local big shots with a "Glad-to-see-you-old-kid" grip that sends them away strutting to confide to friends that Dempsey's a swell fellow. They are the folks who will tell their grandchildren that Dempsey was cheated of a knockout when he had Gene Tunney on the floor for 14 seconds and swear that there warn't a fighter living who could lick him on the square.

Twenty minutes after his arrival in Orlando it was evident that Dempsey hadn't changed much. In the midst of a dramatic story Buck O'Neill was retelling with flourishes to Dempsey and his entourage in an Orlando restaurant, O'Neill emitted a cry of anguished pain and leaped from his chair. He had been the victim of the famous Dempsey hot foot, applied with masterful skill by the old Mauler who had surreptitiously been under the table on his hands and knees to ignite a match stuck firmly in the sole of O'Neill's shoes. The man who enjoyed Dempsey's prank most was Dempsey.

Inevitably Dempsey was asked about the current heavyweight situation, and he quickly revealed himself as Joe Louis fan No. 1. Billy Conn-Joe Louis match should never have made, he declared. He sees no chance for Conn to make even a mildy good showing against Louis.

"Louis will knock him out, sure as shootin', said Dempsey. "Some time before the 15 rounds are over he'll catch up with Conn and tag him with either a left or right, and they'll be carrying an over-matched boy out of the ring. How they ever figure that Conn will give Louis a battle of it, I don't know. Conn is supposed to be a pretty good boxer, but they ought to know by this time that Louis can box, himself. Nobody except Max Schmeling ever made a sucker out of Louis and that Schmeling was supersmart.

"There isn't anybody around whose going to beat Louis. When he is licked, he'll beat himself like a couple of other champions I know," he added significantly. "You can't keep that sharp edge forever, but Louis doesn't figure to get licked until he's at least 30. He is a right-living boy and that's a big help to him."

Somebody asked Dempsey what kind of of a fight a man would have to make to beat Louis, and he was quick to answer that one. "I know how Jack Dempsey would try to lick him," said Dempsey. I'd try to beat him by fighting the only kind of fight I knew how. I'd just try to get in there close and keep punching at his chin."

Dempsey was reminded that when he fought Jack Sharkey it was a body attack that softened Sharkey up for the left hook to the jaw that floored him for the full count in the seventh round. "I was an old man by that time, and it's easier to punch to the body than the chin when you begin to feel your years," explained Dempsey. "Besides, my handlers told me that Sharkey didn't like it in the body, and they were right.

"Now this Louis can't be licked with body punches. He's in too good shape. Braddock hit him in the chin and knocked him down, Galento floored him with a shot to the chin and Schmeling knocked him out with right hands to the chin. You've got to hit him on the button to beat him. But you've got to hit him hard, he won't fold up. I like Louis."

Dempsey was making very plain the fact that he liked Louis. Within the past month the old Mauler has been roundly attacked by the Negro press of the country following an interview in New Orleans when it was reported that Dempsey had cast doubt on the Negro fighter's gameness.

"I've caught it from all over the country for that story," admitted Dempsey. "I was misquoted, that's what, and it got me in a lot of trouble."

Dempsey perhaps had visions of being on the spot with the colored citizens in much the same manner as Jack Johnson. In Louis' formative years, Johnson, embittered by his failure to muscle in on the management of Louis, disparged him as a fighter. He has never been forgiven for that by the folks of his race.

"And another thing," added Dempsey, "I'm not sure I could lick Louis."

Hockey Eagles Meet Skeeters Here Tonight

The return of Gordon Hemming to goal and the nomination of newcomer Arthur Thompson as center on the lightning fast line of Roy McBride and Russ Rossingnol, will provide features tonight as the Washington Eagles entertain the River Vale Skeeters in an Eastern Hockey League game at Riverside Stadium at 8:30 o'clock.

The Eagles will be shooting for their ninth consecutive victory.

Hemming's return in the nets will be warmly greeted by Washingtonians who saw the plucky youngster get the locals away to a flying start in the Eastern League race this season and hold his own against the best until contracting a sinus condition about three weeks ago that has resulted in his remaining inactive since.

In the event Hemming comes through tonight he again will be alternated by Less Colvin, another fine youngster who has played some of the best hockey in the Eastern League since taking over the job because of Hemming's illness.

Both Hemming and Colvin earned the indorsement of fans and Coach Redvers Mackenzie alike during an undefeated 12-game streak of the Eagles some weeks ago when they both carried on despite heavy colds. It is believed that overwork, created through Colvin being bedridden at that time, resulted in Hemming's breakdown due to sinus and a loss of weight that hampered him seriously for awhile.

G. W. Near Tourney Bid as Hoyas Wonder

Quintet That Downed Colonials Twice Apparently Being Overlooked in Title Setup

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Georgetown is apparently getting the old run-around in the selection of teams for the post-season basketball tournaments—the National Collegiate Invitation Tournament in New York, and the National Collegiate Athletic Association Championship, with playoffs in Madison, Wis.

The Hoyas, still hoping for a bid to the New York tournament despite their poor performnace against Fordham there last week, found little solace in Gotham reports that three teams had already been selected and G. W. was one of nine teams definitely in the running for the other five berths.

Hard to Figure

Georgetown supporters could not figure how a team which the Hoyas had beaten twice stood better than a 2-to-1 chance of being invited to the tournament while the Hoyas were not mentioned. Seton Hall, Rhode Island State and Long Island received bids yesterday.

Of the three, Rhode Island State was surprsing. The Northeastern club had lost three games and Wednesday night only beat Brown by a single point in overtime, and Brown has one of the poorest records of the East's major teams. R. I. State lost to Temple, twice a Georgetown victim, and they were beaten by Springfield, a little known club. Seton Hall won all its games, but played a great majority at home and played only a few tough foes.

North Carolina's selection as this section's representative in the N. C. A. A. championship was even more surprising. The Tarheels were named early today and, according to a local basketball official, not until after the game here Wednesday night.

Norman Shepard, director of athletics at Davidson College, a Southern Conference member, announced the selection. The Carolinians lost in the first round of the conference tournament, and lost 5 games while winning 15. They lost to Navy, a team that was held to one point in 25 minutes by Georgetown; Fordham, New York University and twice to Duke. In fact, Maryland, a team that last 21 straight, gave the Tarheels two good battles.

George Washington was in the running for the N. C. A. A. berth, pending the outcome of the second Georgetown game. Coach Elmer Ripley of Georgetown also had his ear tuned to the N. C. A. A. headquarters and was disappointed when he heard North Carolina had been selected.

Thus George Washington, a team who is only the runner-up in the District championship, may be invited to a tournament over its two-time conqueror. In favor of the Colonials as far as the New York tournament is concerned is the fact that the New York writers saw Georgetown at its very worst, against Fordham, and G. W. at its admitted best, against St. John's.

Apparently they are overlooking G. W.'s two defeats by its intra-city rival in keeping the Colonials in the running for a Garden bid. G. W.'s record is as deserving as many of the nine teams mentioned, but how about Georgetown?

Transparenti Gets Decision Over Salica

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 6.—Larrupin' Lew Transparenti lashed out with a rousing varied attack and punched through the greatest battle of his ring career for a unanimous decision over Bantamweight Champion Lou Salica in a 10-round nontitle bout at the Coliseum tonight.

The Baltimorean took the play from Salica at the start and inflicted most of the damage all the way through the fight. In the late rounds Salica tried to slug it out for a knockout, but Transparenti fought back fiercely to protect his big lead. Transparenti weighed 124 and Salica 120.

Ernie Lombardi Accepts Offer, About $18,000

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., March 6.—General Manager Warren Giles of the Cincinnati Reds announced tonight that Ernie Lombardi, the team's first-string catcher, had agreed to terms with the club tonight.

LOMBARDI

Giles said that in a telephone conversation between Lombardi at his his California home, and Manager Bill McKechnie and himself here, the player had accepted the club's offer and would leave for training camp at once.

No one would say what figures finally induced Ernie to stop seining driftwood out on the Pacific in favor of another season of baseball, but he was reported to have agreed to $18,000 plus a bonus if he hits better than .300 for the season.

Giles said he was advised that Lombardi, who was generally supposed to be holding out for $25,000, was in excellent condition as a result of his outdoor life.

The development dropped the Reds' holdout list to one—Ernie's neighbor, Neil Clifford, a rookie catcher.

Roanoke Legion Beats Virginia U.

Roanoke, Va., March 6 (AP).—Big Bob Spessard, former standout at Washington and Lee, scored 26 points here tonight to lead the unbeaten Roanoke American Legion basketball team to a 51-to-41 victory over the University of Virgina and into the "complete" championship of the State.

Three Eastern Teams Awarded New York Bids

By the Associated Press

New York, March 6 (AP).—The tournament committee for the intercollegiate basketball tournament to start at Madison Square Garden March 18 issued invitations today to Seton Hall College, undefeated in 42 games over three seasons; Rhode Island State, with a record of 21 and 3 this year, and Long Island U., which won 22 out of 24.

All three have completed their regular schedules.

Prominently considered for the other five places are Bradley Tech, of Peoria, Ill.; George Washington, Duquesne, Ohio University, Texas Tech, Toledo, Westminster, Western Kentucky State, Wyoming, and City College of New York. Of these Westminster, which ends its schedule Saturday against Carnegie Tech, has the best record, 19 victories and one defeat. Texas Tech has two victories over the Phillips Oilers, National A. A. U. champions.

After opening-round games March 18 and 19, the semifinals will be played March 22 and the final March 24.

Carolina Invited To N. C. A. A. Tourney

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 6 (AP).—The University of North Carolina basketball team accepted today an invitation from the National Collegiate Athletic Association to compete in its Eastern playoff at Madison, Wis., March 21-22.

The tournament winner will meet the champion of the Western playoff for the national intercollegiate title.

The White Phantoms will represent District 3, which includes Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Top-seeded in the recent Southern Conference Tournament only to lose to Duke University in the first round, the Phantoms won 15 games and lost 5 during the regular season.

Ex-Vol Star Foxx Gets Trial With Jersey City

Foxx and Cuccinello entrained for Fort Pierce, Fla., Jersey City winter camp, where they will be joined by the rest of the International League club squad Sunday.

Browns Rained Out

San Antonio, Tex., March 6 (AP).—Rain, wind and wet grounds interfered today with the St. Louis Browns' workout and caused another postponement of the first intra-squad practice game of the spring training season. It will be played tomorrow.

In the meantime, Manager Fred Haney announced he would use veteran players as the starting line-up in the exhibition game with the Boston Bees Saturday, George Caster, Bob Harris and Jack Kramer will divide the pitching duties.

Don Padgett Signs

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 6 (AP).—Don Padgett, catcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, notified President Sam Breadon today that he had ended his holdout siege and was on his way to spring training camp. First Baseman Johnny Mize and Hy Vandenberg, pitcher obtained from the New York Giants, still are unsigned.

All players on the squad here went through two snappy workouts in preparation for tomorrow's game with the New York Yankees.

A's Rout Seattle

San Fernando, Calif., March 6 (AP).—The Athletics, showing surprising ruggedness in the batting order, garnered 11 runs off 13 hits—including two home runs—to defeat Seattle of the Pacific Coast, 11 to 2, in their second exhibition game of the season.

Pete Suder, divorced from the Yankee family in the baseball draft, put in a bid for the A's third basing job with a three-bagger and a double after he substituted for Bob Kahle, who went hitless twice.

Jacobs Sure Boxing Is 'Comer' Here

They turned away 3,000 persons last night when Washington, haven of the white collar workers and knowledge-hungry night school students, let down its hair and had itself a whale of a time at Uline's Ice Arena as Mike Jacobs & Co. moved in from New York to put boxing on a big time basis in the Capital.

Eight-thousand strong they trooped into the cavernous $700,000 ice arena to see Light-heavyweight Billy Conn in action—in fact, they came in such numbers that "Uncle Mike" immediately began plans for revising the entire setup at Uline's and announced he would bring Joe Louis into Washington this summer.

The crowd, supprassing Promoter Ray Alvis' fondest dreams, had Jacobs' eyes bulging with astonishment.

"Didn't I tell ya," screamed Johnny Ray, manager of Conn. "There's money in this town, Mike. Lookit that crowd. They're turning 'em tway in droves at the door. Lookit this arena—perfect, that's what it is."

Change Is Due

"Yeah, but we're going to change all this," Jacobs allowed, pointing out an expanse of empty space between the ringside chairs and the first rows of the wall tiers. "We oughta build this up on a slant; there's too much waste space. To think of all those people out there wanting ticketz."

The man who rose from New York's No. 1 ticket scalper to the czar of New York boxing and high potentate of the Nation's fight industry, then launched into a lengthy tirade about his future plans for invading the seat of the National Boxing Association, long a hostile body to the New York Athletic Commission and the Jacobs clan.

"We'll bring Louis in late this summer—that is, of course, if he defends his heavyweight title successfully against Conn. This is a fine little arena, but it needs rearranging. All those people out there and all this wasted space."

Big Names Needed

Jacobs, who backed Alvis in the Conn-Hassett venture, said he was convinced that all Washington needs is a few big names. His eyes fairly reflected the dollar sign as he gazed fondly around at the banked wall of humanity—a wall which contained countless "first nighters" seeing their first professional fight.

"Yeah, there's plenty of money here," smiled Ray happily. "Three thousand people turned away—I shouldn't be thinking about it. My stomach hurts me already, and now they're telling me they turned away three thousand people."

"There are going to be plenty of fight fans born here tonight," the mogul mused. "Now if we just make up this wasted space we could get another thousand or two in here. Yeah, I think we'll be coming in here again pretty soon."

Date Promised

Alvis skidded onto the scene as the aren's lights began to dim for the first bout and announced that he already has been promised a March 24 date in the arena.

Louis—if he beats Conn in June—will fight here in Griffith Stadium, Alvis said. There's only one problem blocking such a move, however—finding a heavyweight to put in with Louis. Jacobs figures he can scrape up something by August. Meanwhile, he wants more time to build up local interest with such lads as Welterweight Champion Fritzie Zivic, Chalky Wright, the No. 1 featherweight contender, and even such things as the Tony Galento-Buddy Baer heavyweight brawl. This latter, however, already is scheduled for Philadelphia late this month.

Haight Goes Local

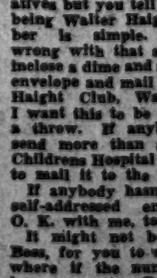
Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

Well, I slept on that idea about a Walter Haight Club last night and this morning it was flatter than my poetry. However, I believe we can have some fun with a club, the suggestion of Brother Ray Benton, who lives and breathes despite the fact some of the boys in the office are looking at me and smiling. But, as I wrote yesterday, that Benton pass-the-buck and take-a-drink plan has too many complications.



HAIGHT

Here's what we can do, Boss. Tell Brother Benton and the two or three other boys and girls who have been reading this lowbrow stuff that we hereby form the Walter Haight Club. Dues will be 10 cents, one thin dime, every penny of which will go to the Children's Hospital Blood Bank Fund. In return, I will send all applicants a membership card which automatically makes them eligible for my contest.

I haven't figured out what kind of a contest we'll have, but the prizes will be a couple of badges for the Bowie meeting and two seats for the opening ball game or something on that order. Of course, I'm making Brother Benton the Exalted Throwo Bullo and I'm putting him in No. 1 post position for, after all, he drove the first tack in my head.

But don't think for a minute that I'm going to let everybody who has been reading your mail down, Boss. I may mention this Walter Haight Club from time to time, but I'm going to try to keep these letters interesting if for no other reason than it's still too cold for comfortable sleeping on park benches.

Please pass the word along, Boss, that the Walter Haight Club is ready. I've lined up my relatives but you tell the others that being Walter Haight Club member is simple. (Something's wrong with that sentence.) Just inclose a dime and a self-addressed envelope and mail them to Walter Haight Club, Washington Post. I want this to be strictly a dime a throw. If anybody wants to send more than a dime to the Childrens Hospital Fund, tell them to mail it to the editor.

If anybody hasn't a dime or a self-addressed envelope, that's O. K. with me, too.

It might not be a bad idea, Boss, for you to send me somewhere if the number of members warrants. For instance 100 members means Alexandria, 200 means Richmond, 500 Charleston, 800 Savannah 1,200 Jacksonville, 2,500 Palm Beach—well, I could walk the rest of the way to Miami.

And, Boss, let's make 100,000 the Jack Pot and you promise to send me to Mars if I hit it.

Wouldn't that be something—my going to Mars on an expense account? Just think, when I return, I could put down an item like this: "$135,000 for super d luxe canal boat."

Boss, that thing has a lot of possibilities, at that. For instance, I get back from Mars and go out in some heavy drinking company and somebody brags about "being as high as a kite." Then I can pop up with "Tut, tut, my good fellow, but you're looking at a

Nats Are Unable to Locate Alex Carrasquel

Venezuelan's Whereabouts Is 'Mystery'

Hurler Week Overdue In Camp; Harris and Griffith Puzzled Over Missing Pitcher

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 6.—Where is Alex Carrasquel? Pending the answer, there is now a full-blown mystery in the Nats' training camp. The whereabouts of the big Venezuelan pitcher are puzzling the Nats' bosses.

Manager Bucky Harris is beginning to show concern. The absence of the Venezuelan from another club might be deemed important, but the Nats' pitching staff being what it is, Harris wants Carrasquel around. He's the best relief pitcher the Nats own, and Harris unashamedly admits that his club will need relief pitching this year.

Carrasquel is already a week overdue in camp. His boat from Venezuela was supposed to dock on February 27, and the Washington club had already posted with the immigration authorities the bond that would guarantee that Carrasquel "would not become a public charge in the United States."

May Be in Revolution?

Complicating the mystery is the report received from Washington by Clark Griffith that Carrasquel had debarked in New York on the appointed date. That minimizes the possibility that his boat was torpedoed or that the fellow had become embroiled in one of the banana republic revolutions during the winter. But until he puts in an appearance no possibility is discounted.

Carrasquel was not held in great esteem by Manager Bucky Harris last season, but the release of the official pitching averages during the winter gave him added importance. In the averages it was recorded that the Venezuelan, with six victories and only two defeats, was the No. 2 relief pitcher in the American League.

After surveying the Nats' rookie crop here, Harris has developed a new yearning for Carrasquel. He calls the Venezuelan a fixture on his pitching staff now. Harris is not snubbing anybody who can get the ball over the plate with a tolerable amount of stuff.

Clark Griffith is slightly irked by Carrasquel's delay in reporting. "He'll give me a good excuse, or I'll fine him," said the Nats' president, but he does not mean it. All will be forgiven if the Venezuelan reports during the next week. With Griffith unable to understand Spanish, any excuse that the non-English-speaking pitcher gives will be a good one.

Step Up Pace

The pace is beginning to step up daily at Tinker Field, with the pitchers giving the hitters more trouble. Dutch Leonard, Sid Hudson, Ken Chase and Danny MacFayden are beginning to impart their stuff to the ball and the long clouting is less frequent.

Manager Harris revamped his pitching plans for the first exhibition game of the season, against the Cincinnati Reds at Tampa on Sunday. Joe Beck will not be one of the rookie pitchers who will take a turn on the mound. Walter Masterson will get the first three-inning assignment, to be followed by Sam Cunningham and Alex Zukowski.

The promotorial hand of Clark Griffith is seen in the withdrawal of Beck from the Nats' line-up at Tampa. Beck is a graduate of the Orlando club, and Griffith has ordered his debut delayed until the Nats stage their final game in Orlando, which will be against the Giants on Tuesday. Beck will pitch then for the benefit of the Orlando natives.

After a day of confinement to his hotel room with a severe head cold, Griffith was on the field this afternoon, surveying the proceedings from a cushioned armchair on the sidelines. . . . As a precaution that he would not venture from his room yesterday, his daughter Thelma secreted all of Mr. Griffith's trousers. . . . Roger Cramer is not expected to join the Nats for another week. . . . He wrote a letter requesting to be excused because of the slowness of his wife's recovery from a recent operation . . . The newest rookie sensation is Bill Zinser, the Kingston, N. C., right-hander, who has been getting the ball over the plate better than any of the rookies with the afternoon squad. . . . Zinser has a sneaky fast-ball delivery that promises to earn him a chance in the exhibition games.

Gonzaga High, Roosevelt Win In Metro Play

By Bill Burnett

Eastern High's hopes of avenging a 1940 loss to Roosevelt in the annual Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Tournament died a sudden and convincing death last night at Tech gym, the White Tide being beaten out in the semifinals of this year's tourney, 27-20, by Gonzaga High's quintet.

In the finale of a double bill, Roosevelt staked out a strong claim to its second championship in a row by smashing Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 44-27. The two winners will come to grips tomorrow night at Tech gym following a meeting of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier representatives for the girls' championship.

Purple Gets Bid

Informed just before their game of the acceptance of a bid to the Eastern States Catholic Prep Tournament in Newport, R. I., the week of March 17, Gonzaga players came out in high spirits and quickly locked up last night's engagement. With Franny Counselman and Bobby Mulvihill spurring their mates on, the Purple hung up a 10-1 lead in the first quarter and managed to stave off Eastern's direct threat thereafter.

It was the "rubber" clash of the season for the two teams, a split having been accomplished in two previous meetings. Eastern cut its deficit to 16-9 and 19-14 after the second two stanzas, but none of the approximately 5,000 fans in attendance was ever in doubt of the eventual winner. The Purple's floor game and shooting excelled the best Moe Schulman and Company could register.

Mulvihill's stellar all around play as Eastern's Larry Capone held high-scoring Counselman to five points boosted his stock in the race for the Outstanding Player Trophy sky high. He topped the Eagles' scoring, too, with eight points, the same total as Richie Poston, the Tide's smooth young guard.

Poston was the only Eastern player able to hit the rim in his team's near-scoreless first period. It wasn't until three minutes of the second period had elapsed that Mike Lieb, after an astounding assortment of shots had roled off the hoop, finally got a field goal for the losers. It was too late then, however.

If its field efforts had all gone astray, Roosevelt might still have beaten the Barons on foul shots. Fifteen times its stalwarts stood at the foul line, sinking 14 single-pointers in 19 tosses. Bethesda profited by only 9 penalties, but made good on 7 out of its 13 throws.

A low-scoring first period saw the Riders go ahead, 7-2, as Duke Hashagen got the only Baron points. Charley Howard, Frank Ciango and Hymie Perlo, as in most Roosevelt games this year, carried the burden in the second period to bring the count to 17-6, from which Bethesda never recovered. Early in the third session the latter trailed by only 18-4, but the pressure was put on at that point.

Fifteen points by Howard topped the scoring of both teams, three above the total of Bethesda's Bob Cremins. Perlo chalked up 10 points, four on foul shots, while Tommy Robertson was credited with 9 after a fourth-period spree netted three baskets.

On the Line

CONSIDINE

A reporter up front, near the President's desk, said "thank you, Mr. President," and the Secret Service man, who had foghorned "all in!" to start the White House press conference opened the door in the rear of the room. About 50 reporters, including a couple of well-dressed ladies of the press, filed out of the President's study, and Mr. Big leaned back in his chair with a slight sigh, looked up at the ceiling and blew a blast of cigaret smoke up past his long cigaret holder.

Seen there were only Steve Early, two or three secret service men, George Durno, the famed I.N.S. White House correspondent, and this sportswriter left in the round room whose walls are filled with old prints of ships and whose three tall windows command a view of the gray trees of the White House grounds.

Durno lifted out of one of the chairs which served as a kind of barrier to keep the press out of his nibs' tonsils. The President looked up and saw Durno and they chatted awhile. Durno introduced us. It was the anniversary of the President's eighth year in office, and they have been eight tough ones, but his handshake is strong and he still has that ability to erase what is in his mind and concentrate on whatever is at hand, even something as trivial as meeting a sportswriter after 60 reporters have just tried to draw him out on the report that he was going to shelve Knudsen and Stettinius when the lend-lease bill passes.

He said he had read some of these things and we said that we wondered how he ever had time to turn to a sportspage. He said that it might be a good idea if more people did: That sports provide a relaxation and escape which is more needed than ever today. He went on to say, with a laugh, that he wished the White House correspondents would take a cue or two from the sportswriters. We asked him to elaborate on that a little.

The President said that we'd take that press conference, which had just ended, for an example. He said that the boys would have to go back to their offices and knock out a long piece on the fact that there wasn't any new news on lend-lease. He said that suppose a sportswriter wrote a piece about the appearance of a horse in a certain race, and that the horse was scratched. The White House correspondent would write pages on that, he said, but the sportswriter would simply say the horse had been scratched and go on to something else. He'd just say that he didn't run, he repeated.

"He didn't, too," Durno said fervently. The President asked him what he meant and George added, "I mean that dog named Nilon. I had him today at Tropical and what a bum he turned out to be! It's my own fault, though, I guess. I should've known that Nilon isn't supposed to 'run.'" The secret service men winced visibly, but the President let him stay.

We left after that, to make way for Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, who had come in to say goodby before catching the shuttle plane that now seems to run between the White House grounds and London. Biddle was a nut on boxing some years back. He boxed a lot and became part owner of Arthur Dekuh, for whom he threw the famed party for the fight mob which resulted in the unexplained disappearance of much Biddle plate and all the Biddle cigars.

The reason we don't quote the President directly in this epochal dispatch is that that's one of the rules. Roosevelt has relaxed it to a certain extent. Sometimes, in the shuffle of these mass interviews, the President gets off a good phrase and a reporter will ask permission to quote him directly. He gives such permission from time to time, and instructs the stenographer to read the passage slowly, so that the longhand writers can make the proper markings on the backs of the old bills, newspaper edges, cuffs and the like which serve the correspondents as note books.

Wilson was the first to put White House interviews on their present plane, but he didn't hold one all during World War I. Theodore Roosevelt had invited the boys in before Wilson, but just a few and not very often. Harding gave it the informal touch by inviting a roomful of reporters to shout questions at him, but he gave the wrong answers about the Washington arms conference of 1922 and put an inadvisable blast on a couple of Senators.

This led to a public admission that the President was wrong and when Coolidge came in he insisted that all news emanating from the White House be attributed to "a White House spokesman." This ridiculous subterfuge was tossed out by Hoover, but Hoover insisted that questions from the press be submitted in advance in written form. And, like Coolidge, he answered such ones as pleased him, skipping the tough ones.

When Roosevelt II came in, with former reporters like Steve Early, Louie Howe and Marvin McIntyre around him, he opened things up again. He sits at his desk, smoking, and when the room is filled with newspapermen and women, and the door is closed, he leans back and someone will shout out a question. Unless the shouter is in the first row or two of this chairless room (all the reporters stand) the President doesn't see who he is answering. Sometimes he answers directly, sometimes evasively, sometimes with a twist that brings a laugh, and he has been known to command the questioner to go stand in the corner. The Roosevelt interviews are as informal as an interview with Joe Louis, and the day we were there the correspondents got about as much out of the pleasantly talkative Mr. Big as a boxing writer gets out of the taciturn heavyweight champ.

A.A.U. Boxing Renewed With 20 Bouts

Twenty bouts in all classes are scheduled for Turner's Arena tonight when the District Amateur Athletic Union's boxing tournament approaches its climax at 8 o'clock.

Outstanding on tonight's card will be several of the finest naturals the A. A. U. competition has boasted of recent years.

An old feud will be renewed in the senior bout at 147 pounds when Lewis Pavone, of St. Mary's Club of Alexandria, attempts to square accounts with Alan Shreve, of the Merrick Club.

Hanbury vs. Horton

In the senior division at 126 pounds, Lewis Hanbury, of the Merrick Club, is paired with Al Horton, of St. Mary's.

In the third and final senior bout Bill Smith, the fighting National Guardsman now stationed at Camp Meade, Md., boxes Taylor Miller, unattached. This bout was postponed recently due to Smith's illness.

Two novice bouts of unusual promise also mark the card. In a promising 147-pound semifinal exchange Lloyd Rauschkolb, the popular lad from National Training School, will be matched with Larry Baldwin, the redhead from St. Mary's.

McAlwee On Card

In a 126-pound novice quarterfinal bout Raymond McAlwee, the son of Bowling Writer Ben McAlwee and a representative of the Apollo A. C., squares off against Dick Hunt, of Prince Georges County Police Club. Young McAlwee was credited with a smash hit when he rallied in the last round to win his initial tournament start recently.

Vigh-Soose Bout May Prove Dynamite in Fight Mix-up

Middleweight Division Probably Will Be More Muddled by a Vigh Victory

By International News Service

New York, March 6.—The return bout between Ernie Vigh and Billy Soose at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night has the makings of dynamite for the middleweight titular mixup as far as Promoter Mike Jacobs and the New York Boxing Commission are concerned.

Here's the angle:

Suppose Vigh wins? And many wiseacres are willing to wager he will, despite the 8 to 5 odds on Soose.

In the event of a Vigh victory, it would be entirely as expected if Uncle Miguel and the commish find matters in a mess.

The man behind the scenes in the Vigh camp is none other than Sol Gold.

Sollie is the New York agent for one Samuel Pian, Samuel being the boy who skippers N. B. A. Champion Tony Zale and otherwise hobnobs in friendship with the National Boxing Association at Chicago.

The chances are, then, that Sol would take Erne over to the Midwest and end the Newburgh New-Yorker against the N. B. A.'s titlist, the aforementioned Mr. Zale.

Since the winner of the Vigh-Soose engagement has been promised a match with the New York champion, Ken Overlin, a Zale-Vigh meeting in the meantime would mean just another mixup with many potential repercussions.

For example, Vigh might lick Zale, then, much to the unhappiness of Jacobs and the New York gang, return to this region to force a showdown match for the undisputed championship.

Mioland May Not Go Postward In $50,000 Race

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 6.—Trainer Tom Smith said today he still was undecided whether to race Mioland in the $50,000 San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita Park Saturday. Turf experts agreed, however, that a formidable field would seek the last big purse of the meeting.

Of the 22 original nominations, only three candidates have been definitely declared out of the mile and one-half grind—Challedon, Beautiful II and Don Juan.

St. John's High, Rockville Gain Cage Final

St. John's and Rockville High fives advanced to the finals in the senior high class of the annual Rockville Sportsmanship. Tournament last night at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School. The former beat Hyattsville, 36-35, and Rockville downed Sherwood, 37-11.

In earlier games, Leland Junior High defeated Kensington, 40-9, and Stuart doubled the score on Rockville, 39-18. Rockville and Sherwood advanced to the girls finals with respective victories over Poolesville and Bethesda.

Finals are scheduled for tonight; Leland and Stuart in the junior class at 7 p. m.; Rockville and Sherwood in the girls division at 8 o'clock and St. John's and Hyattsville in the varsity finals at 9 o'clock, all at Bethesda's gym.

A field goal in the last 15 seconds by Buddy Spiess gave the Johnnies a 36-35 victory over Hyattsville as Kidwell missed a foul shot that wold have sent the teams into overtime. Hyattsville led, 19-17, at halftime, but dropped behind in the last half only to rally and take a 35-34 lead with less than a minute remaining. Hathaway and Dudley led the winners with 11 points each while Kidwell, Tadlock and Vesperman scored 10 each for the losers.

The Angel Wins Over Steinborn In Wrestling

Maurice (The Angel) Tillet returned to the District in the feature wrestling match last night at Turner's Arena and before a capacity house of 2,900 fans tossed Milo Steinborn after 18 minutes of the feature match.

The Angel used an upside-down body press to pin his opponent after breaking out of a bear hug which Steinborn applied for more than five minutes to no avail.

The semiwindup was the showstealer, Joe Cox landing a right to the jaw and combining it with a body roll to win over Warren Bockwinkle after 20 minutes. The latter was tossed out of the ring five times, once in the press box, and the boys mixed it in the aisle after the bout.

Lou Plummer required 26 minutes to defeat Pierre DeGlene, the former European champ, with a right to the jaw and a body press.

Emil Dusek represented the famed wrestling brothers on the card and won over Ed Newman in 13 minutes, while Fred Grobmier and Paul Boesch battled the full 30 minutes to a draw.

Bruins Engage Collegiates Sunday

A series of games for the colored city cage championship will be inaugurated Sunday afternoon at Turner's Arena when the Washington Bruin (Negro) pro five encounters the Washington Collegiate aggregation at 3 o'clock.

The Collegiates, also known as the Recreation quint, will be bent on turning back the Bruins, who have grabbed the spotlight the Collegiates enjoyed with colored fans last year. The Red and White line-up will include its usual stars, Willie Wynne, Willie Watt, Herbie Jones, Tom Reid, Jimmy Parker, Jerry Cooper and Bruiser Plummer.

Eastern Athletic Head Gets Seton, Baltimore Protests

By the Associated Press

New York, March 6.—Asa Bushnell, director of the central office for Eastern intercollegiate athletics, said today he had received reports from officials of both Seton Hall College and Baltimore University on Seton Hall's protested 45-to-44 basketball victory over Baltimore College.

"The reports will be filed simply for our information," Bushnell said, "since the central office has no jurisdiction over either college. Neither one is affiliated with the central office."

Bushnell said the officials who worked the game, Tom Degnan and Ed Shaw, had not been apppointed by his office, but that both are members in good standing of the Basketball Officials' Bureau.

Mel Trutt In C. U. Meet

The name of Mel Trutt, former Indiana University star distance runner yesterday completed the entry list for the Touchdown Club's new 2-mile invitation event which will bring out Gregory Rice, world's record holder for the 2 and 3-mile run, in the feature attraction of Catholic University's eighth annual indoor track and field meet scheduled for Uline's Arena Monday night.

The smooth running Hoosier star, a member of Indiana's record-holding 4-mile relay team back in 1939 which was made up of such stars as Don Lash, Tommy Deckerd and Bob Smith, in the recent N. Y. A. C. games ran a close second to Rice, forcing the latter the very limit to establish a new record for the indoor 2-mile event.

Six top-ranking distance runners will appear in this headline event, including Joe McCluskey, world's champion cross-country runner; Luigi Beccali, the Italian star; Forrest Efaw, Oklahoma A. and M., and Arthur Adams, of Wake Forest College.

Fred Wolcott, world record holder for the 45, 50 and 60 yard high hurdles, yesterday entered a second event on the huge 28-event program. In addition to placing his record at stake in the 50-yard high hurdle event, the blond Rice Institute star will appear in the A. A. U. 50-yard dash open handicap run. The Texan clips off the 100-yard dash in the amazing time of 9.5 seconds and will be favored to win this event despite giving handicaps up to 8 feet.

Holders of the trio of titles for the high hurdles, Wolcott set a new mark for the 50-yard high hurdles in the Boston meet this winter, topping the timbers in 5.6 seconds. A total of 13 will compete in this 50-yard event, being run off in three heats, while the 50-yard dash will find a total of 33 entrants.

Notre Dames wonder-boy runner, Gregory Rice, who will undoubtedly be the center of attraction of this eighth annual edition, notified school officials yesterday that he will arrive in town late Sunday night or early Monday morning. A luncheon in his honor to be held Monday at 1:30, at the Touchdown Club, has been planned by the Notre Dame Alumni Club of Washington.

Devil's Crag Equals Tropical Course Record in Winning

Jockey Conn McCreary Up On Victor

Son of Diavolo Pays $11.30 Mutuel for $2; No Sir, Favorite, Runs Second

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 6.—Devil's Crag, a stretch-running son of Diavolo from James B. Campbell's barn, equaled the mile and 70 yards track mark in winning the Florida City Purse by four lengths here this afternoon. Conn McCreary, who took a couple of days' rest because of a headache he suffered as the result of his recent spill from Fettacairn, was astride the 4-year-old gelding, which returned $11.30 for $2 and finished in 1:41 4-5. Devil's Crag now shares the record with Shot Put and Bucking.

Joe Pepp's No Sir, favorite in the field of nine veterans, was second by a half length, while Mrs. T. Christopher's Balloter, headed Don Moss for the show award.

Track Is Faster

The Tropical strip has seemed faster this meeting than ever before, with ordinary horses running as fast as stake horses in some events.

Devil's Crag, known to be a slow beginner, was last at the end of the first two furlongs. Tonypandy and then Don Moss had flings at the lead, while No Sir also was right there. The latter got his head in front after turning for home, but was easy prey for Devil's Crag. The latter was good enough to circle the field and still win with plenty to spare. Balloter, after a fast beginning, dropped back temporarily, then came again to head Don Moss.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Turntable, making his first public appearance since running at Saratoga last summer, came up thoroughly fit and won the mile and a sixteenth sixth race, giving Jockey Eddie Arcaro a double. Jan One placed, a head in front of Priority.

This was a roughly waged affair, with most of the horses jammed and bunched during the running. Turntable, in early trouble, got clear for the stretch run and ran over the leader, Jan One. Turnable paid $16.90.

OCTOBRE ONZE gradually worked his way up while circling the field and, responding to strong pressure, drew away in the final furlong. SILVER VOICE, well placed in the early stages, held on gamely in the stretch drive. STINGALING, on the inside early, swung around the leaders rounding the turn and finished with a rush.

MOONFOLLY broke a trifle slowly, gained steadily under hard pressure on the outside after leaving the backstretch, wore the leaders down and won going away. MERRY GESTURE forced a rapid pace and raced WAR DECLARED into defeat. She held on gamely when it came to a drive and outlasted ANOPHELES. The latter suffered from minor interference, but closed stoutly when clear.

DEVIL'S CRAG, under restraint until well around the last turn, moved up with determination when placed to pressure and, going wide, finished fast through the stretch and won going away. NO SIR, steadied back of the pace until leaving the backstretch, moved up strongly when called upon and raced DON MOSS into defeat. He then faltered in the final drive. BALLOTER secured clear passage all the way and wore DON MOSS down.

TURNTABLE, in tight quarters to the stretch turn, moved up with determination when obtaining racing room and drew clear the last sixteenth. JAN ONE, in the thick of contention throughout, held on gamely in the final drive. PRIORITY, also a prominent factor, outgamed BONIPIED, who lost much ground.

COMMENDADOR II, stoutly restrained in the early stages, moved up gradually in the last 3 furlongs, quickly disposed of the leaders when placed to a drive and won in hand. RAHANEE, slow to begin, began to better his position after leaving the backstretch and, stealing through on the inside the last furlong, disposed of the others. INTERLACE responded gamely to punishment and outlasted DANCING LIGHT. The latter took the lead rounding the turn, but faltered through the stretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAYOVA, $17.20, $6.10, $4.60; DR. BONES, $3.40, $3.00; PALCO, $4.10.

GAYOVA worked up to the leaders after the first half mile, continued on with determination and just got up in time in the final drive. DR. BONES stumbled when the break came, held a forward position on the far side, made a bold bid in the stretch, but just failed. PALCO outran his field early, held a safe lead, but tired in the final furlong. CUCKOO, prominently placed throughout, had no excuses.

U. Md.-5th Regiment Games Draw Fine Field to Baltimore

Fred Wolcott, Blozis Among Star Entries

Don Lash, McCluskey, Meadows Entered in 5th Renewal of Meet; Trials Start at 6 P. M.

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 6.—Flying Freddie Wolcott, of Rice Institute, world's premier hurdler seeking his fourth indoor timber record, heads a star-spangled string of track and field luminaries entered in the annual University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment games tomorrow night at Baltimore Armory. Trials begin at 6 o'clock and finals at 8 p. m.

Already possessor of new marks in the 40, 50 and 60-yard barriers, Wolcott will take a crack at the 70-yard mark of 8.4 seconds held by Allan Tolmich, of Detroit.

Geary Eppley, Maryland athletic director, sounds like a circus barker when he begins rattling off names of the lads he's lined up for the Baltimore classic inaugurated in 1937.

Blozis Favorite

But he won't require a brass band when Wolcott, Georgetown's Al Blozis, Don Lash, of Indiana; Southern California's Earle Meadows, the veteran Joe McCluskey, of New York; Charlie Beetham, former Ohio State ace, and others too numerous to list trot forth.

Besides the performances of Blozis, out to shatter his own indoor shotput mark, Wolcott in the hurdles, the pole vaulting of Meadows, and Lash and McCluskey in the 2-mile miss-and-out, a smart duel is promised in the featured Oriole 660.

Entry of Davis Bunting, Navy ace, boosts the 660 field to five and makes it a wide-open affair between Bunting, Sanford Goldberg, of the Millrose A. A., defending 1940 champion; Beetham, holder of the Oriole record of 1:22.7 set in 1939; Jim Kehoe, of the Washington A. A., and North Carolina's Dave Morrison, Southern Conference half-mile titleholder.

Nine Relays in Meet

Plenty of thrills are expected in the 18 individual classes, and the nine relays should shed light on the quartets to watch in the approaching spring outdoor meets.

The huge armory boasts one of the few 220-yard lap tracks in the country, and the straight-away permits 70-yard sprints and hurdle races without cramping.

Hoyas, Catholic Among Local Favorites

Georgetown, which is defending the collegiate team trophy, will be in practically every event in this class and in the A. A. U. section, with its varsity and freshman relay teams both hooked up in big races. Blozis will be defending his shotput title and Morty Alnwick is the 440-yard champion and record holder of 51.2. The potent Hoyas Frosh also are likely to bring home the team trophy in the A. A. U. section.

Tommy Fields, Maryland's star, will lead an array of Terp talent into the meet; Catholic U. is determined to regain its Mason-Dixon Conference relay crown and to gather points in the individual classes, while Central, Roosevelt and Tech all will have relay teams in action in addition to trying for individual laurels. Eddie Barham, of Tech, is the defending champion in the scholastic high jump and picked to repeat.

Kehoe Anchor Man

Jim Kehoe, of Washington A. A., will run in the featured Oriole 660 and will anchor the club's relay team in a race in which the Georgetown frosh will run.

Georgetown's varsity four will figure in the meet's final against North Carolina's Conference championship quartet, Maryland and Catholic U.

Conn Knocks Out Dan Hassett Here

Conn weighed in at 181 pounds for the fight, the most he has ever weighed since he decided to give up his light-heavyweight championship in an effort to outbox Louis for the "big money" title—the heavyweight crown.

The Conn-Hasset business topped an "all-star" card which closed with Chalky Wright, ebony-hued 128-pounder from New York, knocking out Texas Lee Harper, 134, of Los Angeles, in 1 minute 35 seconds of the third round of their scheduled ten-rounder.

Wright worked on Harper for two rounds before finally finding the range. The killing punch was a smashing left hook to the pit of the stomach. It knocked Harper through the ropes, and Referee Bowen counted him out as he lay on the shoulder of the ring.

Carol Alexander, 126½, of Alexandria, got the night off to a good start in the opening four-rounder by winning his sixth fight as a professional over a determined youngster from Baltimore, Vince Truminello, 124. Alexander smashed Truminello's nose open in the first round with a hard left hook and punished him relentlessly over the heart and to the head with a looping right hand.

Johnny Forte, Philadelphia Golden Gloves graduate, 123, knocked down Billy Banks, Washington colored featherweight, in the fifth round and almost finished him, but he had to be satisfied with the eight round decision in the second "all-star" bout. Banks, at 127½, stabbed Forte constantly with a long left jab and had to use his superior speed and fighting ability time after time to keep out of trouble. At the bell, Forte caught Banks with a left hook to the chin, and again Banks was almost out.

First signs of displeasure from the crowd came when Johnny Kaplovich, 178, of Baltimore, took the ring to punch out a dull 8-round decision over Conn's stablemate, Willie Pavlovich also 178.

With cushions thrown by irate spectators surrounding him, Matador Lorenza Garza (foreground, carrying sword), leaves the ring accompanied by an assistant, to the taunts of the crowd after failing in nine thrusts to kill his bull at Mexico City. A return engagement has been booked between El Toro and Matador Garza for Sunday and Garza will have a chance to redeem himself

'Skin Players To Play Donkey Baseball Here

Assurance that the Washington Redskins would take part in the four-day donkey basketball carnival at Uline Ice Arena which starts next Tuesday and runs through Friday, was confirmed last night by the Northeast Business Men's Association, which is sponsoring the event for its charity fund.

Charley Malone, popular end, is rounding up the Redskins who spend the off-season in and around Washington and will pick a lineup from Bob Masterson, Vic Carroll, Clem Stralka, Jim Meade, Bob McChesney, Bill Young, Clyde Shugart and Capt. and Assistant Coach Turk Edwards in addition to several more 'Skins he may corral later.

The footballers will oppose a team of visiting cowboys headed by Thornie Guest, noted rodeo performer and movie actor who has played with Tom Mix. Guest, who is a former Western Cattlemen's Association rodeo all-around champion, will have on his team Ray DeEvans, of Colorado, winner of numerous rodeo saddles and the three Boyd brothers, Jack, Tom and Bill, all of whom hold various championships. Guest also was one of the stars in the Col. Tim McCoy rodeo.

In addition to the Redskins and Guest's Cowboys other teams who have definitely signified their intentions of performing are the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Sholl's Girls' Skyrockets, Pomona Senoritas, Uline's Red Haired Usherettes, Boys Club of Washington and the Police Boys Club. It is hoped that teams representing the Police and Fire Departments and various other local agencies will take part.

Proceeds will be devoted to the Northeast Business Men's Association charity fund, which donates to the Red Cross, Community Chest, Boys Club of Washington and various Catholic, Protestant and Jewish charitable organizations. Tickets are on sale at Uline Ice Arena box office, priced at 20 cents for children, 55 cents and 75 cents and reserved seats at $1.10. Phone reservations are bing handled at Lincoln 8500.

Landon Soccer Team Wins, 1 to 0

John Sager, husky veteran, tallied the winning goal in the second quarter after the shot had been set up by Walter Johnson.

G. U. Hockey Team Plays Penn State

Georgetown's hockey team has transferred its remaining games to Riverside Stadium and will meet Penn State there tomorrow night at 8 p. m. Public skating will be offered with the price of admission.

The Nittany Lions, led by Gerry Gates one of collegiate hockey's outstanding players, have beaten Temple twice and Carnegie Tech while losing to John Carroll.

Georgetown is unbeaten against Temple and Lehigh.

Bull Fighter Gets Another Chance To Throw Bull

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, March 6.—Matador Lorenzo Garza, who lost a bull fight to the bull last Sunday, is going to get another chance next Sunday—and he had better be brilliant.

The government amusement office fined him 1,000 pesos (about $200) because he failed to dispatch a bull in nine attempts in last Sunday's corrida, and government sources said further punitive measures were under consideration because of the protests of 30,000 fans.

These measures, they said, might mean cancellation of all Garza's contracts for the rest of the season—at 18,000 pesos (about $3,500) the contract.

The bull ring management seized the opportunity to advertise in all Mexico City newspapers urging the fans to give Garza another chance next Sunday. It predicted the temperamental matador "again will scale the heights of emotion and glory."

And, Boss, that is about as high as I would have been had we followed Brother Benton's pay-as-you-drink plan.

But let's change to the subject of Bob Considine. He was in town yesterday saying he was bound for Florida, Nassau and other points. He recently returned from Hawaii, went back to New York long enough to cool off and then headed South. Bob said he just dropped in on us, but I could tell by the way he was standing around that he had read that Westbrook Pegler letter of mine and that he wanted me to write something about him.

He was traveling with wife, Mildred, and son, Mike. They are slumming along in a brand new Cadillac. I knew Bob when he lived so close to the railroad over Northeast that he could stand on the back porch and catch cinders in a bucket. And it is only fair for me to say, that he knew me when I didn't have a bucket to catch in.

Well, Boss, when Bob worked with us in the Sports Department and I started to talk about my kids, he almost invariably turned and walked away, thus giving me a sort of silent raspberry or bird. When the other fellows laughed at one of my homey yarns, Bob yawned.

Yesterday, I asked Bob how his little boy was doing. Well, he grabbed me by the suspenders and I was forced to listen to HIS story about HIS boy. Driving down from New York, Bob's wife remarked, "You're not driving very well, Bob. You're not on your toes." Little Mike, in the rear seat, interrupted with, "I'll tell you what we'll do, Mother. When we get to the next gas station let's take his shoes off and see if he's on his toes."

Now, Boss, I repeat that Considine is bound for Florida, Nassau and .... ..... Don't let that give you any ideas. Always your ace,

A. A. U. Court Titles to Regal And Treasury

Basketball champions in three divisions were crowned last night in the finals of the District A. A. U. tournament. The Regal Clothiers gained the unlimited class title by defeating the Adam Hats, 63-36. The 145-pound crown went to the Washington Boys Club, Central Branch, by virtue of a 27-25 victory over the Merrick Boys Club. As usual, the Treasury team won the championship in the girls' division, downing Bacas, 31-19. The games were staged at Heurich's gymnasium.

The Adam Hats, winners over Delaware & Hudson, last year's champions, were unable to keep up with the Clothiers who forged to a 26-17 lead at the end of the first half. Regal was not seriously threatened in the second half. Custer, Vianna and Burns were the high guns in the Regal attack while M. Heddings contributed 15 points to the Hats' losing cause.

Merrick Leads

The Boys Club clash was a sizzler, with first one club and then the other in front. Merrick led by 11-10 at the half. Washington's points were distributed while Poston carried the bulk of the scoring punch for the losers.

Treasury's girls, numbering many former Rockville stars, drew away from Bacas in the second half. They held a 13-12 advantage at the half. Forwards Lanier, Howard and Goetz kept the ball going through the hoop steadily near the close. Guards on both teams put up good performances.

N. Y. U. Suspends 3 in Row Over Negro Athlete

By the Associated Press

New York, March 6.—Seven students of New York University College of Liberal Arts and Sciences were suspended temporarily today by Dean Charles Maxwell McConn for circulating a petition protesting the exclusion of a Negro athlete from a track team competing in Washington, D. C., Monday.

The petition compared the failure to include George Hagans, co-captain of the track team, to the case of Leonard Bates, Negro football star, who was not included among the players taken to play Missouri College last fall.

A spokesman for the college denied that any discrimination had been shown.

Pointing out that Catholic University, sponsors of the meet, had invited N. Y. U. to enter a 2-mile track team, he said four men and a substitute made up the team and that Hagens ranked seventh or eighth in the 2-mile field.

The students circulated the petition after being denied permission to do so by Dean McConn. He said the request had been refused because the petition misstated the facts.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

The last edition of Arlington-Fairfax Chapter's "Ike Walton Scream" (published once in awhile) didn't reach us in time to pass the news on to our readers before their last meeting, but there are a couple of pertinent passages worth considering at any time.

ACKERMAN

The first is on attendance, and each individual's share in keeping it up. Ike F. B. Brinkley says: "Listen, you guys! Somebody oughta do something—are you mad at poor old Ike Walton—last meeting looked like a wake—don't leave it to the few old faithfuls to keep the fires burning forever. Don't you like Ike anymore, or is it because you are sore at someone else—if so, come on out and raise hell about it—after all, one night a month isn't too much to give to the preservation of the things that give us so much fun."

"Look at it this way—suppose you had a corn crib—suppose some so-and-so came sneaking in every night and stole a few ears of corn. You wouldn't sit down and watch that scoundrel steal your corn ear by ear, or wait for your neighbor to come over and shoo him away—not by a damn sight—you'd do something about it yourself. Now, instead of corn, put fish and game in that crib, and suppose the crib is the whole State of Virginia. Just as that mythical corn disappeared, so are your fish and game disappearing—because we are waiting for the other guy to do something about it. Come on out and protect the crib so that there may be game and fish for all of us."

Attendance at your Izaak Walton meetings is desirable at any time, but particularly so this month with the national convention being held here late this month. Lest you forget, this organization has done more to preserve and make your outdoors more worthwhile to live in than any other two in the whole country.

Cotton thread and three and six-thread fishing lines are coming into more general use, because anglers are finding their sport is materially enhanced with its use for most of our small game fishes.

The 3-thread, which we always believed must be ordered made-up at the factory, we find, through a light line enthusiast, is made by Ashaway and can be ordered through any sports store.

In answer to his letter to this column about it, we advised the use of one of the tournament lines, which are usually available. The cutty-hunk 3-thread however, will stand up better in the salt-water, and has the same breaking strength — nine pounds.

More than a dozen blue marlin have been raised to sailfish baits during the past several weeks, in the Palm Beach area, but those hooked were lost because the tackle was inadequate. Within two days of the time the boats started using heavier tackle the first fish was boated. It was caught by George Thorn, weighed 250 pounds and measured nine feet two inches. With the season for blue marlin just about getting under way, these early indications look like exceptional fishing.

Bill Wright Rolls All-Time League High

Bill Wright got loose again last night at Penn Recreation in the Agriculture Inter-Bureau loop and rolled a season high game of 180 which he followed with a 462 set, the latter chalking up an all-time record over the 25 years existence of the league. It was natural for Wright's Surveys team to take highs after his tremendous wallops, which they did with 641 and 1,786.

INTERIOR

Leo Bittner, National Capital Parks quintet of the Interior League at Penn Recreation, had top game of 163 which helped his mates take the team highs after pinfalls of 623 and 1,766. D. H. Watson, Topography, was best for individual set after a count of 390.

LADIES' FEDERAL

It was all Inez Bryan and her GPO team in the Ladies' Federal meet at Arcadia last night. Sparking the league with individual highs of 144 and 363. Miss Bryan made it possible for her GPO quintet to take the highs with 349 for game and 1,571 for the set.

C. & P. LEAGUE

The C. & P. Telephone boys at the Ice Palace were led by Siddall, Dupont, who had 157 for top game, and Berry, Traffic, whose 391 set was best of all. The Georgia and Government No. 2 teams divided team honors, the first with a 612 game and the latter with 1,691 for the set.

AUTOMOTIVE

The Washington Automotive League at the Ice Palace was sparked by Ed McConnet, G. M. A. C., and Elwood Ey, Loving Motors, who had high game and set of 147-377, respectively, with the latter aiding his quintet to high set with a 1,678 count. Pokanka Service took top game with 611.

2 Redland Riders Shipshape For Races, Despite Difficulties

Mrs. McSherry and Miss Johnson Compete Tomorrow in Point-to-Point Events

By Anne Hagner

It takes much more than a fall on slippery ground, a brain concussion, a horse crashing through a bridge, and the necessity of vanning another horse from New York to keep two enthusiastic feminine riders out of the Redland Hunt's point-to-point races Saturday afternoon in nearby Maryland.

The two ladies involved, Mrs. Frank McSherry and Miss Judy Johnson, will definitely have entries in the event, but during the last week the fates have combined in an effort to keep them out.

Mrs. McSherry, whose Regiment took a spectacular fall over the last fence in the 1940 race and painfully injured his owner-rider, was pointing the gelding for the much-sought-after Redland Bowl Saturday to make up for last year's accident.

Regiment Injured

While hunting early this month, Regiment ran afoul of a flimsy bridge and fell through, putting himself on the temporarily retired list for the rest of the season.

Mrs. McSherry, determined to have a mount learned that she could regain ownership of her 1938 Dunboyne challenge bowl winner, The Fox, who has been hunting and showing in New York for the last two years. Although he has not been raced since his Redland victory, he is in excellent condition and Mrs. McSherry is thus assured of a ride.

Judy Johnson, widely known woman trainer of steeplechasers and flat racers, has had charge of Master of Fox Hounds Thomas T. Mott's timber toppers and hunters for several years. With the Mott horses at the Benning track in training for Saturday's races, Miss Johnson found herself without a hunter last week and borrowed a hunt staff horse for the Redland outing.

Unfortunately, the pair struck an icy spot and crashed earthward in a hard spill that sent Miss Johnson, unconscious, to Garfield Hospital with what turned out to be a slight concussion of the brain.

Judy Rides Again

But, as Redland's die-hard followers say, "It was just a concussion, so of course Judy will be able to ride on Saturday." Spectators at the 1939 meeting, who saw Miss Johnson get a fractured collarbone in a spill and return to watch the rest of the races, would be surprised to hear that anything short of an earthquake could keep her on the ground.

Four events are on Saturday's card, including the Redland Bowl, the Terpenning Cup, for pairs of hunters, the heavyweight race and the gap hunters' race.

Entries in the featured Redland Bowl event are last year's winner, Gerald B. Webb, jr.'s Longitude, Mott's Play Pal and Port Law, Bill Lasell's Decrescent, Blair Richards' Goodworth, Nancy Hanna's Gone Away and Hazel Welsh's Windsor Boy.

Surprise entries from Mrs. Altemus Whitney's Llangollen Farms include Airy Spirit, to be ridden by Norman Haymaker, and Sky Painter, with Billy Hurlburt.

Recent additions to the entries follow:

REDLAND BOWL—Balleroy, Duhallow Farms entry, ridden by Mary Maxwell; The Banshee, Duhallow Farms, ridden by William W. Gulick, jr.; Cheyenne, owned and ridden by Mrs. D. Hunt; Mowgli, Crompton Smith entry, ridden by T. B. Brown; Airy Spirit, Mrs. M. E. Whitney entry, ridden by Norman Haymaker; Sky Painter, Mrs. M. E. Whitney entry, ridden by Billy Hurlburt; Goodworth, owned and ridden by Blair Richards.

Dykes Pleased

Pasadena, Calif., March 6 (AP).—Jimmy Dykes, who has more capable infielders for his Chicago White Sox than at any time since he took over as manager, refuses to make any predictions, but advises fans to "keep your eye on the White Sox in 1941."

Dykes, who always has come up short of infield replacements, now, for instance, can have Dario Lodigiani fill in for Bob Kennedy at third, Skeeter Webb for Luke Appling at short, and Don Kolloway for Bill Knickerbocker at second. Dykes already has indicated they all will stick with the club.

Pirates at Bat

San Bernardino, Calif., March 6 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirate pitchers were given an hour's drill today on batting under personal supervision of Manager Frankie Frisch, who said "I don't see why you big bozos should be so helpless with bats."

Leroy Glenn Buckmaster, 20-year-old southpaw rookie of Fullerton, Calif., was assigned to the Hutchinson, Kans., Club of the Western Association. He was brought to camp and sponsored by Arky Vaughan, who used to live in Fullerton, but now runs a sheep ranch in Potter Valley, Calif.

Gehringer in Shape

Lakeland, Fla., March 6 (AP).—Charley Gehringer, who wasn't due here until Sunday, arrived in the Detroit Tiger camp today for his seventeenth season as second baseman.

"I'm feeling a lot better than I felt a year ago," Charley said.

At this time last year Charley's back was sore, and it stayed sore all season.

In December, 1938, U. S. Rubber resumed dividend payments on its noncumulative preferred stock after a lapse of 11 years. Annual dividends of $8 a share were paid for 1938, 1939 and 1940.

A dividend of $2 a share on the preferred has been declared payable March 28 to holders of record March 21.

London Stocks

London, March 6 (AP).—Better rated issues on the stock market enjoyed a fair demand today, but the general list was hesitant and activity light.

The government's new plan for consolidation of industry was partly blamed for the lack of interest in most equities. At the same time this plan was credited with bringing buyers into the industrial section, investors apparently preferring to keep funds in the highest rated issues until a better view of the plan could be had.

Toward the close there was scattered buying in stocks of some industries thought likely to be less affected by the large-scale rationalization of business.

Boston Wool

Boston, March 6 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Activity in the Boston wool market today was confined closely to the finer grades of foreign wools. Very little interest was shown in greasy domestic wools. A little 12-months Texas wool was sold at $1.08 to $1.08, scoured basis, and 8-months Texas wool was moved at 98 to 98 cents, scoured basis. A fair demand existed for some lines of domestic scoured and milled wools for use in the manufacture of woolens.

Bank Excess Reserves Off $100,000,000

By the Associated Press

Lendable excess reserves of banks declined $100,000,000 to $6,440,000,000 in the week ended March 5.

The Federal Reserve Board said the decline was due to several technical factors, particularly a temporary increase of money in circulation. The board's statement said:

"During the week ended March 5 member bank reserve balances decreased $39,000,000. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of $80,000,000 in money in circulation, $23,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $19,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, offset in part by increases of $58,000,000 in gold stock, $14,000,000 in reserve bank credit, and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency and a reduction of $12,000,000 in Treasury cash. Excess reserves of member banks on March 5 were estimated to be approximately $6,440,000,000, a decrease of $100,000,000 for the week.

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended March 5, 1941, were reported as follows, in millions of dollars:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 6 (AP).—Overnight accumulation of selling orders, inspired largely by receipt of good snow and rain at many points in the Southwestern winter wheat belt, caused wheat prices to tumble as much as 1¼ cents in early dealings today, but all of the loss was wiped out later.

May wheat fell to 81¼ and July to 77⅜ in the first few minutes of trading. The remainder of the session was required for a laborious recovery move, with buying based partly on the stronger tone of securities. Some orders were credited to previous short sellers and milling interests.

Wheat closed ⅛ lower to ¼ higher compared with yesterday, May 82⅜@82½, July 78⅜@78½; corn unchanged to ⅛ up, May 61¼, July 61½; oats ⅛ higher; soybeans ½@¾ higher; rye unchanged to ⅛ up and lard 10 to 15 higher.

Exporters reported Great Britain took additional quantities of Canadian wheat overnight and in Winnipeg the amount was estimated at 250,000 bushels.

Crop experts said the favorable moisture situation, strengthened by recent rains and snows, virtually assures a good start for the crop when the growing season gets under way. They said it is probable some of the acreage killed during the winter would be reseeded within allotment limits and that because of the moisture condition the chance for spring seeded grain was better than usual.

The Balkan situation continued to disturb the trade but this, as well as other threatening aspects of the war and the uncertain domestic farm program, were regarded as retarding factors rather than influencing operations on either side of the market. There was conflicting opinion as to the ultimate market effect of some of the farm proposals pending in Congress.

U. S. Turkey Crop Seen 3% Lower

By the Associated Press

Reports from poultry farmers indicate, the Agriculture Department said yesterday, that this year's turkey crop will be about 3 per cent smaller than last year's record crop.

The department said producers plan to hatch the same number of poults but to buy 5 per cent fewer from commercial hatcheries than a year ago. In only one region—the North Atlantic States—was an increase in production indicated.

Glass Output Sets New Peak in Month

New York, March 6 (AP).—January saw new records reported for virtually all branches of the glass industry the trade magazine Glass Industry reported today. Based on its compilations from trade sources and its own estimates, the magazine said the month's production figure was $34,000,000 as compared to $30,000,000 in January, 1940.

Exchange Markets

Stocks Stage Broad Rally As Confidence Revives Somewhat; Steel Issues Lead Rise

New York, March 6.—Buying confidence revived in the stock market today and leading industrials and rails retrieved 1 to around 3 points of recent losses. The list got off to a hesitant start. Bidders then began to push up prices on relatively small volume. Activity expanded in the fourth hour and final quotations were around the best of the day.

The Asociated Press average of 60 stocks held a net gain of .4 of a point, at 41.2, largest day's advance since February 24. The turnover of 480,010 shares compared with 286,990 yesterday and was a high mark since February 14. The market broadened considerably on the comeback, 677 individual issues changing hands against 587 the day before.

Feeling that the list was "oversold," brokers said, had much to do with inspiring short covering and reinstatement of commitments in steels, motors, rails, aircrafts, coppers and an assortment of industrial specialities. In addition, a little more attention was paid to the flow of optimistic business items including favorable dividends and earnings statements.

While puzzling Balkan war shifts remained as market handicaps, along with apprehension over taxes and Congressional debate over the lease-lend bill, the thought began to crop up in some quarters that maybe a lot of this had been pretty well discounted.

The ease with which 203,000 shares of United States Steel were sold privately Tuesday brought belated cheer to recovery proponents. Underwriters today announced stabilization of this stock at the selling price of 57 was being discontinued, but "big steel" finished up 1⅜ at 5¼. Bethlehem, reflecting huge backlogs disclosed by President Grace, jumped 3½ to 79⅝.

Helpful was the more than seasonal upturn in last week's freight loadings to the highest total for any like period since 1940.

Prominent on the forward reversal were Youngstown Sheet, Republic Steel, Crucible Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, White Motors, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Westinghouse, General Electric, Dow Chemical, DuPont, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Loft, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Texas Corporation, American Telephone and Western Union.

United States Rubber responded to the first declaration of a dividend on the common stock in 20 years with a gain of 1⅛ at 21⅜.

Carrier loans led the bond department into high territory. Staples such as coca, rubber, hides and sugar displayed strength in the commodities division. Grains failed to follow. Wheat at Chicago was off ¼ of a cent a bushel to up as much. Corn was unchanged to up ¼. Cotton improved 5 to 10 cents a bale.

In the Curb, Midvale was ahead 3¾ and lesser advances were posted for Mead Johnson, Jones & Laughlin, Buckeye Pipe and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Dealings here were around 101,000 shares versus 61,000 Wednesday.

Refugee Gold Of Vichy to Be Shipped to U.S.

By the Associated Press

Lisbon, Portugal, March 6.—Gold which the Vichy government sent to Dakar, French West Africa, at the time of the French collapse last June will be shipped to the United States for safe-keeping, an informed source said today.

The amount already in Lisbon was said to be worth about $10,000,000. This, it was said, had been brought by plane from Tangier and would be shipped to the United States as soon as the French Legation reaches an agreement with the American Export Line on rates.

How the gold was taken to Tangier from Dakar was not disclosed. It is being carried from Tangier to Lisbon, it was said, by a single plane of the Aero Portuguesa Co. which makes as many as five trips a week in addition to regularly scheduled passenger trips.

Theft Is Recalled

It was recalled here that part of the big gold shipment to Dakar disappeared while the ship was bound for Africa. Five seamen were arrested.

(The arrested seamen were charged with having stolen several million francs worth of gold pieces from the reserves of the Bank of France which were loaded on a ship at Brest while the Germans were shelling the city. A sack containing 10,000 gold pieces was declared to be missing when the cargo was unloaded at Dakar, Senegal.)

(Another cache of $250,000,000 in gold bars was reported last July to be hidden on the French Island of Martinique. Protection of this gold from German seizure was said at the time to be the reason why a British naval patrol was standing by off th Martinique coast.

Nazis Get Belgian Gold

(Representatives of the Belgian government in exile charged February 5 that the French, at the behest of German authorities, were shipping $26,000,000 of Belgian gold from Dakar to Belgium by plane. Court action was announced in New York to tie up $260,000,000 of French funds in the United States.

(The Belgians said $260,000,000 of Belgian's $700,000,000 gold reserves was sen to France at the time of the invasion for safe keeping. When France fell, the Belgians said, the French refused to put the gold aboard a British warship and it was sent to Dakar instead.

(At the same time Wall Street circles reported rumors that more than $100,000,000 in gold was sent to Africa, and especially to Dakar, by the French.)

Railroad Freight Loadings Jump 19.2% in Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 756,670 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday. This was an increase of 78,177 cars, or 11.5 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 122,034, or 19.2 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 162,246, or 27.3 per cent, compared with 1939.

All classes of loadings showed increases over the previous week, which included the Washington's Birthday holiday. Miscellaneous freight and less-than-car lot merchandise scored notable gains, boosting total loadings substantially more than seasonally expected. Total loadings were the largest since early November and were the highest for any like week since 1930.

Douglas Issues Report As Head Of Mutual Life

A nine-point program for the future, intended to provide new investment outlets, improve investment yields, rehabilitate impaired assets, provide independent annual audits, develop improved types of policies, and make provision for the write-down of mortgages, real estate and other assets to "realistic values," is outlined in the ninety-eighth annual report of the Mutual Life Insurance Co of New York.

DOUGLAS

The report is the first to be issued under the administration of Lewis W. Douglas, former United States budget director, who became president of the company on January 1, 1940.

New insurance issued in 1940 by Mutual Life of New York totaled $193,449,925, and the total of insurance in force on December 31, 1940, was $3,705,911,798, as compared with $3,740,731,467 a year earlier. On the same date, the company's total admitted assets were $1,484,904,216, which represents an increase of $40,436,594 over the preceding year-end. Benefit payments to policyholders and their beneficiaries, the report reveals, totaled $107,233,223 in 1940.

Income in 1940 was $186,677,575, which was $57,439,168 in excess of outgo for benefit claims and operating expenses. This balance was increased to $58,282,600 by an excess of profits over losses on the sale of redemption of bond holdings and sale of foreclosed real estate.

The report states that the audit of the company's assets indicated that on a realistic basis, the value of mortgage loans and real estate holdings was less than the amount at which such assets were being carried. Because of this, $23,300,000 of surplus funds were set aside as a special reserve for mortgage loans, and $6,650,000 as a special reserve against real estate held. In addition another $1,000,000 was earmarked for the purpose of adding to the reserves for annuities.

10% Wage Increases Granted Wool Workers

Boston, March 6 (AP).—The American Woolen Co. and the Textile Workers Union of America (C. I. O.) signed today agreements which provided for 10 per cent wage increases for 28,000 employes of the company in its New England plants.

The agreements run for two years, and provide for arbitration of grievances and no strikes or lockouts during the life of the contract.

Joseph Salerno, State director of the T. W. U. A., said increases would be sought for 160,000 workers in other woolen plants in the United States.

Brokers Loans Rise $1,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $348,600,000. The week ended yesterday and the total represented an increase of $1,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $482,000,000.

Engineering Awards Maintain Fast Pace

New York, March 6 (AP).—Engineering construction awards this week totaled $103,962,000, the third successive week that contracts have topped the $100,000,000,000 mark, Engineering News-Record reported today.

The fast pace which contracts have set during the last three weeks has been matched only twice since the magazine began compiling weekly figures. Those occasions were in May, 1929, and October, 1940.

Compared with the previous week, awards were 13 per cent smaller but they were more than 2½ times as large as the same week a year ago.

Cotton Futures

New York, March 6 (AP).—Cotton futures picked up further gains today but failed to hold them in full. The close was 1 to 3 points higher.

Domestic trade buying and Bombay support for new crop positions steadied the list in the face of spot selling of March and scattered hedging.

Worth Street business in gray goods was estimated at more than 10,000,000 yards. Print cloths and related fabrics moved well at the advanced price levels. Premiums of ⅛ cent a yard were reported to have been freely paid on popular numbers for spot delivery.

Exports Wednesday nil; season so far, 736,858 bales; port receipts, 9,287; port stocks, 3,476,628.

Cottonseed Oil

New York, March 6 (AP).—Cottonseed oil futures today extended the March climb into new high seasonal levels on the largest turnover since last November 20. Closing sales ranged from 7 to 10 points.

Commission house buying was spurred by reports of tightness in crude oil markets. Dealings totaled 298 contracts.

March closed at *8.67, May *8.74, July *8.99, September 8.96, October 8.98.
*Bid.

Crude oil was boosted ¼ cent a pound in Texas, trading at 6½ cents. In the Southeast and Valley it was 5¾ bid.

Year-Around Daylight Savings Time Planned

New York, March 6 (AP).—When daylight savings time goes into effect April 27, it may be retained "for the duration" of the national defense emergency, some industrial circles said today.

Year-end daylight time, it was pointed out, would lighten the electric current load needed for illumination purposes, freeing part of regular power production capacity for defense goods manufacturing use.

Canada already has adopted "year round" daylight savings time. In 1917, daylight time put into effect in the spring was retained in the United States throughout the duration of World War No. 1.

Electric power production currently is aggregating around 2,825,510,000 kilowatt hours weekly. Power officials say daylight time roughly reduces power production around 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 kilowatt hours weekly throughout the summer.

U. S. Speeding HomeBuilding, Bankers Told

By the Associated Press

New York, March 6.—Justin Hartzog, assistant regional coordinator of defense housing, said today that allocations for the construction of more than 70,000 houses have been made from $290,000,000 in Federal funds since the defense emergency began.

"Contracts have been awarded for the construction of almost 40,000 of these, and 2,500 are occupied," he told the Eastern regional conference of the American Bankers Association. "Of the allocations we have made, more than 47,000 of the dwelling units will house civilian workwith more than 23,000 for the families of enlisted personnel. . . .

"We are, in addition to the amendment to the National Housing Act, asking that Congress appropriate $150,000,000 additional for the construction of housing which private enterprise cannot supply. We hope that this will be sufficient for our present needs."

Dr. Ernest M. Fischer, director of research and real estate finance of the American Bankers Association, said that in many cases Governmental financing of housing was necessary.

"It is obvious," said Dr. Fischer, "that in the isolated rural community where new plants have been constructed for the manufacture of munitions and powder, housing for employes cannot be financed by private funds. The alternative of Government financing appears to be the only solution of the problem in these communities.

"From this clear-cut case, the problem becomes more and more difficult of analysis, and the determination of the extent to which private funds can be used in financing defense housing becomes more and more a question of the exercise of judgment."

It will take a neat bit of traveling, but when Helen Hayes goes on her Nation-wide tour in the stage revival of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," she also plans to get to C. B. S.'s studios each Sunday to present her weekly radio play.

The "Twelfth Night" itinerary begins in Washington next Monday. The next week it will play Baltimore. Then follow Buffalo, N. Y.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Columbus, Detroit, St. Louis, Madison, Wis.; Milwaukee, and Chicago. Which means that the play will be on the road till well into June probably.

But Miss Hayes, known as the First Lady of the Theater, has worked out a schedule whereby she can fly from her various tour towns to New York City or to Chicago for the Sunday broadcasts. On Friday previous to the broadcasts, Producer Adrian Samish, Therese Lewis, the story editor, and the entire supporting cast, will fly from New York to the city where Miss Hayes is appearing and there hold the rehearsals for the radio play. Then they'll all fly back. It makes a sizeable budget item for travel.

This Sunday's radio presentation by Miss Hayes will be "Comstock Queen," the story of the young Scottish girl who discovered the famous Comstock lode in Nevada and who subsequently became the leader of the fabulous boom town called Virginia City. It is taken directly from the pages of American history.

Big Party Held For Joe, a Little Fella Who Is Ill

To some he's only "Joe"—just a likable kid, sick with pneumonia. He doesn't say much; he doesn't ask much. But last night down at Providence Hospital, where he's convalescing, Joe's wardmates give him a party

Last Christmas, after a long wait, Joseph Cranford, of 809 F Street Southwest, was given a bicycle by his folks. So enthusiastic was he that he rode his bike at every chance, undeterred by bad weather. A few days later he was in Providence. "To much exposure," said physicians —"pneumonia."

At the hospital, the youth, who attends St. Dominic's Parochial School, was placed in St. Vincent's ward. All the other patients there were adults, most of them recovering from operations. Four immediately adopted him as the ward mascot.

Which is why last night at 7:30 a glistening birthday cake, made by Weber, the Shoreham's pastry chef, and complete with a frosted "Happy Birthday Joe" and 13 candles was brought into St. Vincent's ward where Joe sat in a wheel chair. Then came ice cream and the four friends who made Joe's day complete—William Stone, of 3027 Fifteenth Street Northwest; John Rutley, 5316 Fourth Street Northwest; Fred Ward, Capitol Heights, Md.; and Albert Hancock, Suitland, Md.

Joe has four brothers and three sisters and is the son of William Cranford, who stacks ice in the refrigerator at the Consolidated Terminal. Hospital officials last night said they thought Joe will be able to go home "within a short time now."

District Woman Identifies Cvek As Her Attacker

Mrs. Ruth Franco, of Washington, victim of a robber-attacker who posed as a friend of her husband, yesterday identified a photograph of George J. Cvek, 23, of Harrisburg, Pa., who is held in New York City for murder, as her assailant.

Mrs. Franco picked out the suspect's picture from a group of several others when they were shown to her yesterday by Detective Sergts. J. J. Tolson and E. E. Thompson of the Robbery Squad.

Cvek was seized by New York detectives following the strangulation of a Mrs. Catherine Pappas in the Bronx. Cvek admitted attacking Mrs. Franco after his capture.
